How do students feel about the draft?

By Anthony Pressley

Students in almost every high school are talking about the draft.

Lori Dade, an Edmondson senior high school student, she stated that President Jimmy Carter and Congress were not being considerate to the feelings of youths.

Lori said that we are still young and registering us will not do anything but damage our future.

Contrary to what Lori Dade said, Micheal Rogers of Polytechnic stated, "I am all for the draft because in the state of an emergency, it would take us less time to enact a draft. Hypothetically, if Russia was to move into Pakistan it would tke less time to become organized. Now is the appropriate time to prepare ourselves, so that we can defend ourselves if necessary."

"I feel that the U.S. military is already advanced enough but even if we're not, I think that drafting women should be the last alternative," said Brenda Waller of West Baltimore.

On the other hand, Angela Vaughn of Walbrook explained that this is everyone's country so if necessary, we should prepare ourselves to support our country.

Some students at Carver, Walbrook and Edmondson are hanging posters to express their feelings about the draft. These posters are hung on poles outside schools and in some cases on vacant houses or buildings.

The posters read, "Registration leads to draft, drafts lead to war, war leads to death" and "Youths need jobs at home not wars abroad."

"Vocational Education is for Everyone" was the topic of the recent Maryland State Advisory Council on Vocational Technical Education poster contest.

More than 100 students submitted entries from city high schools. After a judging ceremony Gov. Harry Hughes presented Harold Butler, Doris Day and Christin Jones with three of the top five awards. The three studenst are from Douglass senior high.

Steve Keiser, public relations coordinator for the Baltimore City Youth Entitlement Enrichment Program stated that the number of jobs have increased this year.

"It's a step towards improvement because more youths need opportunities like this, and gives youths the opportunities to become more constructive and it will help keep the crime rate down. It also educates students in an actual work setting," commented Dareck Hendricks.

Keiser also said that the federal government has provided the Baltimore City Summer Corps program with $6.7 million this year. There will be 16,000 youths working this year as opposed to 15,000 last year.

Students who want to register should see their counselor or call the Youth Works Hotline at 396-5602 between 8:30 a.m. and 7 p.m.

—Carter—Mondale

Hutchinson spoke briefly about how he had first gained confidence in Carter in 1976, when he had an opportunity to work for the president's campaign. He also sounded an oft-repeated message heard that night.

"He has shown the cities and counties that he is concerned about them," he stated.

He was followed by Mayor Schaefer, who began his speech with a good imitation of a high school cheerleader.

"How about a cheer for Carter?" he crowed. The crowd reponded half-heartedly, then he continued.

"Who's gonna win in November —I mean May?" he asked. The Democrats hollered Carter's name, then Mondale on cue from the mayor.

Schaefer said that the Convention Center was erected in large part with federal funds, and added that there has "never been a president in the history of the country who has been better for the cities than Carter."

Schaefer, as well as several other speakers, took a swipe at Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, one of the few big city mayors who did not endorse the president.

"I don't know why not," said Schaefer belligerently. "She benefited from him." Late City-Democratic fundraiser at Convention Center

Although there was some initial fear in the Carter camp that Hughes would not actively endorse the president, he set those fears to rest when he rose to speak.

"President Carter has restored to the White House the dignity and respect this country has not had for a long time. Carter never shirked responsibility and he is willing to say when he is wrong."

Hughes also stated that he plans to canvass the state to drum up support for Carter. The governor drew more than 70 percent of the popular vote in the recent gubernatorial elections, and his support along with that of Schaeter, should be good news for Carter supporters.

State Sen. Abrams, stated, "I can't remember seeing this many good Democrats at one time in many, many years."

She introduced several local Democratic officeholders and James Rouse, who is heading the Maryland Carter organization.

After the speakers had left the platform, the guests had a choice of listening to the Flatters and Tom T. Hall, or munching on the pretzels, potato chips and peanuts provided.

"At least they'll have a low overhead," stated one patron, as he paid for a drink.

