SIGMAS

In comparison he stated: "Too many of us are unwilling to endure discomfiture, to sacrifice, to endure pain for the greater good of black people. We make excuses."

Congressman Mitchell stated that as a result of our pathy the power structure is using us as 'pawns on a chessboard.'

He reminded the group that we don't have a single black in a citywide office in a city which is predominantly black.

He stated further that we stand to lose gains and cited the recent attempt by the University of Md. to take over Morgan State University as part of a game plan to destroy every black institution in order to destroy black leaders.

He admonished the audience to do something about it monewise and otherwise, and "When it becomes necessary, to give of time, body and spirit."

He charged the fraternity to reach out to the imprisoned and others in need.

He spoke of the 80's as an era of apparent grimness, with inflation, unemployment and the attempts to destroy black institutions and businesses.

In spite of this he said: "We should look forward to the 90s as a period of challenge." He gave a charge to us to make a commitment to the continued struggle to seize opportunities, to gain economic and political power and guarantee to the next generation that we will achieve these things for them.

In conclusion he stated: "I offer you a sense of struggle — to achieve final liberation — the spirit to struggle, the power to prevail.

Following his rousing address the audience gave the congressman a standing ovation and an Achievement Award plaque was presented to him by Brother Newton.

In dedicating the plaque Brother Newton spoke of Parren as a man who is dedicated to lifting his brothers — a man for all seasons.

A special highlight of the luncheon was the presentation of special awards.

The Bigger and Better Business Award went to William and Roberta March, owners of the March Funeral Home. The Marches were cited for their service to humanity and for building their business to the point where it is one of the largest funeral operations in the United States.

The Social Action Award, presented by Brother Elijah Williams, secretary, Epsilon Nu Sigma chapter, went to Attorney Anthony W. Robinson for his diligence as an attorney in working for social change in the community.

Dr. Brother George Crawford presented the Education Award to Sigma Brother Gilbert A. Daley for using the black theatre to educate, for his excellence as a playwright and an educator, for establishing the first Greek Letter organization at Coppin and his service as the Sigma's director of Education.

All honorees graciously accepted their awards and acknowledged the support of their families as motivating and sustaining forces in their lives of achievement.

Other special guests were Brother Deaver Smith, director of Bigger and Better Business for Sigma and Ms. Lorraine Hayes. Prior to the closing remarks by Brother Cheatham, Mrs. Artis sang 'He's Got the Whole World in His Hand.'

All the Sigmas present sang their hymn — 'Our Cause Speeds On.'

Short excerpts from the songs of other fraternities and sororities were done while those belonging to them stood to be recognized. This added a humorous touch to the occasion.

CONGRESSMAN PARREN J. MITCHELL (L) displays Achievement Award Plaque presented to him at the Phi Beta Sigma's Founders' Day Luncheon as Brother Marvin Cheatham, president, Epsilon Nu Chapter, applauds.

Delta Founders' Day Luncheon

This award was established to perpetuate the memory of Baltimore's beloved National Delta Founder, Vashti T. Murphy, who was the mother of Delta Sorors Ida Peters and Bettye Moss.

Recipients of the Annual Founders' Day Awards, 1980 were Sorors Barbara Davis, Marian Finney, Delores Jessup, Mary K. Poole and Maggie Wiggins.

These awards are presented to Deltas who have exemplified by their continuous and devoted service, the goals and ideals of Delta's 22 founders.

They were uniquely presented in that little poems which told of the honorees' backgrounds, accomplishments and service were read prior to the presentation of their awards.

The poems were composed and read by Soror Dorothy Barrick.

The Delta Chorale, which had sung prior to lunch, did 'Feelings', 'Evergreen' and 'I'd Like to Teach the World to Sing' under the direction of Soror Lousonia Jefferson. Guest flutist, who played delightfully from time to time throughout the program, was the Rev. Bernard Keels, pastor, St. Marks United Methodist Church.

Introduction of the panelists was by Soror Alice Jones Shelton, co-chairperson, Founders' Day Committee.

The Panel Discussion got underway, with Attorney William H. Murphy Jr., moderating. Soror Georgia L. Diggins was timekeeper.

Panelists were Judge Robert M. Bell, judge, Supreme Bench of Baltimore; Dr. James Fenimore Cooper, child psychiatrist; Soror Thelma T. Daley, supervisor, Guidance and Career Education, Baltimore County Public Schools and past National President Delta Sigma Theta, Inc.; Soror Elise Jude Mason, assistant City Solicitor, Baltimore City; the Rev. Porter W. Phillips, Jr., pastor Enon Baptist Church; and Soror Vivian Edwards Washington, consultant - Office of Adolescent

Group to launch black world pageant

The Miss Black World Beauty Pageant, the world's first international beauty pageant for the black and third world countries, will take place in August, as young women from all over the world convene in Las Vegas, Nev., at the world famous Dune's Hotel and Country Club to compete in one of the most prestigious beauty titles in the world.

Hailed as the pioneer of pageantry because of the extensive involvement by South American, Caribbean, and African nations, s well as European and North American countries, the pageant will direct its attention to the historic ethnic and cultural heritage of the sponsoring nations, as well as beauty and talent of the contestants, who will range in age from 17-26.

"The need for a cultural experience on an international level reflecting black standards of beauty in its judging criteria is evident in this program," says Clarence A. Hunt Jr., the pageant's director.

Currently contact is being made with individuals, organizations and governments throughout the world for participation in the national and international segments of the operation.

"The void in the traditional beauty pageant organizations is now being filled by this project and the potential to elevate the increased cultural awareness of black and third world people is tremendously enhanced through the Miss Black World Program," Hunt said.

In addition to Hunt the pageant's operating executives are Fred Dukes, Byron Lewis and the staff includes Al Davis, Gretchen Wortham, Dr. Charles Cluka, African liaison; Luther Benjamin of the Virgin Islands, Caribbean liaison and Margarita Henry, South American liaison.

Information about the pageant can be obtained by contacting Miss Black World, International Headquarters, 1330 Broadway, Suite 917, UCB Building, Oakland, Calif.

African musicians to tour U.S.

Seven leading musicians from Mali, Zaire and Zambia will arrive in the U.S. in February to participate in a tour sponsored by the African-American Institute's African Performing Artists Program.

The artists slated to perform are: balafonist Keletigui Diabate and lutist Bourama Soumaoro from Mali; guitarist-vocalist Anderson Banda and vocalist James Zuku from Zambia; and pianist-guitarist-vocalist Lema-A-Nsi, guitarist Kalonga Mutela and drummer Kiandinga Pezo from Zaire.

The tour will include concert and workshop appearances in Chicago, Minneapolis, San Francisco, San Antonio, Austin, New Orleans, Jackson, Memphis, New York City and the District.

The African-American Institute has been the major U.S. based private organization working to promote African development and strengthen African-American understanding.

CETA booklet available

WASHINGTON

A booklet to assist individuals and organizations in applying for funds under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) has been updated by the Women's Bureau.

The publication tellshow to apply for monies from a prime sponsor and points out additional sources, such as governors' discretionary funds.

The application process is described in seven steps that range from finding out who the prime sponsor is to finding out about other CETA possibilities.

The guide provides a summary of titles under the amended CETA of 1978, and includes a list of CETA contacts in each state, sources of data useful in preparing proposals to secure funding, and a glossary of terms commonly used in CETA.

Noting that a number of new provisions will benefit women particularly, Women's Bureau Director Alexis M. Herman emphasized the need for women to be knowledgeable about the CETA system and to participate in it.
