White House snafu? OK says Brock

In what amounts to an about face, Lou Brock will visit with President Carter at the White House Monday.

The brilliant St. Louis Cardinals outfielder thus took a posture of forgiveness for what many interpreted as a slight when White House sources made a big thing of Carl Yastrzemski's 3,000 hits after minimizing Brock's similar feat a month earlier.

Boston Red Sox slugger Yastrezemski is scheduled for an Oct. 6 audience at the Executive Mansion, and word was leaked of Carter's gesture in weekend papers.

Brock did not conceal his hurt, and reportedly said he would not go to Washington now, if invited.

He changed his mind Monday when the White House explained that the apparent slighting of the black star was due to "a breakdown in communications."

The controversy over the alleged duble standard began when it was publicized that President Carter had invited Yaz and the latter appeared at the White House last Monday.

Brock's reaction triggered a series of explanations from White House officials.

First, it was declared that the Yaz party was an informal one thrown by Massachusetts members of congress.

Secondly, it was asserted that the whole thing was the result of the "communications problem."

Foresters won!

Incorrect editing in Tuesday's AFRO credited Franklin High with a 12 - 6 victory over Forest Park in last week's game between the two schools.

The result was just the reverse, Forest Park being the winner.

Bacardi dark. It tastes good mixed because it tastes good unmixed.

Next time you're about to mix your favorite Bacardi rum drink, try this new one. Just splash Bacardi dark rum over ice. Swirl it a bit. Then sip it before you mix it: That way, you'll taste Bacardi dark as it really is. Smooth, light-tasting. Surprisingly dry. The new drink? Bacardi and Ice.

BACARDI, rum. The super sip. Made in Puerto Rico.

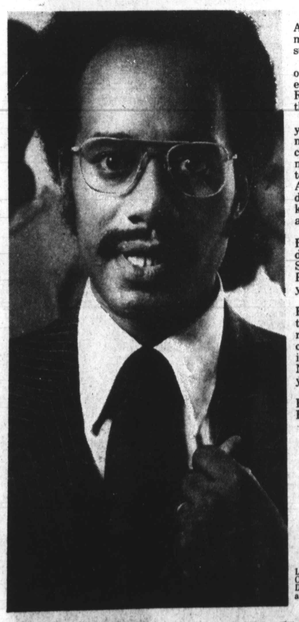
"How I doubled my chances for success."



"In college, I took advantage of the Army ROTC program. And along with my major, it really prepared me for success.

Your son or daughter can double his or her own chances of success, too. By enrolling in one of the many Army ROTC programs on campuses across the nation.

Army ROTC training prepares a young person for leadership and management responsibilities. It's a chance to lead people as well as manage money and equipment. A way to gain valuable skills and knowledge. A place to develop self-confidence and decision-making abilities, too. It's the kind of training a young person can use anywhere.

But there are also other ways ROTC can double your son or daughter's chances for success. Scholarship opportunities, for instance. Plus financial assistance up to $1,000 a year.

The final reward of taking Army ROTC is graduation day. Because on that day, your son or daughter will receive both a college degree and a commission in today's Army, which includes the Army Reserve and National Guard. And that's something you both can be proud of. I sure was."

For more information, write Army ROTC, P.O. Box 7000, Department R-704, Larchmont, New York 10538.

Carver X-country coach unexcited about move-up

By Samuel Davis

Moving up to a higher conference and winning may be second only to a lower conference title for a high school coach.

But, here is one coach who isn't excited about the step upward.

Walter Cole, who tutors cross - country at Carver, managed to lead his teams to two straight championships in 1977 -78, and each season, the team went unbeaten.

Those two championships were accomplished in "B" conference. This season the Carver harriers have been moved up to "A" conference.

"B" conference is glad to get rid of us, and the "A" schools want to prove we're top material," Cole said.

The team lost its one - two - three punch of William Pridgen, Roderick Roberts and Randy Howell, and others who made Carver go. Roberts and Howell are currently attending Fayetteville and Catonsville Colleges, respectively, on track scholarships.

"I hate to go up with all my big guns gone," the coach said in a desperate tone. "Technically, I have to call this a rebuilding season."

Cole lost his three aces but he did get number four back.

Keith Johnson, a solid runner who will move to the number one spot unless one of the new candidates is really outstanding, will be the man around whom Cole will build his offense.

