VISITS AND VISITORS

Among the many visitors to the Hall of Records there were some whose work or mission here were of especial interest to us. Ian Maclean, Archivist of the Commonwealth Library of Australia, spent a day at the Hall of Records. He was especially interested in Records Management and some evidence of his visit is found in a paper he has published on the subject. Edward M. Riley, Director of Research, and Marcus Whiffen, Architectural Historian, of Colonial Williamsburg, came to study our work in the history of Maryland courthouses with the hope of getting help in their restoration of the Williamsburg courthouse. The President of the Methodist Historical Society of the Baltimore Conference, the Reverend Edwin Schell, came to discuss common problems of recordkeeping. As a result of this visit we were able to procure microfilm copies of the early Methodist records listed elsewhere in this Report.

Arthur Pierce Middleton, distinguished historian of the Chesapeake Bay area, visited Annapolis and the Hall of Records on the occasion of his receiving a well-merited award from Historic Annapolis, Incorporated. Professor J. R. Pole of University College, London, who has
