Visiting nurses to expand home care services

As a result of recent meetings with state, city, county and United Way representatives, the Visiting Nurse Association of Baltimore will be able to provide home care services for medically indigent patients.

Last year, the VNA was forced to limit the amount of free home care for the poor due to a sharp increase in requests, higher inflation rates, and uncertainty in governmental funding.

Meetings are continuing between the VNA and public officials to set-up a regular funding mechanism for the poor which will provide for continued in-home assistance, particularly when a patient's visit allowances under Medicare and Medicaid expire but additional home care is needed.

According to VNA director, Dr. Jean Gaikin, "Many poor patients would be forced back to more costly hospitals and nursing homes, unless some provision is made for meeting the cost of their home care.

"Although the VNA is concerned about patients who are not able to pay, the agency is also actively pursuing the provision of home care services for those who can afford to pay," she said.

Recently, the VNA has added personnel in marketing, management and planning. A fifth satellite office was opened last month in Howard County.

I think there is a song with lyrics that tell us that "no man is an island, no man stands alone." That can be a parable for some of the famous Black culture landmarks that are located throughout this nation. My comments will be about a specific historical monument —the Black college or university.

Way back in 1865 when a college education was hard to come by for ex-slaves, the churches recognized the need for learning readin', riting, and ciphering..and with the help of The Freedmen's Bureau, they founded Howard University, Fisk University, Atlanta University, Tougaloo College, St. Augustine's College, and Morgan State to name a few institutions of higher learning. Cheyney opened its doors in 1839, and Lincoln University in Pennsylvania was educating in 1854.

There's no denying that when Black folks needed them, the Black colleges welcomed them with open arms and gave us many of our great doctors, lawyers, educators, and scientists. But as the saying goes...how soon we forget. Today many of these colleges need the support of those Black Americans who loudly boast that "I'm Black, and I'm Proud." As the dinosaur of yesteryear, many of our Black institutions of higher learning are facing extinction. How can that be when Black Americans earn more than $70 billion annually? The answer is quite simple—we are too busy doing our own thing. Young Blacks have accepted the fallacious belief that you can't learn anything at a Black college while the middle and upper income class Black families choose to adopt the attitude of "I got mine, shame on them if they don't have their's."

It is now time to prove that Black is beautiful. Each graduate from a Black college or university should mail at least five dollars ($5.00) to their alma mater each year. You know, the school you save may be your own.

'AFRO Father of the Year - 1980' selected

AFRO Photos by Mark Gail

FREE SPIRIT — Dr. Percy Thomas (R) and a member of his 'Free Spirit Theatre' (L) do a dramatic scene as part of the entertainment at the AFRO Father of the Year Awards Program held at The Ritz, 28 Light St. on Saturday, June 14.

Saturday, June 14, was Father's Day at the Ritz, 28 Light St.

Fathers and their families and guests gathered there to wait in breathless anticipation to see who would be 'AFRO Father of the Year-1980.'

While waiting they feasted on fruit, cheese and barbecued chicken and rice, and sipped champagne and cocktails.

They also were treated to Father's Day commentary and music spun by Dr. "C" (Carl Matthews), disc jockey for the occasion, who intermittently played the theme song for the contest, 'One In A Million'.

John H. Murphy III, chairman of the Board of Trustees, AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers gave welcoming remarks.

For entertainment fathers and their guests were treated to drama by Dr. Percy Thomas and members of his 'Free Spirit' Theatre including Irene Heigh, Cassandra Jamison and Natalie Carter. Dr. Thomas and his group did soliloquies from the works of Langston Hughes and James Weldon Johnson which depicted the struggle of slavery and post-slavery as it related to the black man and the black woman and a religious segment pointing up Moses' struggle to set his people free.

Several models from the Travis Winkey Modeling Company did a fashion segment, during which the ladies aired swimwear and the guests showed casual and businesswear.

After the dramatic airing of the fashions, Travis, who was moderator, took his models through the fast paces of changing poses in split seconds — strikingly interesting.

Alfie Williams of WWIN Raido, who served as co-emcee along with Bonnie Butler, chairperson of the affair, presented the fathers.

She had each one come up, along with his nominating person or attending family member to be greeted personally and to say a few words about their plans for Sunday — the Real Father's Day.

'An Evening with Wes Unseld' is smash hit

By Pattie Hodges
AFRO Staff Writer

Tuesday evening, June 17, heralded what must have been Baltimore's largest social-civic event of the spring season — 'An Evening With Wes Unseld.'

Martin's West was flowing with folks who came to honor two giants of manhood — Wesley S. Unseld and William 'Sugar' Cain.

Wes is the captain of the Capitol Bullets, NBA championship player and champion of children, their survival, rights and privileges and a devout family man.

William 'Sugar' Cain served as a basketball coach at Dunbar High School for many years and produced seven Maryland Scholastic Association Championship Squads before retiring in 1973.

Accolades, gifts, trophies and plaques were heaped on both men by people from all walks of life at the sparkling event which was held to benefit Project Survival.

Project Survival, which was organized in East Baltimore to give worthwhile leisure activities to youth in that area has expanded from a loose-knit group which started a basketball league for youngsters on Eastside who were 13 and under to an organization that now services all areas within the inner city.

It boasts a city-wide summer basketball league offering recreation for 920 youngsters on 92 basketball teams, a conduit for college financial assistance, establishment of tutorial services and college prep classes and the placement of enrollees (which number 4,326 to date) in upstanding colleges and universities.

HONOREE — Wesley and Connie Unseld admire one of many plaques he received at "An Evening With Wes Unseld" and a special tribute to William "Sugar" Cain held this week.

A KEY COORDINATOR of 'An Evening With Wes Unseld' tribute was Earl Banks, Athletic Director at Morgan University, who also served as emcee for the event.

ENJOYING TRIBUTES paid to him during the 'Evening With Wes Unseld' are William 'Sugar' Cain and his wife, Washeola.

Congressman Mitchell gives reunion greetings

By Pattie Hodges
AFRO Staff Writer

On Sunday, June 1, a family reunion of the Huffman-Godbolt clan, during which special tribute was paid to Mrs. Grace Godbolt Huffman Bellamy (matriach of the family) was sponsored by Mrs. Marie Bellamy, the honoree's daughter, at St. John's Baptist Church, 2029 Dupont Ave.

After a scrumptious dinner of mammoth proportions held in the lower church hall, during which over 200 family members from South Carolina, Florida, California, New Jersey, North Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio and the District of Columbia greeted and brought each other up to date on the latest family news, everyone assembled in the sanctuary for a program.

Following devotional service, prayer by Brother Saul McQueen, son-in-law of the honoree from Paterson, N.J., and scripture reading, the occasion was given by Mrs. Marie Bellamy, who had been escorted into the church by Congressman Parren Mitchell.

Mrs. Bellamy spoke of the occasion as a celebration of her mother's birthday as well as a reuniting of the family.
