—Morgan fund

[illegible] more money has been [illegible] Attorney General George [illegible] Wilson told the AFRO this week. [illegible] the collecting arms of the [illegible] Policy Committee and [illegible] Attorney General's office that a [illegible] audit be conducted."

However, Wilson said that the [illegible] would not be performed until [illegible] and records of the [illegible] were supplied.

[illegible] the foundation to open [illegible] Nov. 11. At that time the [illegible] Policy Committee and [illegible] Attorney General's office will [illegible] audit.

[illegible] also said that he hoped the foundation would make available [illegible] management letter from the [illegible] conducted in 1979.

When asked whether the foundation had refused to open its files, [illegible] stated that there had been some question about providing the records since the foundation was not under state control. "There were questions of who the records would be opened to and under what circumstances."

Wilson, MSU foundation chairman, said, "That hasn't been discussed with us. No source has made any wish known to me about any audit.

"We are in some discussion about an audit. We're trying to free funds for the audit."

Wilson, referring to the charges of missing funds, added, "I feel it is all being orchestrated to get Morgan State University out of business."

MSU regent McMillan, who has charged that as much as $100,000 has [illegible] been diverted to the foundation's fund, said, "The [illegible] of the foundation can't get much worse. The foundation ought to be dissolved.

"I did look at some of the records and the handling of the funds was a bit careless and manipulative."

Delegate Lee, another highly vocal critic of the foundation's operations, hearing of the attorney general's decision to examine the foundation's books said, "If the files are explored with thought, it will be found that consistently there are lots of things missing."

Commenting on whether President Andrew Billingsley should resign she said, "I don't think anything should be done until we get some answers. I know that the answers are very laughable. The quality of education at Morgan is being threatened."

the formation of a "Truth Squad", which will tour the state in an effort to clarify Ronald Reagan's stance on a variety of issues.

The group, which was organized by Anne Arundel Co. executive Robert Pascal, also consists of State Sen. Aris T. Allen, R-21, Prince Georges Co. head, Lawrence Hogan, and a host of state GOP office-holders.

In the city, Rev. St. George Crosse has taken to the streets again in an effort to drum up support for Reagan. Crosse, who made a name for himself during the 1979 city comptroller's race with the same tactic, said that he will be walking the streets of Baltimore with a large sign calling for Reagan support in the days preceding the election.

Murphy and Lloyd both said their clients agreed to release the state from any civil liability in the case.

Lloyd told the court that it took a substantial amount of courage for the state's attorney to do what he did. Both defense attorneys praised the state's attorney and his assistant for their complete investigation and said the prosecutors and police continued investigating the case up until the end of the trial.

The shooting followed an argument over some property of Raymond Clay Sr., that had been stolen. Robert Clay turned himself into Howard County Police Department following the shooting and both brothers were jailed over night in the Howard County Detention Center.

In a statement released to the press, Clay said, "I am grateful that my record has been cleared and hopeful that my life can return to normal. My hope is that the charges might also be dropped in the hearts and minds of the public, especially those who are my friends and business associates.

"I am not bitter and I do not hold any grudge against those who wrongfully accused me, nor do I plan any legal action against them, even though it is within my right. I feel all parties have suffered enough."

The development of the new city of Columbia gave Clay his first opportunity as a competitive businessman. From a small firm run by his father, Raymond Clay Sr., Clay built a business whose initial assets were $2,500 but leaped to over $2 million yearly by 1975.

—Welfare game

director for the Baltimore County NAACP, and Carl Snowden, who serves as political action chairman for the Maryland State NAACP, see things differently.

"It is entirely racist," Burns told the AFRO. "We are doing everything we can to prevent it from going on the market."

Snowden described the game as "right wing."

"The object of the game is to see how many illegitimate babies you can get," Snowden said, saying that the game is played much like "Monopoly." "The more illegitimate babies you get, the more government benefits you get." He said that the game tries to make the statement that it is the working man and not the poor man who is in a rut.

Pramschufer and Johnson vehemently resent the racist charges.

"The worst charge that has been made against this game is that it is racist," Johnson told the AFRO. "Some people do not know what the term racist means.

"We are not trying to say that the white race is superior to the black race. There is no racial intent in this game at all.

"Neither are we attacking the people who are legitimately on welfare. What we are trying to get to is the welfare cheaters and the government workers who are getting rich off tax-payers' money while they sit and do nothing."

