Develop your talents... or try something new... Urban Services Cultural Arts

Experience the Arts . . By Ida Peters

The Urban Services Cultural Arts Program offers classes and special events in five centers in five different neighborhoods in Baltimore. Qualified instructors teach free classes for children, teenagers and adults.

The Cultural Arts Program has Norman E. Ross as executive director and Mrs. Hattie Harrison, president, board of directors. Lenwood Ivey is executive director of Urban Services.

Students are learning art, music, dance and drama at the Dunbar Center, Orleans and Caroline; Oliver Center, Federal and Eden Streets, Greenmount West, Guilford and Lanvale and Cherry Hill, School 180.

In art you can get free classes in jewelry design, painting, silkscreen, sculpture, photography. In music, classes in opera workshop, choir, guitar and voice. In dance, ballet, modern, Saturday classes and African. In drama, acting, speech, movement set building and lighting.

In the Gallery 409 Art Exhibits, local artists are showcased in monthly exhibits of painting, photography and sculpture.

The Ebony Arts Series will feature Nebbi Folson's "Riding On the Wings of Love" by the National Black Theatre on Nov. 29. Barbara Ann Teer is executive producer.

This production and the Rod Rodgers Dance Company, Jan. 23-24, 1981, and the Boys Choir of Harlem, April 18, 1981 is being sponsored by the Mid-Atlantic Arts Consortium.

People who complain about people who complain and unemployed may use the Urban Services Cultural Arts Programs to develop their talents or just try something new.

Norman Ross, director of Urban Services Cultural Arts Program, discusses upcoming programs for Urban Services Expo at Convention Center, Nov. 11-14 with Petrus Bosman (L) and Daniel Consoyra.

Halloween Party for Arena Players opening

Vacounteas Payne, Verna Day and Cassandra Miller triple as Augusta Garvey in "Night Is My Enemy," opening on Halloween night.

The Arena Players' Promotional Committee is sponsoring a Halloween costume contest to celebrate the opening of "The Night Is My Enemy" at the Arena Playhouse, McCulloh Street at Biddle, on Friday, Oct. 31, at 8:30 p.m. All patrons appearing in costume willbe admitted at half price.

Curt Anderson of WMAR TV, Don Brooks, general manager of WEBB Radio, Mary Clayburn, public service director of WWIN Radio, and Ida Peters, entertainment editor of the AFRO – AMERICAN Newspapers will be on hand to judge the costumes during intermission. They will choose and award prizes to the most original, terrifying and funniest costumes.

"The Night Is My Enemy," bringing together some of the outstanding leading ladies of the Arena Players, is about Rosna, a blind girl, whose life is threatened by a mentally unbalanced killer who desires to eliminate anyone who is imperfect. This spine tingling mystery chiller is bound to have everyone sitting on the edge of their seats.

Cloisters

On Sunday Oct. 26 The Cloisters will have a Mini-Storytelling Festival from 12:00-4:00 p.m. Stories for children of all ages on topics such as dragons from foreign countries to Japanese legends will continue all afternoon.

Special guest will be Peter Valleutti, who will tell action stories and poetry that the children can participate in at 2:00 p.m.

Valleutti is a professor at Coppin State and has made many recordings of his owown children's stories and poetry.

Night Scene Seen

By Bob Matthews

The expected resurgence of activity downtown was stopped in its tracks Monday of the Social Security complex on Paca St., and there was indeed a mad scramble to acquire properties nearby.

Nightclub owners were excited over the prospects of increased business, and indeed, there are unmistakable signs that more and more people are taking advantage of what downtown has to offer.

Which is why it became so very strange that one piece of property which could be called choice, remains vacant.

The site in question was once calle The Checkmate and later became The Black lounge with a disco room on the second floor.

It went broke—in fact, we are told that many of the people who tried to keep the place afloat have never seen a penny on it. Strange, indeed, that with such a prime location, something should be at the spot.

Several people have tried to get a lease on the place, and reports reaching us say that the stumbling block has been the owner of the premises.

The owner insists on having the final word on what sort of business will occupy the spot, and he vehemently refuses to allow plans to be voiced as a condition of the lease arrangement.

Other club owners in the neighborhood say they would welcome an additional club in the block, for the area is fast becoming a fascinating nightime place to be.

Over on W. Franklin St., there is The Closet where incidently a birthday party for Brenda Alford is scheduled this Sunday night; The Place is up the street a bit where Regina runs a comfortable club.

The Marble Bar, No Fish Today and Hemenway's Pub are there for those into bluegrass, or hard rock; and Studio 30 is for the dancition over at the corner of N. Paca and Mulberry.

The Warehouse Arena is in the 400 block N. Paca, and the street lighting has been vastly improved since the opening of the BS complex. Twice, entrepreneurs have attempted to purchase the Black lounge site—both failed.

A new attempt is currently underway, and we don't want to say anything until the deal is set—we'll keep you informed.

On tap this Sunday at the Left Bank Jazz Society session will be Sun Ra and his Intergalactic Cosmos Arkestra.

It is, of course, impossible to describe Ra's music, which runs the gamut from eldtime swing a la Fletcher Henderson, through avant garde free form exploratory music, with occasional forays into bebop and ultra modern sounds.

QUIZ QUESTION: Have you ever wondered why the day manager of the Garrison Lounge is called Percy? Think about it—answer next week.

Over at The Spot on Monroe St., First Class is scheduled to play the room through the weekend. On Monday, Fabulous Friends and One is the major attraction...at Club International we are happy to report that manager Dave Ross is back on the scene, albeit on a limited basis, and is pounding out organ solos on weekends. You can look for Dave to take it a bit easier, for as he told me, "that illness was a frightening experience."...Incidentally, Monday nights at The International are fast becoming "the" place to be. In addition to John Lamkin and vocalist Eartha, the Warehouse Cousins Band put on a performance last week. It was so successful, that they will be back again this Monday to do some of their comedy skits...The Beautiesud goes to a new format this weekend, when local musicians are booked into the Pulse Pit spot. Andy Shuck is the headliner, along with Marc Cohen, piano; Terry Plumeri, bass, and Hugh Walker, drums...The Sportsmen's Lounge is presenting Carlos Johnson, along with Thomas Murray, organ, and Ralph Fisher, drums, tonight and tomorrow. At the Saturday afternoon jam sessions, El Prince will lead the all-stars for the 56.

FOR FUTURE PLANNING: One of the big musical events of the season will happen Saturday, Nov. 1, when the Dexter Gordon quartet, plus the Johnny Griffin quartet will play two shows, 8 p.m. and midnight. Tickets are now on sale, and it promises to be a gas. For the Sunday 1,3,5 set the Sunday day, Nov. 2, Big Nick Nicholas will move in with a quintet featuring Bobby Hill from D.C....the refurbished Ritz has scheduled next Wednesday, Oct. 29, for its grand opening, and the feature Fancy Lance on the intermediate level will be the features are the attraction matinees in the show lounge. The basement level will be featuring Hot Lunch who gave you an up-to-date account of the new sound.
