THE LIVING CHURCH

Parishioners brave cold for dedication service

"It was strictly a faith venture. We prayed 30 days before we made the decision to move. It has been a long and exciting journey."

The Rev. Marcus G. Wood, pastor of Providence Baptist Church made the above statement. He was speaking of the dedication services held Feb. 17, on the land at Pennsylvania and Lafayette Avenues, where the new $1 million church is being built.

Construction has started and is expected to be completed within 10 months. The cold weather did not stop nearly 500 people from attending dedication services last Sunday.

"People were wrapped in coats and stood around the three barrels of fire," said Rev. Wood

The new Providence Baptist Church will be the first solar heated church in this area. Since October 1976, members of Providence have been sharing facilities with First Baptist Church, 4200 Liberty Heights Ave., where the Rev. Maurice Holder is pastor.

Rev. Wood said the purpose of last Sunday's service was to "thank God for the land." Community leaders, friends and ministers participated in the service.

Speaking of the new location of the church, Rev. Wood stated, "We wanted to stay in the inner city and the city suggested the spot." The architect for the church said the $90,000 solar heating system for the church will prove to be increasingly economical for the members as years go by.

The main sanctuary will seat 500 persons and there will also be a Sunday school area and offices. Nearly 70 percent of the church is designed for solar heat.

The solar heating system is made by the Solaron Company of Denver and uses a series of solar panels that collect heat from the sun. The heat will be blown through pipes to a rock box.

Providence Baptist was organized on April 4, 1928 under the leadership of Dr. David E. Over along with 243 members. Rev. Wood is the third pastor of Providence. During the time he has served as pastor, the church has marched boldly in faith. He has traveled to Guyana, South America and in the rural areas of Haiti and a month long visit to Africa.

The church was faced with structural problems in 1976 and Rev. Wood has been able to lead the congregation in a new building program. The founding pastor of Providence, Rev. Dr. Over laid the sturdy foundation upon which Providence Baptist is built.

HARMONIZING IN THE COLD — Choir members of Providence Baptist Church participated in the Sunday services on the corner of Pennsylvania and Lafayette Aves. The new church will be the first solar heated church in this area.

THE REV. ARTHUR J. PAYNE, pastor emeritus of Enon Baptist Church, is shown with the Rev. Marcus G. Wood, pastor of Providence Baptist Church at the special services held Feb. 17.

PROVIDENCE BAPTIST members are shown standing on the grounds of their new church home that is now being built at Pennsylvania and Lafayette Avenues. More than 400 members and friends attended the service.

Baptist ministers active in community

Rev. Alfred C. D. Vaughn

The Baltimore Baptist Clergy In Action is a group of ordained ministers that are active in the community and concerned about major problems in the city.

The Rev. Alfred C. D. Vaughn, pastor of Grace Memorial Baptist Church at Eden and Chase Streets is the founder and president of the four year old organization.

The members have been responsible for supplying emergency food, oil and clothing to citizens in the community. "We try to stay on top of all major problems," said Rev. Vaughn.

The ministers have also given scholarships to students at Virginia Union, Howard University, Shaw University and the Virginia Seminary. Dr. John L. Crew, superintendent of public schools was the speaker at their Feb. 19 meeting held at New Psalmist Baptist Church, Cathedral and Franklin Streets, where the Rev. Walter Thomas is pastor.

Dr. Crew told the ministers the disciplinary rate is down 25 per cent and attendance is up in the school. He also stated the school system is in need of more money. However, speaking of Jesse Jackson who was recently in Baltimore, Dr. Crew stated the school system contributed $3,000 for Frev. Jackson to bring his Push Excel program to the students of Baltimore City and Baltimore County. This was a joint effort between the Baltimore public schools, WJZ-TV and the city of Baltimore.

Speaking of Rev. Jackson, Rev. Vaughn stated, "I do not have any problems with Rev. Jackson but we always act like anything good has to come from outside Baltimore. We certainly ought to promote our own and develop our skills here in Baltimore. These youngsters need role models who are living here in our city and there are plenty of them. However, we don't promote them. Rev. Jackson came to Baltimore when Chicago could not pay their school teachers. Can we afford to have games played on our children?"

At the March 4 meeting of the Baptist Clergy In Action, the Rev. Dr. James Moore will lecture on "Effective Resources for Sermon Building."

PRESIDENT — The Rev. William Calhoun, pastor of Trinity Baptist Church is president of the State Progressive Baptist Convention of Maryland. Recently, at the national session of the convention it was adopted in the budget to give Provident Hospital $10,000 for the development campaign and support of the chaplaincy program.

Donated to Bishop

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — The National Baptist Convention, Inc. has voted to dnote $150,000 to Bishop College, a small, black institution in Texas whose financial difficulties have kept it on the brink of extinction in recent years.

The donation agreed upon at the annual mid-winter board of directors meeting here for the Baptist organization, will go to Bishop in three donations of $50,000 each over three years.

The donation was hailed as "as a gift from God" by Bishop board members Dr. C.A.W. Clark of Dallas; Dr. Oscar Chappelle of Tusla and Dr. Henry Gregory of Washington, D.C.

