Student enrollment declining in state

Several hundred thousand Maryland children watched summer fade through the window of a bus Tuesday as schools opened amid predictions enrollment would be the lowest since the mid - 1960s.

Classes began in 22 of the state's 23 counties Tuesday, although schools closed earlier in several jurisdictions because of the heat. Schools in Harford County opened Wednesday and in Baltimore classes began Thursday.

State board of education spokesman Gus Crenson said 750,000 youngsters are expected to attend Maryland schools this year, down from 777,000 last year.

"We're anticipating a slight drop in enrollment as we have had for the past 10 years," he said "School population will be down to where it was in the mid - 1960s."

But Crenson said officials expect the trend, which has forced the closings of many schools, will reverse itself during the 1980s.

"This year it is anticipated the birth rate will increase. Therefore, we can look forward to enrollment increases during the 1980s," he said.

Opening day went smoothly in Dorchester, Caroll and Charles Counties, despite a strike threat by the Maryland School Bus Contractors Association.

Allan Gary, head of the group, had said bus drivers would not work unless Gov. Harry Hughes raised their 45 - cent per mile pay. Hughes didn't, and the drivers went to work anyway.

Gary's spokeswoman said the governor has promised to discuss the pay raise by Sept. 30 and the strike issue will be reconsidered then if drivers remain unsatisfied.

The state health department issued its annual reminder to parents that children who have not been immunized against childhood diseases will not be allowed to attend classes.

Henry Nathan, department spokesman, said students in kindergarten through sixth grade must have had four doses of the combined diptheria tetanus, and whooping cough vaccine.

They also must have had three or four doses of polio vaccine and one dose of the measles and rubella vaccine. Vaccination against mumps is recommended but not required.

Nathan said schools will not turn away non - immunized children the first day, but will determine in a few weeks which children have not been immunized and send warnings to their parents.

Crenson said this year's project basic which requires students to pass a test of reading, writing mathematics and life skills before graduating from high school, will be expanded from 30 schools to half the state's 1,325 schools.

"That's a big step, and next year we will bring in all of them," Crenson said.

He also said the state will begin a new pre - school program to help parents of handicapped children prepare their kids for school, where they eventually will receive individual instruction.

In some cases the teachers will visit the home and show parents how to use things to aid the development of the child, and in other cases the child will be brought to school," Crenson said.

He also noted that this year the state will switch the national competency tests it uses for students in the third, fifth and eight grades from the Iowa test of basic skills to the California achievement test.

AMTRAK opening at BWI

Amtrak will begin operations at its Baltimore - Washinton International Airport Rail Passenger Station on Oct. 26, Senator Charles McC Mathias Jr., R - Md., announced recently.

The station, the first of its kind in the nation, is located on Maryland Route 170 one mile from the BWI passenger terminal. The Maryland Department of Transportation will operate shuttle bus service between the station and the terminal.

Summer's holiday end finds Bay area busy but pools closed

By Lillian Wiggins

The last official holiday of the summer season is over and many went the weekend lounging about the house and having their at home or their own home not-

Those with swimming pools were blessed with some relief from the hot humid weather but the pools were not open for the general or the District who did not have a pool to play in this Labor Day because of early closing. It is true that those hurt the most in any budget crunch are those who are less able to afford anything else.

For those confined in the nation's capital things were not so bright either. Lloyd Genus is recuperating from surgery at Howard University Hospital. Wife Gina is making frequent visits and as the last report Sunday she had gone to the hospital early to give him a bath. That evening friends of Alma and Bernice Elam gathered at the Elam resident on Gallatin to take advantage of the last holiday before winter.

It was reported that Leslie Yancey, wife of Dr. Worden Yancey, was in Howard University Hospital. Jesse Dedmon checked into the hospital just short of the Labor Day weekend. It isn't known just how long his stay will be.

Meanwhile Ted Holms of Pier Seven and Face Wiggins got off in an early start and headed for Atlantic City to see the Trenier Twins. Understand that they are as good as ever and that Kentucky Avenue, was just like old times.

It is believed by old Atlantic City goers that the revitalization of Illinois, Arctic, Baltic and Kentucky Avenues is essential to the well - being of minority business in that town. Most don't seem to be that crazy about the casino on the Boardwalk and say that things are too expensive.

Back in D.C. Shirley Charles got things underway with an outing for her son Derrick, who is a Howard University medical student. The setting was large with Shirley passing out the chores to her guests. Henrietta and Turner "Bus" Speller had a cook - out at their summer place at Arundel - on - the - Bay and quite a few folks from the city journeyed from the heat of the city to the comfortable breeze of the Bay.

On the homefront Mildred Avery invited friends to join her at her New Hampshire Avenue home for an old time cookout and Joan Hardy, daughter of Olga and Juggy Mathews played a bit of pinochle at their New Hampshire Avenue home.

This was Joan's last fling for it's back to school, teaching the youngsters of the District. She's one of the fortunate ones who will be returning to the system.

Herbert Quarles, teacher and writer of the AFRO's D.C. Bridge column, decided to take an early out because he was made aware of the fact that music teachers would be cut too.

