WE ARE NOW IN OUR 87TH YEAR

87th Year No. 40 — Copyright 1978 by the AFRO-AMERICAN Co. for all material previously printed in the current National Edition. — LATE CITY EDITION — BALTIMORE, MD. DECEMBER 30, 1978 — 30 CENTS

Wade's last Christmas

TWO SPECIAL LADIES FOR '79 — Mrs. Lillie Morgan (L), of the 2200 block of E. Preston Street, will celebrate her 101st birthday on New Year's Day. Mrs. Morgan, originally from North Carolina, came to Baltimore in 1939. She was widowed in 1926. Mrs. Morgan has two grandchildren, eight great - grandchildren, five great - great - grandchildren, eight great - grandchildren. She does not have a special diet — "I eat anything I can get my hands on" — and says God is the secret of longevity. Latonya May, (R) 5 - months, is precisely 100 years and 7 months younger. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis May (Rosetta) of Edmondson Village.

Youth, 19, dead after bar fight

Wade Morris

Wade Morris, a 20 - year - old city employee, spent part of Christmas Day roller skating with some kids near his home in the 1000 block of Calhoun Street

Later he went home, took a bath, "got clean" in a double breasted suit and went out socializing, according to his girl friend.

By 9:30 p.m. Christmas Day, Wad Morris was dead.

Morris, a city Bureau of Operations (sewer department) employee and National Gardsman, was one of five person slain during the Christmas holiday weekend.

He was stabbed to death during an argument at the Club Pisces in the 1100 block N. Calhoun St. just one block from his home.

Funeral services will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Vernon Bailey Funeral Home 1348 N. Calhoun St.

The wake will be from 7 to 7:30 p.m. Friday and the burial will be at 10 a.m. Saturday at Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

Maryland politics

Harry Hughes keeping everyone in the dark

No one has any idea what new faces will be gracing the cabinet table of the new administration of Governor-elect Harry Hughes.

And since the Hughes transition team is not talking there are some top state officials worrying about their jobs.

The day after Harry Hughes won the gubernatorial election he promised that his cabinet would include at least one black and one woman.

That was the last time anyone heard anything public about any of his appointments.

When the AFRO called one of the key black transition officials last week to ask about the appointments, the official responded "I will not respond to rumors. Any questions regarding appointments should be put to Mike Canning."

'I adore Baltimore' replacing 'Baltimore is Best' slogan

Baltimore officials have decided to jump on the promotion bandwagon by sporting stickers that say "I Adore Baltimore."

The Baltimore slogan, suggested by New York's "I Love New York" campaign, is the latest effort by city officials to promote tourism and the Inner Harbor Convention Center.

Allan Charles, a partner in the Baltimore advertising agency of Mathis, Burden and Charles, which has the account to promote the center, said the slogan will be used exclusively across the country to entice groups to hold their conventions in Baltimore.

"We needed something that could spread around the country," Charles said of the slogan that soon will appear on stickers to be handed out at airports and bus and train stations.

He said kits and pamphlets to sell Baltimore will be provided to prospective convention groups before the scheduled opening of the center next year.

Charles said the slogan "Baltimore Is Best," the brainchild of Mayor William D. Schaefer's office, was turned down because it is inappropriate for a national advertising campaign.

"If we go to Houston trying to attract a convention while wearing a 'Baltimore Is Best' button, we'll just antagonize the Houston people," he said. "They doubtless think Houston is best, but they don't object if we adore Baltimore. And they might want to come and see Baltimore."

Mitchell wanted safeguards

Harborplace— no formal regs for minority business, labor

The city government has accepted a contract with the Rouse Company to develop a marketplace at the Inner Harbor, despite the fact that it contains no agreement stating the amount of minority participation.

The Board of Estimates signed the agreement with Rouse Wednesday, Dec. 27, over - ruling appeals made by several black leaders, including Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, D - Md.

Mitchell said Baltimore's contract with the Rouse Co., the developers of Harborplace, should have included provisions for hiring minority contractors and workers.

James Rouse, president of the development firm, however, said that affirmative action plans, now being negotiated, will call for 25 percent minority employment with 10 percent of construction dollars going to minority contractors.

The prime contractor for the work will be Whiting - Turner Construction Co., the same firm now building the city's aquarium.

Mitchell told Mayor Schaefer that he respects Rouse — and the mayor — for their commitment to affirmative action. But he said there is no legal back - up for the good intentions should anything go wrong.

Delegate - elect Howard "Pete" Rawlings, D - 40th, was one of the persons who did not support the Rouse Co. plan for the Marketplace before the election because it did not include a written agreement for minority participation.

But the Rouse Co. had such widespread support from most other black politicians that Rawlings' effort did not make much difference.

—How does 1979 look to you?—

Baltimoreans face new year

..Do Baltimoreans think 1979 will be a better year then 1978?

The AFRO asked several residents for their predictions for the coming year.

Virginia L. Brooks — "This morning I had a very good feeling about 1979. It's going to be a little tight, but it will open up about the spring or summer.

"I don't know about the price of food. But I do hope jobs will become more fruitful for our kids.

"Besides that, I don't believe we have adequate leadership in our community. We don't have the leadership of our pastors. We need someone to respect, to look up to."

Rodney Brooks, graduate student — "There will be increased differences in foreign policy, particularly in the Middle East, Iran, Israel, etc.

"Oil exports will be a focal point as we see now ties with Iranian government which will in the long run effect the world situation.

"The United States — racially, we are 20 years behind. The present affirmative action programs are not valid."

Deany Price, Mane Attraction Salon — "1979 should be a little better than 1978. I hope to make more money.
