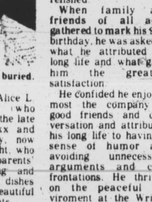
A GENTLE MAN

Frisby Asbury Lindsey never had time to be anything but kind, caring and concerned for others. Those who knew him will revere his memory as a truly gentleman in every sense of the word, a stalwart servant of God who lived the Golden Rule. He died on June 29, at the age of 94.



Frisby Lindsay buried.

Born March 22, 1886, in Anne Arundel County, Md., he was one of seven children of Henry and Sarah Lindsey. He received his early education in the county schools and attributed his intellectual growth, which was unusual for a youth of that era, to his parents. With determination, they insisted that their children master all the academic skills necessary for find gainful work, a particularly hard achievement in the 19th century for black citizens.

Despite biting winter weather, many miles to trudge and farm chores, his mother tolerated only extreme emergency absences from school. In fact, by the time Frisby, his brothers and sisters had reached school age, their mother had taught them to read, write and calculate, enabling them to enter at higher levels.

LONGTIME CATERER

Mr. Lindsey's first job was at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Shortly after the turn of the century, his older brother, Alfred, lured him to Baltimore where he had been employed as a hotel chef. When he was promoted to chef, he secured the second chef job for Frisby. The year was 1905. That was the beginning of Mr. Lindsey's long career as a skilled chef and caterer.

On April 28, 1909, Mr. Lindsey married Alice E. Robinson, whose sister, Fannie was married to his brother, Alfred.

To this union were born four daughters. Alice L. Thomas, Helen (who died in infancy), the late Marguerite Foxx and Beatrice Dorothy, now Mrs. David Wright, who inherited her parents skill for making and preparing tasty dishes and designing beautiful home appointments.

In her high schools days, the Lindsey home on Brantley Ave. in west Baltimore was a favorite gathering place for the daughters' friends who relished the warmth and friendship of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey.

MAN BEHIND MY EYES

In a letter dated July 8, 1963, to one of daughter Bea's friends, Papa Lindsey as many fondly called him, said of his marriage: "God has been kind in granting us 54 years together, we're looking ahead to other years."

God granted their wishes until 1968 when Mrs. Lindsey died. Shortly afterwards, Pop moved with daughter, Bea, and her husband, David, to Philadelphia.

Always, he was an integral part of their busy lives, sharing in their joys and who was delighted that visitors to the home made a beeline to his side to greet him first, and inquire about his welfare.

Frequently, they insisted that he join them in the club room, where he enjoyed the fellowship of the young people and often entertained them with happenings of the past.

He was an avid sports fan, enjoyed watching television, particularly cultural programs and historical events. He was also an avid reader, an interesting conversationlist and enjoyed people.

Often, he shared his special cuisine skills with his daughter and son-in-law's friends who gathered, and, there was much laughter and fellowship which he relished.

When family and friends of all ages gathered to mark his 90th birthday, he was asked to what he attributed his long life and what gave him the greatest satisfaction.

He confided he enjoyed most the company of good friends and conversation and attributed his long life to having a sense of humor and avoiding unnecessary arguments and confrontations. He thrived on the peaceful environment at the Wright home.

Pop Lindsey was buried Wednesday morning in Arbutus Memorial Park beside his lifelong companion.

In addition to his daughters, Alice and Bea, he is survived by a grandson - Kenneth Earl Lockett, East Orange, N. J., son-in-law - David Wright and Jesse Foxx, grand daughters-in-law - June R. Lockett, great granddaughter - Lynette Lockett, both of East Orange, nieces - Marie Payton, Arbutus, Maryland and Mildred Seay, Baltimore, cousins surviving - Ida Carrington, Albertine Graham, Edward Hinkson, Marguerite Manning, all of Baltimore, and Howard Pindell, Philadelphia.

PALLBEARERS were members of the Baltimore Mules Phalanx Club the Men and The Upper Ten.

Arrangements were by Leroy O. Dyett Funeral Home.

BASIC TRAINING

Pvt. Waddell J. Barker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper D. Barker, 616 15th St., N.E., is attending basic training at Fort Grodon, Ga.

Barker is a 1973 graduate of Eastern High School.

Haitians in Baltimore

The latest newcomers to Baltimore are 10 Haitians who arrived nearly two weeks ago through the kindness of a journalist, Alugia Gray.

Mr. Gray, a native of the Caribbean, has been taking care of the refugees "as best I can" to help them find work and hopefully permanent living.

Up until this past Sunday, the effort has been precarious and a sort of "hit and miss" situation, he states.

Fortunately, the group has been adopted temporarily by the St. Martins Spiritual Church at the corner of North and Madison Avenues.

Sunday was a pleasant day for the 10 who attended 11 a.m. services and had a bountiful dinner plus some cash.

At the usual 12:30 to 1 p.m. broadcast on Radio WBMD live from the church, Fr. Franklin told listeners about the Haitians and their needs.

He said before the day was over he received some 35 calls "which may or may not prove helpful."

However, the minister added, "Baltimore is full of good people and something good will happen." He has placed responsibility for getting some legal status and benefits for the Haitians under the Maryland state laws with Brother Mike, Col. Michael Lorenzo.

The adoption of the Haitians even if temporarily, fits in with St. Martin's 1980-81 program which hinges around the $100,000 Mahalia Jackson Home now under construction at the church's location.

The 1,300 church membership has underwritten the cost of the 19 - room, four story structure which will be completed in August in time for the convention of the National Congress here.

Fr. Franklin notes that the church has not asked for state nor federal funds but will open the building especially for evicted and disposed persons or "anyone who needs help."

Aug. 17.

He made it known that the Haitians or any other refugees may come for the same assistance as he has been giving for all the years the doors have been open.

