All male fashion show at The Ritz

The Mantazia Modeling Studio For Men, an all-male modeling agency headquartered at The Ritz Supper Club, presented its first of a series of fashion shows previewing fall fashions on July 17 at The Ritz.

Fashions from The Merry-Go-Round and Hyatt's Men's Stores were aired at the event, which showed everything from fall styles in jeans and sweaters to the new styles in suits and ties for men.

Models in the show included feature model Curtis Kane, instructor for the World of Faces Agency and fashion writer for Metropolitan Magazine, Leonard Willis, Chico, Larry Jackson, Male Model of the Year Adrian Pervis, and director and coordinator Tony Wade.

Commentator Jean Gregory topped off what turned out to be a unique show.

When asked just what Mantazia's philosophy is, Tony Wade, Director of the all-male agency and fashion coordinator for the Ritz show, replied, "We believe that the traditional way of presenting fashions is boring and ineffective.

People want a show, they want to become a part of the modeling magic, so we don't isolate ourselves from our audience, but leave them knowing that they were an active part.

Also involved in the show were the Photo Intrique III Photographers, often called a show within themselves.

Ms. Pageant

During the speech competition, which was the most heavily weighted area of competition, contestants came onstage individually and spoke on the Profile of a Career Woman — Many telling in moving and dramatic fashion what being a career woman meant to them, especially in the 80s, giving their aspirations and goals thus far and their projections for the future.

Following intermission, guests were entertained with an artistically choreographed dance by Tony Edges to the theme from Mahogany.

Following the evening gown competition, during which the contestants modeled various lovely gowns, many of which had been designed by them, Brenda Afford did another selection.

During the evening gown segment, Toni Marsh, WMAR - TV, co-emceed.

The five finalists chosen, after much deliberation by the judges, were: Stephanie Anderson, Sharon Brooks, Judith Ann Mason, Adrienne Shade and Marva Rigsby.

Each finalist had to answer off the top of her head, a very weighty question on contemporary issues.

After more deliberation, on the part of the judges, the winner was Ms. Judith Ann Mason, executive director of the Reservoir Hill Community Association.

Her question had been: "What are your feelings about women in the Military." Her answer was "I believe that we should all play a part in protecting our country, but not by fighting."

First runner up was Marva Rigsby, who is doing a political internship with Representative Parren J. Mitchell.

Sharon Gross, a freelance model, was second runner - up.

Third runner - up spot was garnered by Stephanie Anderson, a Hampton U. senior with a Commercial Art major.

Adrienne Shade, a CCB Business Administration major, won the fourth runner - up spot.

All winners received flowers and trophies.

Judith Mason, as Ms. Career Woman - 1980 will receive $500 in cash or an all expense paid vacation to the Bahamas. She will also be introduced to the Maryland area and to neighboring states, as the reigning career queen, and will represent all the career women of Baltimore.

Acknowledgments were made by Maurice L. Butler, executive producer - director of the pageant.

Also on the production staff were Delores G. Brown, Arturius Jenkins, Ava Fiels, choreographer, Melodye Hardy, Human Relations theme, Deborah Young, Mame Attractions, make up artist.

Also Eric B. Womble, Richard H. Slaughter, Ernest Q. Womble and Richard Slaughter.

Kappas give $1500 gifts for college scholarships

The Baltimore Alumni Chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity is consistent with the concern and spirit of its grand chapter's intent to get the fraternity off dead-center for the national fight for full participatory involvement in all of the social, political, educational and legal forces that are tacked upon the fraternity membership or its local communities.

Involvement is the fraternity's new watchword for the 80s. We started recently with $1,500 for college scholarships.

Col. William "Box" Harris, Polemarch states:

"Harlow Fullwood who is an alumnus of Virginia Union University asked for our participation in sending young people to Virginia Union University.

"He made a great impression upon the members of our fraternity in bringing a number of students from Baltimore to the Kappa House and explained just what aid and assistance would be needed to send young students from Baltimore to this university. We gave $1,000.

"Our 150 active members are also making a contribution to the United Negro College Fund that seems to be doing a yeoman's job in aiding and assisting land grant colleges.

"We are hoping that more social clubs and other organizations of this city will fall in line and help our youth in furthering their education."
