New courses offered at school of theology

A health care ministry program and several new courses ranging from situation ethics to Judaism will be added to the curriculum for the 1979 spring semester at St. Mary's Seminary and University.

The complete spring schedule as the university's school of theology will include 22 courses in scripture, church history, systematic theology, and moral theology.

Classes for the spring semester at the School of Theology will begin Jan. 10, 1979 and are open to graduate theology students of all denominations.

St. Mary's Ecumenical Institute is also offering 19 evening courses including philosophy, biblical studies and religious education. Classes at the institute will begin Jan. 24, and are also open to all denominations.

The new health care ministry program, co-sponsored by St. Mary's and the Division of Health Affairs of the Archdiocese of Baltimore, is open to hospital chaplains, pastoral associates, pastoral visitors, and persons with experience in health care ministry.

The program will be held on Tuesday evenings from Jan. 16 to May 8, and will be divided into four units: the theology of health care ministry; healing through prayer and sacraments; and moral theology and medical ethics.

Faculty members from St. Mary's and Loyola College and a chaplain from the Sheppard-Pratt Hospital will teach the program, which is a requirement toward certification by the United States Catholic Conference.

New courses in the school of theology will include "Life of the Spirit for Active People," which will explore how the nature of the times in which people live affects their spiritual lives.

"Situation Ethics and Catholic Responses," another new course, will focus on change and permanence in Christian moral life in relation to the field of situation ethics.

"Human Communications Theory," a course which develops interpersonal communication skills necessary for modern pastoral work, will be offered in the evening for the first time.

"Total Religious Education," an afternoon course, will explore the psychological and spiritual elements necessary for religious education programs for children, youth, and families.

A new offering in the Ecumenical Institute will be "Theology and Literature," which will examine the underlying theological concepts in selected 20th century fiction.

Rabbi Donald Berlin will teach "Introduction to Judaism" this spring, which will be the first course to be offered in the Institute's newly-established department of Judaica.

The course is intended primarily for Christians who desire a solid introduction to Judaism from a historical perspective.

Rev. Thomas Ulshafer of St. Mary's School of Theology will also teach his first course in the Ecumenical Institute this spring, "Human Rights and Modern Social Problems."

The course will use moral theology and President Carter's notion of "human rights" to examine social issues such as health care, abortion, capital punishment, and world hunger.

For more information about spring courses or registration, call the School of Theology or the Ecumenical Institute at (301) 323-3300.

Martin L. King tribute at Enon Baptist Jan. 14

The Board of Christian Education of Enon Baptist Church, Edmondson Avenue and Schroeder Street, will sponsor a tribute in honor of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., on Sunday, Jan. 14, 1:30 p.m. in the church.

The program entitled, "Celebration of a Dream" Part II, will feature the Rev. Wendell Phillips, pastor of Heritage United Church of Christ as guest speaker, followed by audience participation in a question and answer period.

The purpose of the tribute is to take inventory in terms of realizing progress made since Dr. King's death and to determine what has been accomplished.

The program will also include a lively and time art presentation to include many areas of interest that will be presented by the youth and young adults of the church.

The theme for the program is "Martin Luther King, A Light for Tomorrow." Registration fee is $3.50 and will include dinner and all activities.

Any interested person may register at the church, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Sunday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The Rev. Porter W. Phillips is pastor and the Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Payne is pastor emeritus.

Committee members are Mesdames Marion J. Jackson, Helen G. Tucker, Bertha Nixon, Altamease Arnold, Ethel L. Wise, Geraldine Pierce, Ruth E. Saulesbury, Geraldine Smith and Christine Fenderson, chairperson.

Methodist minister for 50 years

Rev. Napoleon Carrington dies

The Rev. Napoleon Bonaparte Carrington, 85-year-old retired Methodist minister died Jan. 3 in Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The family will receive friends Jan. 7, 7 to 8 p.m. at Meropolian United Methodist Church, Lafayette Avenue and Lanvale Street.

Funeral services will be held Jan. 8, 12:00 at the church.

After his retirement in 1969, Rev. Carrington became assistant minister of Meropolian United Methodist Church, where the Rev. Ernest Clark is pastor.

Rev. Clark stated Rev. Carrington was the assistant minister of Meropolian for 10 years. He added, "He served as an advisor, counselor and preacher of the gospel whenever called upon.

"His main duties as he worked with me dealt with visiting the sick and conducting annual confirmation classes. I found him to be a scholar, a man of integrity and a person who loved people and men of all his God.

"The words of this hymn he loved among many others, "My times are in Thy hand. My God I wish them there. My life, my friends, my soul, I leave entirely to thy care."

Rev. Carrington also served as pastor of Union Memorial Methodist Church in Catonsville for 22 years and one time served as pastor of New Markets Circuit Church in New Market, Md., for six years.

