THE LIVING CHURCH

Annual Labor Day services to be held at Bethel AME

The second annual Labor Day sunrise service will be held at Bethel AME Church on Labor Day, Sept. 1, 6 a.m. Druid Hill Avenue and Lanvale Street.

Every person who comes is being asked to bring either a job, a pair of shoes or a can of food. Major political figures including the president and Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan, have been invited to participate in the service.

As a result of the service last year, over 300 pairs of shoes were laid at the altar. So many jobs were brought that the church has since organized and developed its own employment service which has over the past year placed over 1,000 persons in jobs.

The Rev. John R. Bryant, pastor of Bethel, said the service is held on Labor Day to commemorate the thousands of American citizens who not only do not have work but have no prospects of the same.

The Rev. John R. Bryant

He said in this election year, all candidates and the people as well, should know that unemployment is a problem that can only be solved by God.

Rev. Bryant, 37, has been the pastor of Bethel for five years. The vision of Rev. Bryant is to bring souls to Christ, and it is a vision that he strives to honor in everything that he does.

Last year, Rev. Bryant said he received 30 pairs of shoes from senior citizens at the Waxter Center, a promise from a major Baltimore shoe store to make a large donation and what he called a "touching" note from an elderly woman who sent all she could afford, $5 toward a pair of shoes, as well as donations from several other individuals and businesses.

SCHOLARSHIP WINNER — Stewart Marshall, 18, won the second place scholarship award of $1,600 at the National Ushers convention in Memphis, Tenn., recently. He is shown surrounded by members of his family. Marshall will attend Morgan State University and major in music.

National United Church Ushers give $1,600 scholarship to studen

Representatives from approximately 800 interdenominational churches in about 23 states attended the National United Church Ushers Association of America, Inc., in Memphis, Tenn., recently.

Stewart Marshall of Baltimore, won the second place scholarship award of $1,600. Marshall, 18, is a graduate of Marshall High School and will attend Morgan State University in September.

Mrs. Gladys Trapp, an active member of Shining Star Baptist Church and an usher at the church for 25 years, was one of the delegates from Maryland attending James E. Anderson of Denver, Colo., succeeds Robert Allen as the new national president. The convention began with the traditional early morning candlelight ceremony, where ushers rededicate and consecrate themselves to God.

Some 1,500 church ushers attended the installation banquet at the Rivermoff Holiday Inn on July 25, where the outgoing national president was honored.

The George T. Grier School of Ushering held its program featuring state competition on ushering techniques performed by drill teams. First place winners were Illinois for the Junior Department; California for the Young Adult Dept., and Ohio for the Senior Department

Mrs. Gertrude W. Benefield was crowned queen of the A.W. Briggs Health Unit. Mrs. Briggs has been an usher for 42 years and has been attending the conventions for seven years. A. W. Briggs is the nursing unit of the association

Mrs. Beverly Douglass says teenagers need to know God

Mrs. Beverly Douglass, who has been singing gospel music since she was five years old, says she rewrites top disco songs to create new gospel songs with a special appeal to young people

Mrs. Douglass, who is a member of Bethel AME Church, where the Rev. John R Bryant is pastor, says that she is deeply concerned about the future of black youth who are exposed to drugs and alcohol.

"I sing the kind of gospel that should appeal to the youth of the city in hopes that hearing this music will encourage them to give God a chance to come into their lives.

"I have taken several popular tunes that are played on the radio every day and put gospel lyrics to them, hoping that teenagers will react to the familiar songs and that a little bit of the message will soak into their hearts," said Mrs. Douglass.

Mrs. Douglass says she is known as the "mother" to most of the children in her neighborhood and is trying to prove a point to many young people who visit her home that they need to know God is almighty.

GOSPEL SINGER Mrs. Beverly Douglass says she sings the kind of gospel that appeals to young people and has been singing gospel music since she was five years old.

She says, "I know that I can't save them all. Some of these youngsters have satan in their hearts and I believe I have an obligation to try to help them in some way. All those I can't reach, I know God will take care of in his own special way."