A statement issued by the National Baptist Convention's board of directors says that the donation showed their concern for other black educational institutions and for the future of young blacks.

Bishop, located in Dallas, is a church-affiliated college. Founded in 1881 the college had fallen on hard financial times in recent years. Only last year it averted a funding cutoff from the United Methodist Church.

Grimes memorial planned at N. C. A&T

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The board of trustees of North Carolina A&T State University has approved a student request to place a 6-foot monument in front of the school's student union in memory of Willie Grimes, an A&T student killed on campus in 1969 during a confrontation with police and national guardsmen.

In addition, the board passed a $192 increase in student fees during its February meeting.

Board members and Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, chancellor of the university, cited spiraling fuel and labor costs as the reason for the fee increase.

Fees for student activities will increase from $70 to $87; athletic fees from $40 to $55; book rental fees from $46 to $56; food will increase from $580 to $680 and housing increases from $550 to $600. The total expenses for university students living on campus will be $2,093.50; out-of-state students who live on campus will be charged $3,798.50.

There is no increase in tuition.

Classes suspended at Seminary

LYNCHBURG, Va. — Classes at Virginia Seminary and College have been suspended for two weeks after a federal investigation of alleged misuse of government student loan funds, school officials said early this week.

President M.C. Southerland said classes were cancelled for 244 students because of "circumstance beyond our control."

But M.F. Robinson, the chairman of VSC's board of trustees, said from his Mobile, Ala., home the action followed a freeze on $40,000 in school assets by an unidentified Lynchburg bank.

Robinson also said the board would meet at the school this week to "assess the situation" at the Baptist-affiliated institution.

In a surprise raid last Wednesday, Feb. 13, FBI agents and inspectors from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare seized school records.

And on Friday, U.S. District Judge James Turk issued a temporary restraining order cutting off the school's federal aid. Turk sealed the order at the request of HEW and government attorneys.

Southerland said classes at the school which is alleged to have misused an undetermined amount of federal student loan money, will resume March 1.

He added that the closing will not affect this year's graduation, which is scheduled for May. Southerland said students will make up classes at a future date.

Last Saturday, the Rev. William M. Brown, chairman of the school's board of managers, while warning that the school might have to close its doors, said about $200,000 of the institution's $500,000 budget comes from federal sources.

The school became a college and seminary in 1972 primarily to obtain federal funds. While the college offers a two-year undergraduate program, the seminary offers bachelors' and masters' degrees in divinity.

A hearing has been scheduled for Feb. 25 in Turk's court on continued use of federal funds at the school.

The institution has received about $200,000 a year since 1972 under four federal student loan programs, according to an affidavit filed in the request for a federal search warrant that led to the seizure of the records.

Reports have indicated that Southerland and Janice Moore, a financial aid officer at the school, were under investigation.

Both of them have refused to comment on the seizure of the records.

The allegations of fund misuse surfaced during an investigation of a fire at the college last fall.

Southerland has been fired by the school's board, but a controversy has arisen over the effective date.

One member, the Rev. W. D. Tyree, said the board voted in October to fire Southerland as of Jan. 1, but another member, the Rev. William M. Brown, said Southerland would remain in the post until May, partly because a successor had not been found.

Tyree said the search committee looking for a new president never met and that Brown took it upon himself to "reappoint" Southerland.

Last July, Southerland was convicted of obstruction of justice in connection with an apparent attempt to draw up a phony list of the board members.

Tyree, among others, testified that Southerland kicked off the board those who disagreed with him and ran the school with no checks on his power.

The trial in Richmond Circuit Court centered around whether a man listed by Southerland as the treasurer of the corporation was indeed the treasurer.

Grays shortstop 'Jelly' Jackson

GUEST SPEAKER — Bishop Harrison J. Bryant will be the 11 a.m. speaker for Men's Day Sunday, Feb. 24 at John Wesley AME Zion Church. The Rev. Neal J. Gilchrist is pastor.

Norman (Jelly) Jackson, 67, former shortstop for the old Washington Homestead Grays championship baseball team here, and retired D.C. sanitation worker, died Wednesday, Feb. 13, at Georgetown University Hospital following a stroke.

Jackson played for the Grays during the early 30's when the team dominated the old black National League. Often referred to as the scourge of the league, the Grays won nine straight championships between 1937, when they moved to Washington, and 1945. The team attracted more than 26,000 fans at the Old Griffith Stadium, which is now the site of the Howard University Hospital.

Originally from Homestead, Pa., near Pittsburgh, the Grays played before good crowds at Griffith Stadium, when the Washington Senators were idle or out of town. In a 1943 contest with the old Kansas City Monarchs, the team drew 26,601 fans.

During 1972, two of Jackson's teammates, catcher Josh Gibson and first baseman Walter (Buck) Leonard, known as the Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig of the black leagues, were elected to baseball's Hall of Fame.

Jackson, a native Washingtonian, attended Armstrong High School. He had worked for the D.C. Department of Sanitary Engineering for about 20 years, retiring in 1974.

Survivors include his mother, Beatrice Price, a sister, Joanne Jackson, a half-sister, Margret Price, and a half brother, Charles Price, all of Washington.