He lived in the 2500 block of Harlem Ave., and served as secretary of the Washington Conference of the Methodist Church and was vice president of the Methodist Historical Society of the Baltimore Conference at the time of his death.

He was a 32nd degree Mason, associate dean for the Senior Adult Fellowship and was employed at the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers for 20 years as a supervisor in the pressroom. Rev. Carrington retired in 1955 to spend full time in the ministry.

His weekly sermons appeared in the AFRO for many years and he was a member of numerous boards in the Washington Annual Conference.

Rev. Carrington was also a member of the N.M. Carroll Home for the Aged.

John E. Coulson, administrator of the N.M. Carroll Home on Carrollton Avenue described Rev. Carrington as a "champion."

He stated, "Rev. Carrington was a cooperative and loveable person who loved the home. He will be greatly missed and was an active member of the Board for more than 35 years. Rev. Carrington was the former secretary of the Board of Trustees of the N.M. Carroll Home."

In a 1966 AFRO clipping, Rev. Carrington recalled that under his administration as pastor of Union Memorial Church, the church was cleared of debt, has all of its conference obligations and had more than $15,000 of reserve in the bank.

He is quoted as saying, "I was the pilot, who brought you through the storms of financial inadequacy, past the rocks of despair and the reefs of disorganization and cleared the bar of church. You are now on your own.

"Like the pilot, I have finished my assignment — the time of my departure is at hand."

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alberta A. Carrington; one daughter, Mrs. Beatrice C. Myers; a son, Charles P. Carrington; four grandchildren; two sisters, Dr. Leonora C. Lane of Ohio and Mrs. Beatrice Simms of Washington and one nephew, Leslie Simms.

Robert Jackson was a musician

Robert L. Jackson, a 60-year-old professional musician for more than 40 years, died Dec. 31 at Provident Hospital after a brief illness.

Funeral services for Mr. Jackson, were held Dec. 4 at Gillis Memorial Christian Community Church, 4016 Park Heights Ave.

Mr. Jackson, who was [illegible] "Squeezebox" by his [illegible], lived in the 2700 block of Pitts Ave. He was known as a squeezebox because of his accordion playing and he also specialized on the piano and played the organ.

Mr. Jackson played with Rivers Chambers in the Baltimore area and with other groups throughout the country. He has also made solo appearances.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Cruse Jackson, a daughter, Mrs. Genevieve Jackson, three sons, Van Jackson, Robert E. Jackson Jr., and Howard Cruse; one sister, Mrs. Marie Jackson, and three grandchildren.

Thomas Woolridge practiced medicine

Dr. Thomas J. Woolridge Sr., 98-year-old physician who practiced medicine in Baltimore for 55 years, died Jan. 1 at Presbyterian Hospital in New Mexico.

The family will receive friends Jan. 5 from 11 a.m. to 12:00 at Grace Presbyterian Church, Bonnie Road and Greenspring Avenue. Funeral services will be held following the wake.

Since 1974, when Dr. Woolridge retired, he lived with his daughter, Mrs. Grace Woolridge Harris, a retired school teacher.

Born Jan. 20, 1881 in Blackstone, Va., he was in the first graduating medical class from Shaw University. He interned at Leonard School of Medicine in Richmond, Va.

Dr. Woolridge married the former Edna Humbert of Virginia and moved to Baltimore for the general practice of medicine in 1921. His wife died July 23, 1966.

For many years, Dr. Woolridge was the doctor for the Little Follies Camp which was operated on his Howard County property.

In addition to his daughter Mrs. Harkeu, he is also survived by another daughter, Mrs. Anna Neal; one son, Alfred Woolridge; 10 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Youth need meaningful work

The nation tends to go about its efforts to deal with youth unemployment in the wrong way. Where jobs for youth are available at all, they usually are low - paid, unrewarding and dead - end.

A better way to approach the problem was explored at the fifth annual symposium of the National Network of Runaway and Youth Services Inc., last week, at the National 4 - H Center in Chevy Chase, Md.

The symposium featured a youth employment workshop led by Mike Herron, director of an innovative youth employment program, Hermosa Inc., a Modesto, Calif., youth services program, which conducts [illegible]

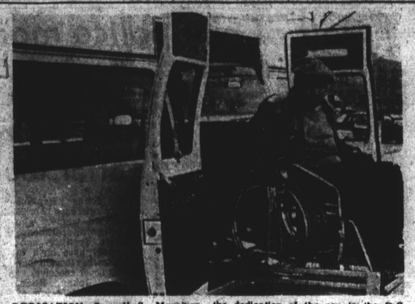
Even in the best of times, youth unemployment is higher than the national average. The rate now is about triple that of adults, with a rate of at least 30 percent for black youth accounting for much of that difference. Overall unemployment stood at 5 percent in October, while the rate for teenagers was 16.3 percent.