She is the founder and lead singer of the Jane Douglass singers. Describing the group, Mrs. Douglass says, "I never thought I would be singing with a gospel group consisting of tubas, trombones, drums and other instruments not usually associated with religious music. I have always loved spirituals and I felt the need to do them in a different way to attract young people

Members of the Jane Douglass Singers and the House of Prayer Band, who plays for the Douglass singers are Nay Young, Vance Tinkler, James Forrester, Leon Downs, Anthony Snowden, Bae Bae Watkins, Sam Young, Henry Tinkler, Eural Young, Robin Peters and Jimmy Brown.

Also, Mrs. Oglatian Taylor, Mrs. Beulah Horne and Mrs Shirley Pope.

Community library underway at Bethel

Response for donations toward the formation of a community library at Bethel AME Church, Druid Hill Avenue and Lanvale Street, has been more than favorable, according to program director Ms. Juanita Givens, who said that more than 500 books and $1,000 in development funds have been received.

Books of every subject are being accepted, said Ms. Givens. The concept of the library is to provide neighborhood residents as well as church members a place to read whatever they want to grow in the areas in which they feel a need. Although the library will have an extensive selection of religious texts and titles, all types of books are acceptable.

Formation of the library is being largely depended upon by donations. Private and anonymous donations of books and money have far exceeded initial expectations.

The library is currently being housed on the third floor the church building. Funds received are being used for building shelves and also for purchasing selected books and other library necessities.

If you have a donation you would like to give to the library, contact Ms. Juanita Givens at 728-2557, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Catholics open door to Episcopalians including married priests

By Lidia Wasowicz

In precedent - setting move, the Roman Catholic Church announced Wednesday that it will accept dissident members of the Episcopal Church — including married clergymen — while allowing them to retain parts of their anglican tradition.

The provisions, approved by the Vatican but with a number of details still to be worked out, include approval for some married Episcopal priests to be ordained as Roman Catholic priests — a first for the western church, with 50 million members in the United States.

Such priests, however, will not be allowed to become bishops or to remarry in the case of widowhood. Future candidates for the priesthood and current Catholic priests will continue to be forbidden from marrying.

"I regard this as truly historic and notably precedent - setting," Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said in making the announcement.

He said that for the first time since King Henry VIII's break with the papacy in the 16th century, anglicans may be "reunited with the Holy See without surrendering their entire tradition."

Quinn said at least 1,000 laymen and 63 priests in the 3-million - member Episcopal church in the United States have requested to join the Catholic Church under the new provisions. "But what the total numbers will be we have no idea."

He stressed that the decision applies only to those who, while wishing to retain some elements of the anglican tradition, fully accept roman catholic doctrine and the authority of the pope and bishops.

The Archbishop added that this was a first step in the Catholic church's 'opening the doors" to peoples of other Christian Faiths.

The issue has been a touchy one for U.S. bishops since the 1976 Schism in the Episcopal denomination over the issue of ordination of women to the priesthood and revision of the episcopal book of common prayer.

Episcopal officials contacted in San Francisco and Washington declined comment on the announcement.

Quinn underscored his church's commitment to continued ecumenical relations with the Eplscopal church despite the catholic decision to receive the dissident schismatics.

"This new development is not meant to impede Anglican - Roman Catholic ecumenical dialogue, which seeks the unity of the anglican and Roman catholic churches as sister churches," Quinn said in a statement. But later he admitted that Catholic - Anglican relations "will become strained at some points."

"However, my early indications are this will not become the prevailing element," he said. "I don't think this is a decision that will be largely begrudged."

Wuinn said presiding Episcopal Bishop John M. Allin had been informed of the decision before it was publicly announced. A spokesman for the national offices of the Episcopal church said Allin was out of the country and the church had no official comment.

Last rites for Charles A. Smith

Funeral services for Charles Andrew Smith, 39, were held August 12 at St. Cecilia Catholic Church. Smith died Aug. 9 after a brief illness.

Born in Baltimore, Aug. 17, 1950, he was a member of St. Cecelia Catholic Church. He received his bachelor of arts degree in sociology from Loyola College and was working toward fulfilling the prerequisites for the master program in guidance and counseling at Loyola College.

At the time of his death, Smith was employed with the Department of Juvenile Services where he had worked since 1973. Relatives state he was a "cheerful, kind, loving and devoted person" who achieved much during his life and was involved in many activities.

He was listed in Who's Who In American High Schools in 1969, secretary and treasurer of Loyola Karate Club, president of Loyola College's black student union.
