—Cain, Unseld banquet

A press conference and kick-off meeting was held at the Civic Center Tuesday to present this year's honorees, Unseld and Cain, and announce that the June 17 event already has the support of national and local corporate sponsors and community effort.

Coach Earl Banks, general chairman, told a group of some 200 business and community leaders gathered for the luncheon meeting that the 1980 tribute to Unseld, the Capitol Bullets basketball star center and Cain, the retired basketball coach in the public schools for 30 years, will be followed by the 1981 Project Survival banquet set to honor Brooks Robinson.

He said," Both Unseld and Cain have done more than any others for the city's young people, the city's No. 1 youth project and they are both deserving of praise, the same as last year when we honored the Great Sam Lacy. We are going to have a first class affair all the way this time. No long speeches but a gathering of everybody in the city for one fantastic event."

The coordinator of the program, Alvin Steele, who originated the annual banquet idea announces through the Concerned Citizens Committee that there are packages of tickets for individuals, groups, organizations businesses and corporations . They are:

$20 per person; $200 for a table of 10; $350 for team sponsorships; $50 contribution sponsors one youngster and recognition; . The team of 10 sponsor may have his name on the players' uniforms and as "owner" may attend all the games.

Other "Team Sponsor Benefits" include a table of 10 at the affair and recognition on the souvenir program, a team photo, plaque or citation, champagne on the table, outfits for the 10 team members, T-shirts, basketball shorts,shoes,registration fees and trophies, admission to VIP reception, hospitality suite and Awards Banquet.

Tickets and information may be had by calling Vernon Wolst, Project Survival director, 301-396-1720.

Tickets may also be purchased directly from Project Survival Basketball League office, 11 E. Mt. Royal Ave. and information from Coach Banks, Morgan State, 444-3050 or Susan Harrison,publicity chairman, Civic Center, 837-0090.

Murphy III of the AFRO is vice chairman to Chairman Banks; Alvin Steele, coordinator; John Murdock is coordinator under Wolst, director of Project Survival; City Council President Walter Orlinsky is chairman of business and industry.

Black businessmen complain about Orientals misusing food stamps

Are Oriental store owners getting over on the food stamp program?

A black Northwest Baltimore grocery store owner claims they are. He told the AFRO that when he refuses to accept food stamps for items not included, such as laundry soap and detergent, his customers tell him that Oriental store owners allow them to use food stamps for such items.

The businessman, who refused to give his name, said he has heard the same complaint from other black store owners.

"If I get caught selling that kind of stuff, I'll lose my authorization to deal in food stamps.

"We just want the Orientals to follow the same rules we do," he said.

"Quite a few" Oriental store operators are currently under investigation for food stamp violations, according to Leon Saunders, officer in charge of the Baltimore field office of Food and Nutrition Services of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Saunders said any merchant can contact his agency with a complaint which is investigated without the store operator's knowledge.

Investigators are sent to stores if Saunders' office hears a rumor, complaint or if the amount of redemptions seems unreasonably high.

Saunders said his office is grossly understaffed to handle the present work load, which in addition to food stamps also includes school breakfast and lunch programs and the Women, Infant, Children nutrition program.

Another problem with tracking down food stamp violators is the small number of inspectors: there are only three for three states, which includes all of Maryland except five counties, two of Delaware's three counties and the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

"We have our hands full. We are spread pretty thin," Saunders said.