For many teachers it's been a long hot summer. Those like Kitty Phynes and Lethita Kidhr have expressed joy that they left the system because things got as bad as they are.

Frank Hinton of Pier Seven recently returned from Haiti is packing them in at the waterfront establishment. However, other waterfront establishments, wanting a taste of the change Hinton is bringing into Pier Seven have piano players with trios at Flagship and the GangPlank.

There is no question about the waterfront being crowded on the weekends and the Labor Day weekend was no different. It was wall - to - wall people. Mercer Ellington was in town but the stay was short and Jimmy Chichester and wife have not stopped talking yet about their trip to Zaire, West Africa, where he says they were treated royally. Jimmy's daughter is married to an official of the Zaire government.

Speaking about overseas, Clyde Goode, a part time employee of the State Department, now retired, whose last post was Chile is back in D.C. for a while. Ah Guo Mary and Bob Freeman would like to know this just in case they have not heard. All three of them were in Ghana during the days of Nkrumah, former president of Ghana.

Part of Doris Harrison's weekend was taken up travelling to Pittsburgh where she took daughter Beverly who is enrolling as a freshmen student. Likewise for Bettie Caine Strudwick and hubby Warren who took son Billy down to the University of Virginia, and Councilwoman Charlene Drew Jarvis whose son is also entering the University of Virginia as a freshman student.

Calvin Rolark and his wife Councilwoman Wilhelmina Rolark spent the weekend in Orlando, Florida, and prior to departure they both travelled to Liberty City in Miami to get a first hand look at the situation there. Rolark was in Orlando on a speaking engagement. It was a working weekend for Rev. Edward Hailes who took the extra time to work of proposals for OIC.

The Mitchells host 'family affair'

By Mabe Kemp

Picking up the pieces after four weeks in La Grande, Or. had me scurrying from National Airport to Evalina and James Mitchell's "family affair" last Sunday. Evalina had called me on August 17 from Atlanta where she and "Butch" had attended the wedding of a nephew to remind me of the party which is an annual pre - labor Day event. And I made it on time even if I did have to take a stand - by four o'clock flight out of Atlanta to do it.

The party was well under way when I arrived with guests spread out on all three levels of the Mitchell home and the deck outside. John T. Stewart Jr., Judge William S. Thompson and debonair Billy Thompson (father and son attired in identical white right out of Men's fashions) were like a welcoming threesome definitely making my race from the airport worthwhile.

Proceeding to the lower levels I spied Audrey Thompson and Margaret Stewart engaged in quiet conversation; the Clays, (Romaine and Monroe) - Romaine perched at the bar and Monroe near by looking like the picture of health. Said Romaine of Monroe: "The doctors call him the miracle man". On the deck I spotted Doris Haley, Lucille Braxton, Hilda Purce and Ruth Hall. I joined them figuring to be brought up to date on the happenings which occurred during my absence from the social scene.

Dr. Jean and Dr. Julian Perry were there. Jean reminded me that I was supposed to contact Ted in Atlanta where they and the children were vacationing with her family during early August. Gloria and Proc Massie had just dashed to the party after a quick trip to their home in Lanier from the airport. They had been in Atlanta for a meeting of the Holidays, Inc., a fifteen - Chapter organization of bridge players which meets annually. This group of ladies call their husband - counterparts, "Labor Days". Proc was proudly showing off the trophy he won.

All of a sudden conversation ceased and this writer found out why. The food was being brought out and the line was forming to the left. There was barbecued chicken, barbecued ribs, baked beans, salad (tossed and Macaroni), beets, green beans, . . . the works. Cocktails, soft drinks were plentiful throughout and to top it off there was ice cream and cake. The children (young adults) of the various families were having a ball.

Rosemarie Tyler Brooks introduced me to her daughter, Kelly Jo, who Rosemarie says is into ballet at the Jones - Hayward School of Ballet. The Jones - Hayward School according to Rosemarie is a hook - up to Capital Ballet and there are plans on the drawing board for a gala which will bring together all alumni of the past 30 years.

Talked briefly to Anne Haley, daughter of Doris and George Haley. Anne was anticipating leaving the day after Labor Day for Brown University in Providence, R. I. where she will be a freshman with the intent of becoming a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority of which her mother is an active member. Lauren Perry, daughter, of Dr. and Mrs. Julian Perry and also the god child of Evalina Mitchell was helping with the serving of the ice cream and cake while many of the young adults were glued to the television.

Gwen and Bert Smith's daughter Danielle who was not present, I found out, is a star ballet student at the Davis Center. She and three other students auditioned for the Berlin Ballet and performed for two weeks at the Kennedy Center in "The Idiot" and the "Nutcracker Suite". Lucille and Bob Gayle were among the guests and Lucille said that approximately 70 Des Cos members of the National American Bridge Association journeyed to Dallas for the August meet of that organization. Lucille, a master bridge player, is National Awards Coordinator.

Councilwoman Charlene Drew Jarvis was just back from a trip to Atlanta. She had taken her son, Ernest Drew Jarvis, to Morehouse College where he will matriculate for the next four years and she said that she actually cried because she had to leave him. But she hastily added that he is completely thrilled to be at Morehouse and told her since that he thinks the prettiest girls in
