The roots of the clan were revealed by Ida Mae Claiborne Kelsie, daughter of one of the patriarchs, and program coordinator, who also did the organizing of all of the families of the clan.

Gifts were presented to the oldest and the youngest present. The oldest was Thomas Claiborne Rankin of Pennsylvania and the youngest was Brandi L. Pearson, 6 weeks - old.

Family members who had come from the greatest distance for the reunion were Staff Sgt. and Mrs. Charles W. Pearson and family from Arizona, who are on their way to the Netherlands for four years of duty for the sergeant in the Air Force.

There was much fun had by all following the program during which the members of the families of the clan enjoyed great fellowship.

On Sunday, July 29, some of the family worshipped with Mrs. Kelsie at Providence Baptist Church where the Rev. Marcus Wood is pastor.

After church family members met at the home of Mrs. Kelsie for a lovely dinner at which the family felt much joy at having the Rev. Wood and Mrs. Wood join them.

Those sisters and brothers and their families attending from out - of - town were: Thomas Claiborne and family from Pittsburg, Pa.; Mrs. Hattie Travis and family of Newark, N.J.; Mrs. Ruby Pearson and family of Allston, Ga.; Mrs. Catherine Debridge and family of Brooklyn, N.Y.;

Also, Harry, Joseph and Fred Claiborne and families from Emporia and Chesapeake, Va.; James Claiborne and family of College Park, Md.; Clarence and Rufus Claiborne and families of Baltimore.

Many thanks were extended to Mrs. Kelsie for a job well done. The theme for the occasion was "One generation shall praise the work to another."

300 attend Shelton family reunion

Six generations at the Shelton family, originally of South Carolina, gathered at the Holiday Inn Downtown for their first reunion on Saturday, July 28.

Around 300 family members and friends, with all members being direct descendants of Andrew and Sylvia Shelton of South Carolina, enjoyed a delicious dinner of ham, roast beef, turkey, fruit salad compote, assorted salads, breads, cheeses, gelatin molds, assorted vegetables, desserts and beverages. Grace was offered by Eunice Boyd, a granddaughter of the patriarch.

Guests also witnessed a program during which the roots of the family were brought out.

Minutes of ceremonies was Felicia Johnson, great - great - great - great - granddaughter of the patriarch.

Opening song was "Let Every Voice and Sing. Scripture was read by Ida Mae Suber, a family friend and prayer was offered by James Shelton Sr., great grandson of the patriarch.

Words of welcome were given by Anthony Thompson Jr., great - great - grandson of the patriarch.

A duet was done by Gregory Shelton, a great - great - grandson and Tamma Jones, a family friend.

The history of the Shelton clan was given by Minnie Richardson, great - granddaughter of the patriarch, and the introduction of the families was done by Mary Washington, family friend.

Special highlight of the evening was the presentation of a jewelled bronze plaque with the jewels representing the birthstones of the family members. This presentation was done by John Johnson Jr., great - great - great - great grandson of the patriarch, Andrew Shelton.

Recognition of the oldest family members was given by Robert W. Shelton, great - grandson of the patriarch. The oldest family member present was Mrs. Cleora Shelton Foster, age 82. Youngest was Jaquay Johnson, age 1.

Benediction was offered by S. T. Thompson Sr., after thanks were expressed to all who helped to make the reunion a success, and special thanks were given to Eunice Boyd, Lem Coleman, Florence Shelton, Eunice Thompson and Mary Washington for their contribution to the family history and to Winnie Shelton Owens for clerical work on the program.

Shelton family members have led and are still leading fruitful and productive lives.

Their professions and vocations include: farmers, steel workers, factory workers, carpenters, nurses, secretaries, sales persons, store window designers, insurance agents, barbers, teachers, railroad foreman, school principals, ministers, government employees, drug researchers, armed forces officers, dentists and entrepreneurs.

Mary Shelton Washington, one of those attending, is a retired school principal of Columbia, S.C.

Epicureans

The Columbia, Md. Chapter of National Epicureans Inc. brought their club year to a close during the past weekend with a fun - filled patio party as the guests of the charming couple, Madelyn and Earl Woods.

The "Eat, drink and be merry" philosophy of this group was in evidence everywhere - from the exotic appetizers, the elegant buffet of Oriental and barbecued chicken, gourmet salads and dishes, to the exquisite meringue cups filled with fresh fruits for dessert.

Disco dancing for the energetic and light conversation for others were possible under the stars on the spacious deck decorated with soft lights and hanging baskets.

Eppse and Eppies seen about were Zola Boone, John and Dorothy Carr, John and Gail Clark, James and Jeanne Cooper, Ernest Colvin, Eppie Shirley and son are vacationing in Africa), Clifton and Ruth Felton, Earl and Gloria Hagan, Ted and Fannie Moran, Charles and Suzanne Price, James and Iola Smith and George and Ada Woodland, our newly elected President.

Ms. Vines named vice chairman of Md. Commission for Women

Congratulations and best wishes to Esther Vines, who was appointed by Gov. Harry Hughes as vice chairman of the Maryland Commission for Women.

The Commission is a statutory state agency which identifies problems, defines issues and recommends policies and solutions to change practices which prevent the full participation of women in today's society.

Ms. Vines has been the executive director of the Neighborhood Family Planning Center Inc., 1515 E. North Ave., Baltimore, since 1975.

As executive director she is responsible for program administration and planning (including budget preparation and accountability) program implementation, evaluation, and over - all center operations. She supervises full and part - time staff.

The Neighborhood Family Planning Center includes medical services, a referral and follow - up component, adolescent services and a community education - information component.

Prior to becoming the chief of the Family Planning Center Ms. Vines was coordinator of all Model Cities health programs, working closely with federal, state and local personnel.

She was also a medical social work supervisor at the Maternity and Infant Care Center Project 50), a caseworker for four years, supervisor of social services department at Maryland Children's Center and a caseworker at Baltimore City Department of Public Welfare.

She also taught biology in Unity High School in Statesville, N.C. where she finished high school.

Ms. Vines received her bachelor's degree from Morgan State University and her master's degree at Howard University school of social work.

She is a member of St. John Baptist Church and a member of the board of managers. She resides at Harvestmoon Lane with her husband Harold C. Vines.

Only child families

The Only Child Family, a self - help organization for the only child and parents of only children has been established in Columbia. The OCF organization was founded by Pamela Johnson, a Baltimore resident, and Dr. Eugene Williams.

Persons interested in knowing more about the organization or becoming members should send a letter explaining why they want to join to Dr. Williams, 5417 Farmpond Lane, Columbia, Md. 21045 or call (301) 997 - 1609 or (202) 347 - 4700.

Congratulations 11 pt No. 28

Congratulations are in order for the Rev. John W. Holland, pastor of the Full Gospel Tabernacle in Cooksville, Howard County to a new ethics commission that will oversee the conduct of state officials.