Herron considers the national effort to reduce youth unemployment an exercise in unrewarding make - work.

"Contrary to popular opinion, it's not just money these kids are after," Herron maintains. "They'd rather make less money and work with people and feel good about what they're doing" than take a higher - paying job as a stock clerk. Youth need to feel that they are contributing something, he said.

The solution to youth unemployment does not appear to lie in the private sector, which is using fewer people rather than generating additional job opportunities. Herron sees a need to look at public service jobs and make them meaningful, with an emphasis on social services.

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act is defective, he said, in that it carries so many restrictions that its intent cannot be fulfilled, because about half of the funds for youth go to school systems, because prime sponsors often fail to pass the funds on to community - based organizations and because job participation is limited to six months.



DEDICATION—Cornell S. Merchers, president of Speedy Wagon Mid Atlantic Sales, demonstrates the Dodge Maxi Wagon converted by his firm for use by wheel chair patients. The occasion was the dedication of the car to the D.C. Chapter of the American Red Cross. The Rotary Club and other local donors enabled the Red Cross to purchase the wagon.

Retiring salesman's advice: 'Don't give up, don't beg'

By Curtis Austin

"It's the paperman," whispers a young waitress to her friend. George Brown, 77, acknowledges her greeting and with a slow deliberate cadence limps through the GPO (Government Printing Office) cafeteria to a table.

"Everyone knows Uncle George," interjects his niece Mrs. Louise Gilbert. And indeed that seems to be the case. For forty years, George Brown has operated a newsstand outside the GPO. His memories stretch back to a time when newspapers cost two cents and children did,t curse.

But this day was very special to George Brown; he was retiring.

"It's been interesting," he states with a smile. "I've been working steady, but my knees told me to retire. I'm just so thankful to God that he enabled me to go through."

Yet Brown recalls a time when work wasn't steady, when jobs were scarce and he didn't think he'd go through. After spending five months in a hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, Brown came to Washington in 1921. The money he had saved during his tenure in Cleveland was all he had.

"At first I started breaking twenty's, then ten's, then five's, then almost all the money was gone. I did not know what to do. I prayed to the Lord."

"The Lord spoke to me," asserts Brown, "He said, 'Why not try a few newspapers, everybody likes to read.' So I started walking; I went to First and F Sts., N.W., then to North Capitol and G, and finally I came to the GPO building."

Brown bought a hundred newspapers wholesale and sold all he had that day.

Otis G. Cox named media aide at FBI

The director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, William H. Webster, has appointed Otis G. Cox Jr., to serve as the FBI's minority media representative at FBI Headquarters in Washington.

This is a new position created by Director Webster as part of an ongoing program to increase the FBI's sensitivity toward minority groups.

According to Webster, Cox's responsibilities will not only include providing information to minority media outlets concerning the function and activities of the FBI, but also, employment information to the media to attract minorities to the FBI, especially the Agent ranks — a top priority of the Bureau.

Cox, a Special Agent, is a 9 - year veteran of the FBI who began his career as a special agent in Gary, Indiana.

He was subsequently assigned as a supervisor of the civil rights squad in the Boston, Massachusetts office, where he served on numerous committees dealing with civil unrest.

He was later made an instructor at the FBI's training academy in Quantico, Virginia, where he remained until his recent appointment.

A native of Baltimore, Maryland, Cox attended Savannah State College in Savannah, Georgia, receiving his bachelor of science in 1963, and he is looking forward to completing the requirements for his masters degree in public administration, to be awarded by Suffolk University, Boston, Massachusetts, in the fall of 1979.

Cox, 37, is married and has three children.

Park Police seeking dogs for canine unit

The United States Park Police is seeking donations of purebred German Shepherds as potential additions to the force's canine unit.

U.S. Park Police (USPP) Chief Jerry L. Wells said the dogs are needed to supplement the existing canine unit used in police work throughout the Washington - area.

"Candidates" for the unit, established in the late 1950s, should be purebred male German Shepherds, one to two years old and with good dispositions and temperament.

If selected, the dogs will undergo a 20 - week training course that begins Jan. 8. Each dog will be individually assigned to a police officer and be taken home nightly to live at the home of the officer.

Dogs are trained in such work as detection of bombs and explosives, and search and rescue.

Persons interested in donating a dog that meets these requirements should contact Sgt. Bob Fischer, head of the canine unit, at 426-6831, or write: Canine Unit, U.S. Park Police, 1100 Ohio Drive, S.W.

