THE LIVING CHURCH

St. James' celebrates 155th year

"The privilege of celebrating the 155th year of the existence of Saint James as a parish in the Diocese of Maryland is ours.

"We are the 'now' congregation who with our clergy walk in the footpaths of many who have gone before us. We are grateful for this privilege and we thank our God and our predecessors.

"We now become conscious of our responsibility to the days to come. We know that there will be difficult tasks ahead and heavy loads to life, but by God's power, love and guidance and by the infusion into us of his holy spirit, we shall move on into the future . . ."

The above statement was made by Father Donald O. Wilson, pastor of St. James Episcopal Church, Lafayette and Arlington Ave., on the occasion of the church's 155th anniversary.

The anniversary banquet, was on June 15 at Blue Crest North, had Bishop Quintin Primo of Chicago as main speaker.

St. James has a rich history. The Rev. William Levington was the first priest to serve as its pastor. Succeeding Re.v. Levington were several men who endured hardships and faced challenges.

The Rev. George Freeman Bragg Jr., guided the destiny of St. James Church for 49 years from 1891 to his death March 12, 1940. Under his pastorate at St. James at least six young men were launched on successful careers as Episcopal ministers.

They were: The Reverends Arnold M. Malone, Cornelius R. Dawson, Gustave H. Caution, Edmund Trotman, David H. Croll and Tollie L. Caution. Six months after the death of Rev. Bragg, the vestry called to the rectorship the Rev. Cedric Earl Mills. He served the parish for 22 years until his consecration as bishop in 1963.

Under the direction of Bishop Mills, St. James became one of the outstanding churches in the Diocese of Maryland.

In 1963 the rectorship changed. The Rev. Donald O. Wilson was called and in September he was installed as rector. Father Wilson came at a time of great opportunity.

The idea for housing for the elderly was alive. With concerted effort, the project was begun and four years later was an accomplished fact. Today, over 200 residents enjoy happy and secure lives in the St. James Terrace Apartment.

The parish continues to move into the future. Recently, under the leadership of dedicated lay persons, much has been done. All stained glass windows have been repaired, the sanctuary has been renovated and re - designed in memory of Elmer A. Burgess; a Christus Rex hangs on a rood in memory of Robert Young Sr., a Tabernacle has been placed on the side altar and a new ciborium in memory of Elaine Nickens.

Also, a new window in memory of David A. Shockly and the vestibule has been redecorated in memory of Thomas R. Baden. St. James Chuch continues in community outreach and services.

The church is in a third party contract with the Urban Services Agency promoting services to teenagers. Six centers throughout the city operate to bring training and culture to this age group by finding them jobs.

Jehovah's Witnesses at Capital Center

A four - day "Living Hope" district convention of Jehovah's Witnesses opened Thursday at the Capital Center, Landover Md., and will run through Sunday, June 24.

Convention manager Dallas F. Wallace, said some 15,000 persons from District 5 are attending the meeting, representatives coming from 45 congregations in Washington, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The opening address on "Benefiting From This 'Living Hope' Assembly," was delivered by Gerald J. Reilly and later in the day, the keynote address was delivered by R. E. Walls of Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject was "Creation's Hope — Eagerly Awaiting Its Realization."

Foretelling an impending "great tribulation" looming before the world, Walls said that in the present day situation . . . "when the world is paralyzed with fear," Jehovah's Witnesses "do not fear what worldly people fear."

A century of progress by the religion (1879 - 1979) was outlined to delegates and a centennial edition of Watchtower, the JW official magazine, was released to the convention.