Johnson already has helped the newcomers develop the spirit that helps in almost every sport. Around 5 p.m., each day, heading down Pulaski Street, the team returns from practice chanting "Carver."

"One of the brightest spots this year is their spirit," Cole explained.

"That's about 70 percent of the deal."

Glenn Doughty echoes earlier complaints by Ray Chester

Glenn Doughty lament a familiar Colt ditty

By Sam Lacy

Raymond Chester, Freddie Scott, Lydell Mitchell.

Now it is Glenn Doughty.

Baltimore football fans might roll those names off their tongues and then take a look at the record of their NFL Colts. Inevitably, they'll wonder whether there isn't justification for the suspicion that it's business as usual at Memorial Stadium.

Doughty, last weekend, staged a one - man, two - day protest over his subtle downgrading by Colt coach Ted Marchibroda and his "system."

That last word is used here with reservations, since the AFRO along with other pressbox habitues find it difficult to discern anything systematic about the Marchibroda offense.

Except for running backs charging the middle and quarterbacks throwing frantically to wide receivers, there seems little to recognize in the concept of a Baltimore attack.

It is because the passing game has continued to overlook him that Doughty bolted the team as it returned from the loss in Cleveland last weekend.

Doughty charged that he is "always open" but the throws constantly go to somebody else. The 7 - year veteran hotly rejected his role as "nothing but a decoy."

That the "system" is - effectively ignoring Doughty (despite the cost) is obvious in the Colts' latest statistics.

No. 35, generally recognized as one of the most hard - nosed receivers in the league, has but two catches to his credit in three games.

Roger Carr, playing in only one contest, had eight receptions.

Tight ends Mack Alston and rookie Reese Mc Call have only one each.

Glenn's complaint is identical to that lodged by Raymond Chester two years ago. Only Chester went a bit further and outwardly asserted that an attitude of racism influenced the "look - away" by quarterback Bert Jones, and the tight - end bypass in the Marchibroda game plans.

Even before Chester's beef, another black wide receiver, Freddie Scott, had uttered similar complaints. Scott, however, could not be as outspoken because he was not a starter.

Freddie is a starter now, though, being first - string with the Detroit Lions.

And in the latest NFL statistics, Chester, now an Oakland Raider, leads the league in receptions. He had seven against the San Diego Chargers Sept. 9.

San Diego, incidentally, is the team to which Mitchell was chased when Colts owner Robert Irsay show down an agreement made by his top assistants to give Lydell a $25,000 boost in pay.

Ironically, it is the same Irsay who gave Toni Linhart an on - the - spot $10,000 increase after he missed three field goals last Sunday in Cleveland.

Oldtown Midget league summary

Lonnie Smith, completing 95 percent of his passes, combined with a strong defensive effort by his teammates to lead Johnston Square over Guilford, 32 - 6.

A ferocious goal - line stand in the first quarter so frustrated Madison Square that Lafayette, led by the running of Rodney Price, romped to a 22 -0 victory.

A gruelling defensive battle culminated in an 8 - 0decision for Flagg House over Latrobe in their battle. A decision was not reached until the winners succeeded in mounting a series of fourth - quarter sweeps.

Cornelius Jones and Keith Curtis collaborated for the three touchdowns that gave Somerset an 18 - 8 triumph over Greenmount.

O's stymied in Detroit, seek hometown clinch

Thwarted in Detroit, the Orioles return to Memorial Stadium tonight (Friday) bent on wrapping up the American League Eastern Division title for presentation to their hometown fans.

The notion that the Birds would close out the pursuing (?) Milwaukee Brewers was dispelled when the Tigers grabbed two of the first three midweek games — games in which Earl Weaver's troops could manage only one run in 18 innings.

They lost the second and third games by scores of 2 -1 and 5 - 0, after having won the opener, 2 - 1.

That means in the three days and 27 innings involved, the bats of the Baltimores produced but four runs.

To skeptics, that might appear the O's were purposely waiting for their favorite audience of 33rd Street.

If that is so, the time has arrived. The chance is here.

The Birds have five games in which to do it at the stadium.

Three of these are upcoming with Cleveland tonight (Friday), tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon. Then the Tigers arrive Tuesday night for the two closing games of the season . . .

SAM LACY.