Morgan President feted at banquet

Approximately 300 former students, faculty members and political leaders paid tribute to Morgan State University President Andrew Billingsley recently at an awards banquet at Bolling Air Force Base NCO Club.

Dr. Billingsley, president of Morgan State University, was awarded a plaque from the MANDAT Project by Student Advisory president, Thomas Burton. Accompanying Dr. Billingsley were Mrs. Billingsley and their two daughters, his assistant Mrs. Tajuana Mosby and her spouse.

Mrs. Lena Hunter, a student at MANDAT, accepted a plaque for Mrs. Beryle Williams, the dean of Continuing Education at Morgan, for her help in the continuation of the MANDAT Program in Landover, who was out of the country.

Mrs. Dorothy McClain, a student at MANDAT, and Councilwoman of the Fourth Ward of Cheverly, gave a short talk on the history of MANDAT.

Dr. Daniel Spencer, professor in the Economic Department at Morgan and founder and director of the MANDAT Project, was honored with an appreciation plaque for his years of loyal service to the citizens of Prince George's County.

Mrs. Helen Postell, assistant director to Dr. Spencer was given a certificate of appreciation from the student body for her outstanding service to the school.

Mrs. Postell in turn awarded to the MANDAT instructors a certificate for their services to the project. A special certificate was awarded also to Isiah Williams, education consultant for the MANDAT Project.

John Williams professor of English at MANDAT, gave certificates to MANDAT's first student; Alfred Gilkerson; Rubin Reed, Mrs. Jean Hyatt, Sylvester Vaughn and Frank Blackwell.

Among the dinner guest were State Delegate Decator Trotter, Mayor Henry Arrington, John J. Williams, candidate for Maryland House of Delegates, Prince George's County Councilman Floyd Wilson, and Glen Arden Councilman Rubin Reed.

Dinning also were Mrs. Cora Rice, director of Combined Community in Action and Mrs. Gwen Moore of Iota Phi Lambda Sorority who is also a board member of the Ward Four Council on Education, Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Barbara Pulliam, a MANDAT student was mistress of ceremony with music being provided by Ms. Dee Rucker, Elmer Johnson and Larry Sharpe.

Our man in Cherry Hill

Cherry Hill Grapevine

By William Henderson Jr.

There can be no disputing the fact that weekend recreational facilities are need for children and adults in the Cherry Hill community. Our children are using the streets for recreation space.

The Bureau of Recreation is contending that they do not have money to open the centers on weekends, because of budget cuts.

Although I can sympathize with them, the need still exists, and an alternative solution is in order.

It was my belief that the Bureau of Recreation is an agency that exists mainly to provide recreational facilities to the citizens of Baltimore. Are not the citizens of Cherry Hill a part of the city?

The Bureau of Recreation's intended job will never be completed until they can assure every man, woman and child in the Cherry Hill community free and equal access to decent recreational facilities.

Either the citizens of Cherry Hill enjoy full and complete equality or he or she is subjected to a kind of submission akin to slavery.

The Patapsco Adult Recreation Council recently submitted a proposal to the bureau that may very well provide a means for opening the facilities on weekends.

I will have an update on the progress of the proposal.

WE GET LETTERS

Dear Grapevine:

I am overwhelmed that the AFRO has a Cherry Hill Grapevine. The information is truly rewarding.

The community of Cherry Hill needs a "Black Awakening" about the African bag of celebrating the Holiday Season.

It has not been a joyous season this year because of the economy but, we as black people do have our ancestors tradition to look forward to.

I pray that you will resume your column weekly because the community of Cherry Hill needs the media to put the word out.

C.M.

Attention "Saturday Night Live" Fans

Are you a "Saturday Night Live" fan? Do you appreciate the intended humor of the show?

If yes, then you will certainly appreciate that the Patapsco Entertainment Committee is planning a similar show entitled "Friday Night Live".

Among the sketches performed by this wild and crazy cast are; silly commercials that are so realistically portrayed that is sometimes is very hard to discern what is real, and what is make - believe.

The "Cone Head" family is a favorite of mine, as is Weekend Update; the Frankenstein and Davis show; Night on Freddi Mountain, and others.

If you are a resident of Cherry Hill, and would like to audition for a part in this show, or if you need additional information, please contact Debbie Allen or Janice McCoy at 396 - 1401 after 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

All persons auditioning must be 18 or over.

IN THE COMMUNITY'S INTEREST . . .

The Grapevine, in conjunction with the Patapsco Adult Advisory Council, is planning a series of FACE THE PRESS sessions, to be held in the Cherry Hill community.

These sessions will consist of community leaders, who will be called upon to answer questions by various members of the PRESS.

This session will give community members a chance to become familiar with and ask questions of their leaders.

Dates, times and locations of the sessions will appear in future columns.