An atmosphere of classism prevailed at the affair, as the 1,000 who had paid $100 enjoyed free drinks and hors d'oeuvres, and received a private audience with the vice-president and members of the Carter administration.

On a lower level, those with $25 tickets enjoyed the meager snack food and craned for a glimpse of the Mondale entourage.

A small drama of sorts took place outside the entrance to the lower level, when state Sen. Robert Douglass, D-45, spotted Delegate Troy Brailey, who has recently resigned from the General Assembly Black Caucus, making his way through the door.

"Hi Troy," said the senator gregariously. "How are you doing Troy?"

Brailey smiled and allowed Douglass to wrap an arm around him and escort him to the door, as the two looked furtively about to see who had caught the little display.

Although no black elected officials occupied the dais, many were in attendance. City Councilmen Clarence "Du" Burns, D-2; Norman Reeves, D-5; Delegate Hattie Harrison, D-45, were among those circulating throughout the audience.

Hughes urges more businessmen to hire ex-offenders

Businessmen can play an important part in his plan to improve Maryland's correctional system, Gov. Harry Hughes says.

The governor addressed a conference on hiring ex-offenders at the Baltimore Convention Center this week and told business leaders they should be willing to hire ex-offenders—a move he said would be a "major rehabilitative tool."

Jobs will often make the difference between an ex-convict and a recidivist, Hughes told about 100 businessmen. He cited figures indicating that 61 percent of the parolees arrested in Baltimore during a recent three-month period were unemployed. Another 13 percent held only part-time jobs, he said.

"Employment not only affects an offender's ability to support himself without recourse to crime, but employment is also a major influence in the nature of his associates, his use of leisure time, his conception of himself and his expectation for the future," Hughes said.

But the governor stressed that "it would be unrealistic to expect that recidivism can be eliminated simply by providing jobs to all ex-offenders."

"It is important to recognize that not all ex-offenders are job- ready. It should be made clear that employers are not expected to offer charity. They have a right and the duty to think of their own security and the security of other employees," Hughes said.

He said his corrections program is aimed at rehabilitating criminals before they are released.

"I believe our efforts toward rehabilitation within our correctional system must be strengthened," Hughes said. "The expansion of the community- based system —which offers employment opportunities during the period of incarceration —will be a significant move in this direction."

The decision by the 1980 general assembly to fund construction of community-based correction centers in Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Caroline, Cecil and Charles counties was an important step, he said.

"We are making progress not only towards modernizing facilities, strengthening staff and improving management, but —just as important —we are making progress toward restoring calm and rationality in the general debate over corrections," Hughes said.

But "one obvious need is to develop a corrections system that in fact corrects and does not function as a revolving door for criminal offenders going in and out of our prisons."

Corrections Commissioner Edwin Goodlander said the purpose of the day-long conference, sponsored by the National Alliance of Business, was to familiarize businessmen with state programs for ex-offenders and to encourage participation.

Goodlander said "it's linkages we're talking about more than anything else."

Point workers call for June strike

The second largest steelworkers union local at Bethlehem Steel Corp's Sparrows Point shipyard is threatening to take a strike vote unless contract issues are settled.

Members of United Steelworkers Local 1609 voted to authorize their officers to call a strike vote in June, David Wilson, the local's president, said Tuesday. A strike would not begin until August, he said.

Wilson said the company refused the union's demands during negotiations in Pittsburgh for safer working conditions and improved facilities.

The issues include improved locker rooms and cafeterias and elimination of job hazards. "We have about 150 issues and they range from not having enough toilets to not having enough eating facilities," he said.

The local union negotiates plant-level issues separately from the national contract.

Wilson said the union wants limits on dust particles in the rolling mills to be more strict than federal standards.

"The problem with the federal law is that the standards were set primarily with the advice and consent of industrial health corporations, sponsored and run by management," Wilson said.

"So the standards (for dust levels) have been too high from day one," Wilson said. The company can argue it meets standards despite evidence that workers become ill from exposure to high levels of dust particles, Wilson said.