St. Martin's was the 1978 AFRO Church of the Year and saluted since then for providing food, clothes and fuel for needy persons during the '79 blizzard and subsequent winter crises.

As president of the National Congress, Fr. Franklin has supervision over churches in Ft. Worth, Dallas, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Memphis, Chicago, Atlanta, Philadelphia and Newark.

Persons who can help the Haitians find work or supply needs may call the church 669 - 1964. Rev. J. C. Bates is administrator with the Rev. Vincent L. Taylor, first assistant.

The Rev. Father P. H. Franklin is pastor and founder of the church established in 1952. Recently he was elected senior bishop of the National Congress of St. Martins Spiritual Churches.

The Baltimore establishment has a record of helping the homeless and persons in need and as Fr. Franklin states "this is nothing new."

He says he and his congregation are working this week to find jobs and necessities to sustain the Haitians until things get better. Hopefully, the group will find Baltimore as suitable a place to live and work as any other immigrants, he states.

Supreme court

placing conditions on federal expenditures.

"That the program may press the outer limits of Congressional authority affords no basis for striking it down.

Burger, joined by Justices Byron White and Lewis Powell, said Congress may use racial and ethnic criteria as a valid means of accomplishing its constitutional objectives.

Justices Thurgood Marshall, William Brennan and Harry Blackmun agreed with the court's conclusion, relying on its 1978 opinion in the Allan Bakke "reverse discrimination" case.

But Justices Potter Stewart, William Renquist and John Paul Stevens disagreed, saying the decision is incorrect.

"In the exercise of its powers, Congress must obey the Constitution just as the legislatures of all the states must obey the Constitution in the exercise of their powers," Stewart wrote for himself and Rehnquist.

"If a law is unconstitutional, it is no less unconstitutional just because it is a product of the Congress of the United States."

And Rehnquist said the 1977 provision in this case is a denial of equal protection under the law — a constitutional guarantee.

In his majority opinion, Burger wrote that Congress enacted the program as a strictly remedial measure.

"Here we deal not with the limited remedial powers of a federal court, for example, but with the broad remedial powers of Congress," the opinion said.

"It is fundamental that in no organ of government, state or federal does there repose a more comprehensive remedial power than in Congress, expressly charged by the Constitution with competence and authority to enforce equal protection guarantees.

"Congress not only may induce voluntary action to assure compliance with existing federal statutory or constitutional anti-discrimination provisions, but also, where Congress has authority to declare certain conduct unlawful, it may, as here, authorize and induce state action to avoid such conduct."

Burger said Congress did not attempt to give select minority groups a preferred standing in the construction industry.

Instead, it "has embarked on a remedial program to place them on a more equitable footing with respect to public contracting opportunities," he said.

The majority holding was a victory for civil rights groups that said the congressional action was a remedy for historic discrimination in the construction industry.

This is the third time in as many years that the court has considered challenges to programs aiding blacks and other minorities.

Previous rulings addressed what universities may do to aid minorities in medical school admissions and how far private industry may go in setting up special job training programs to help minorities.

The ruling is the first time the high court has considered what voluntary efforts the government may take to assist blacks and other minority groups.

The set - aside provision was passed as an amendment to the 1977 Public Works Employment Act to boost unemployment in the economically depressed construction industry and stimulate the economy.

The legislation reserved 10 percent of the grants for firms that were owned by minority owned which included Blacks, Spanish - speaking, Orientals, Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts.

Contractors across the country mounted challenges to the provision and a number of courts upheld it, including the New York Federal courts where the case decided Wednesday originated.

Four associations of New York contractors and a heating contractor said the law excluded them from contracts they could have won by competitive bidding and required them to subcontract work they could have done themselves.

They argued the set - aside was a racial quota, which violated the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection of the law, and was illegal under the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which bars denial of federal program benefits on racial grounds.

Mrs. Lottie Brown community worker

Mrs. Lottie Brown, 88, an active community worker in Edgemere, died June 28 at Best Nursing Center after a long illness. Funeral services were held July 1 at Shiloh Baptist Church, 2500 Sycamore Ave. in Edgemere. She is buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Brown, according to relatives, was very active in the church and her community. She helped raise money to buy the first rug for the church and served as an usher, missionary and a member of the Flower Circle.

"She helped anybody in need in the community," said one relative, who remembered her cooking and selling food to help a neighbor purchase a needed back brace.

Born June 17, 18[illegible] in Prince Edward County, Va., Mrs. Brown attended the public schools there and moved to Baltimore in 1923.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Audrey M. Weaver; a son, John E. Brown Jr.; 10 grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren and one great - great - granddaughter.

NOTICE

Rising cemetery cost on the increase. Because of rising cemetery costs and cemetery requirements that charges be paid in advance, all families are requested to make arrangements to pay cemetery charges in advance of burial.

Guyanese missionaries visit Bethel A.M.E.

Missionaries from Jonestown, Guyana, South America were hosted by the missionary department of Bethel AME Church last week, in activities which included tours of city landmarks, a cultural fair at St. John's AME Church, and a prayer breakfast.

Sugana became known world - wide following the now infamous Jonestown massacre under to their country two years ago. They arrived in the city at 2:15 a.m. Friday at Baltimore - Washington International Airport.

Coordinator for the missionaries' visit was Mrs. Delores Winstorf, a member of the Bethel Missionary Department. Among the activities planned by Mrs. Winston were tours of Provident Hospital, Morgan State University and City Hall. Local Baltimore art talent was displayed at an affair held Saturday at St. John's AME Church, including an appearance by the Baltimore Ballet, and photographs by photographer Cary Beth Cryor.

A private reception was held at Gallery 409 on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Cecelia Williams Bryant is the supervisor of the Bethel Missionary Department, which currently has thirteen different departments.