"Technically, they are legally correct. Morally, they are totally wrong," Wilson said.

The contract apparently has no connection with recent layoffs announced by Bethlehem. Last week, the company said it was laying off at least 1,100 workers in the finishing mills because there is not enough work.

Baltimorean receives Kellogg fellowship

Dr. Gerald S. Charles, director of undergraduate clinical operations at the University of Maryland's Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, has been chosen as one of 42 outstanding young American professionals to receive a three-year fellowship from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich.

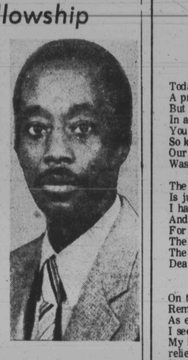
More than 380 applications for the fellowships, which may provide support of up to $30,000 to each individual, were received from professionals in 200 colleges, universities, and agencies across the nation.

Charles, a former consultant for the Pan-American Health Organization in Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, also served as a utilities engineer with the Federal Power Commission and aerospace engineer with the U.S. Department of Defense. He has been with the College of Dental Surgery since 1977.

He is the author of numerous publications and has assisted in creating a program of low-cost denture care for senior citizens in Baltimore.

He holds a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Howard University, Washington, D.C., a master's degree in public health from Harvard University and a doctor of dental surgery degree from the University of Maryland. Charles, 39, is a native of Miami, Fla.

Foundation President Russell G. Mawby said the program's intent is not to deepen professional specialization but rather to broaden individual perspectives of people, places and ideas.



Dr. Gerald S. Charles

We want to give them a chance to explore and expand beyond the borders of their chosen vocation," Mawby explained.

No more million dollar Lottery prize

The Maryland lottery is conducting a vigorous radio and television advertising campaign to promote the new weekly numbers game that features more but smaller prizes.

The weekly lottery will begin its new format for the 50-cent and $1 games on May 7, Director Martin Puncke said Tuesday.

"We are making a redistribution of the prizes structure so that more people will win," Puncke said. The number of small weekly prizes —which range between $5 and $5,000 — will be increased from 12,400 to 19,999 per one million tickets.

The grand prizes, will range between $100,000 and $25,000 instead of between $50,000 and $125,000, Puncke said.

Lottery players will also be able to buy a six-month yearly subscription to the weekly game, he said.

Ms. Ramsey to receive doctor of medicine degree from Hopkins

Wanda Lynne Ramsey will receive the doctor of medicine degree on May 30 in ceremonies at The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore. She is among 120 candidates receiving medical degrees from one of the world's leading medical schools.

Fifteen doctor of philosophy, seven master of arts and three master of science in clinical engineering degrees will also be awarded in ceremonies that follow commencement exercises at The Johns Hopkins University's Homewood campus in the morning, with an additional ceremony at The Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions specifically for the graduates of the school of medicine in the afternoon.

Wanda Lynne Ramsey

Ms. Ramsey is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Harold E. Ramsey of Baltimore, Md.

City College dedication scheduled

Baltimore City College will hold a formal dedication ceremony Monday, May 5 at 10 a.m. outside on the grounds of the recently renovated school at 33rd Street and The Alameda.

Mayor William Donald Schaefer, one of the school's graduates will take part in the ceremony.

Also participating will be WBAL TV-11 newsman, Curtis Anderson Class of '67, School Board President Mark K. Joseph, Superintendent John L. Crew and Regional Superintendent Boyse F. Mosley.

The newly structured Alumni Association has scheduled a general meeting May 5 at 6:30 p.m. Following the election of officers and the presentation of the organization's new platform, City College Alumni will attend the Orioles-Twins game at Memorial Stadium.

Other activities during the week include a Regional Science Fair, Humanities Symposium, an art show and a spring concert at the school. In addition, Bernard Perlman, Class of '43 will speak on Careers in Art on Thursday, May 8 at 2 p.m.

Founded in 1839, Baltimore City College is the third oldest public high school in continuous service in the United States. The present building, often referred to as the "Castle on the Hill," reopened last September after extensive renovations, totalling more than $8.3 million. City has a present enrollment of more than 500 ninth and tenth grade students and more than 60 percent of the student body which was all male is female.

AFRO'S SPECIAL MOTHER'S DAY SECTION

Remember Your Mother In Verse

May 9th

Choose One of The Following Verses:

1-M
Today is Mother's Day, dear mother,
A present we always did give
But God has taken you far away
In a much better place to live.
You were such a wonderful mother,
So kind, unselfish and true;
Our proudest possession, dear mother,
Was no one — other than you.

2-M
The white carnation that I wear
Is just a part of the respect,
I have for you dear mother,
And I never will forget.
For you are mine and I remember
The trials you pulled me thru,
The white carnation that I wear
Dear Mother, is my love for you.

3-M
On this Mother's Day, Mom, dear
Remembrance sheds another tear
As etched upon love's window pane
I see your smiling face again.
My heart's great yearn finds no relief
Yet hope is not beyond belief,
That we will clasp each other's hand
Somewhere, sometime — we'll understand.

4-M
On Mother's Day, the world becomes
The prettiest kind of place.
And thoughts of you enrich each hour
To give it added grace.
The flowers I place upon your grave
The clouds against the blue,
Seem brighter than they were before
Because I'm forever thinking of you.

5-M
A tribute of everlasting love
For all that you have done.
We know that God has given you
The rest that you have won.

6-M
If you could just be here with me,
Or I could be there with you,
And we could chat of this and that
And the things we used to do.
Wouldn't it be wonderful,
Wouldn't the world seem gay
And wouldn't it be grand to be Together, this Mother's Day.

7-M
Mother's Day brings back memories
Of wonderful times we knew,
A Family Day together
For then dear, we had you.
And all these recollections
Of the happy days long gone,
Bring sadness and a heartache
As Mother's Day morning dawns.

8-M
What is home without a mother?
All things this world may send,
But when I lost my darling mother,
I lost my dearest friend.

9-M
In all the world there is no other,
To take the place of our precious mother.
The first love we know;
The last we forget;
The love of Mother, the sweetest love yet.

10-M
Dear Mother, on this Mother's Day
What words can we impart
That would tell the true devotion
We have within our hearts
No words can tell love's message
But this we know is true;
There's no one like a mother;
No mother quite like you.

The memory of my mother, oh, it cometh everywhere;
It shineth in the darkness, and it floateth on the air,
It clings to me, it talks to me, through the livelong day.
It meets me in my daily task, my household work or play;
That blessed, blessed memory, that dear familiar tone,
As her spirit watches still, and communeth with her own.

12-M
Somewhere above this troubled world,
Safe beyond all grief and care,
Our mother rests in heavenly peace —
God grant some day we'll meet her there.

13-M
God made lots of beautiful things:
Sunset and roses, and trees,
Birds, and starlight and loyal friends,
And, after He made all these,
He gave to the earth a gift more rare,
More loving and more true.
Of all God's gifts, the one most rare,
A mother as dear as you.

14-M
Oh, mother, dear, when you were here,
We had your tender care;
And none can ever take your place.
Or fill that vacant chair.
You were the sunlight of our home
Till God took you away;
But we never will forget you,
And we'll meet in Heaven, we pray.

15-M
A wonderful mother, woman and aid,
One who was better God never made;
A wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million—that, mother, was you.
Just in your judgment, always right;
Honest and liberal, ever upright;
Loved by your friends and all you knew,
Wonderful mother — that, Mother, was you.

16-M
Sleep on, dear, good mother, it has been long years
Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears;
Yours was a heart that was blithesome and gay,
Scattering sunshine all along the way.
You know how we loved you, and, yes love you yet;
Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

17-M
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days;
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.

18-M
We have only your memory, dear mother,
To remember our whole life through.
But the sweetness will linger forever
As we treasure the image of you.