Johnson said that most of the research for the game was done in an all - white area where many people either worked for the government or were on welfare. He said that the area was picked specifically to avoid the race question.

Johnson went on to say that "people like Parren Mitchell and Carl Snowden represent "blacks of the past."

"People like Parren Mitchell and Carl Snowden represent the old welfare mentality," Johnson said. "They want to encourage as many blacks as possible to remain passively dependent on the system."

He added that Mitchell and Snowden represented the welfare system and suggested that "they would like to one day head the welfare empire themselves."

"Welfare is fundamentally immoral," Johnson said. "Whoever said that anybody had the right to fare well at the expense of somebody else?

"This game," he said, "is no more than a parody of the welfare system. The joke is not on the welfare recipient but on the working people."

Pramschufer said that although the object of the game is to get illegitimate babies, "we've never played the game where we accumulated more than 10 illegitimate babies."

He described the game as a parody on government liberalism and made a division between the producers and the non-producers. He too denied that the game has racial overtones.

"The people who are making the charges are being completely irresponsible," Johnson said. "We were very careful in our wording of the game and our critics are being very irresponsible."

The secretary of Health and Human Services, Patricia Harris, described the game as "racist and sexist" in a statement last week. Through efforts of the NAACP, it is being barred from some department stores. The Hecht Co. according to Snowden, initially had plans to carry the game, but following complaints from the NAACP, cancelled its stock.

Snowden also said that several suburban stores have refused to carry the game.

Johnson and Pramschufer say they plan to distribute the game nationally.

BY THE WAY...

By Joe Black

Are you one of those who is always asking, "Where is the political representation for our community?" Are you tiring of too little action and too much rhetoric? Would you like to see things turned around?

If you answered yes to those questions, then heed the advice of the National Coalition of Black Voter Participation when they urge us to become involved by locating the voter participation campaign in our town and offering our services. My friends, we have arrived at the time when we must become more sophisticated in our selection of political candidates. They all promise us a chicken in every pot, but the pages of history show that too many of them mean a chicken for those who have and unfulfilled dreams for those who have nothing except hope.

Thus, it requires our recognizing that the selection is more than Democrat or Republican, or Carter versus Reagan. We must listen to and evaluate those political leaders who project sincere plans that are designed to give us lasting dignity and self-respect via equality of justice and an opportunity to attain preparation for today's jobs so that we receive paychecks rather than handouts. To achieve this goal, we must not let political parties think that we are their robots.

So, register....think....and then vote.

If you ask me...

By Bettye Moss

Pretty Pom-Pom girls in Baltimore.

All this football season and last, we've admired the skilled performances of the pom-pom girls at University of Md. games, particularly those who look like us.

Lo and behold, quite by chance a week back, we discovered that one of them is a youngster we have watched grow up with our own children.

She is 19-year-old Lela Annette Clay, who lives on the College Park campus. She is a sophomore, majoring in dance therapy and animal science.

This may sound like an unusual double major, but you understand when you know a bit more about Lela.

She is a skilled dancer. (look for her next time — she has blonde hair and is the middle dancer on the first row, who leads the girls when they do that excellent can-can routine). She'll perform at Homecoming this Sat. Nov. 1.

One understands her interest in animal science when you learn she is a top horse lady (And, she's just 5 feet, 2, weighing only 112 pounds).

Since age 3, she has enjoyed outdoor sports, has ridden horses. At age 9, she was showing horses. At one time, she won enough prizes to have 13 of her own. Her favorite answered to the name of "touch of Magic."

Relatives say she is a good businesswoman. Friends say she is nice as can be, is very modest and unassuming about her achievements. It took three weeks to get her to pose for the accompanying photos.

Lela is truly a remarkable person and a good student too. She is a member of the A-circuit, — horse people understand that means the tops, as far as you can go in the hunter-jumper classification.

400 Awards

She is a member of the U. of Md.'s Equestrian Team and participates in competitions at colleges all over the East Coast and Maryland's leading point rider.

Just how good she is can be seen if one visits her home in Columbia. Her room is plastered with 400 awards and citations. Out of sight! She keeps in practice at the Columbia Horse Center when she can get time from her classes.

Lela is the youngest of five children of Dr. and Mrs. Earl Clay (Rene) of Columbia, former longtime residents of Walcott Ave. in northwest Baltimore. He's the surgeon. She is the director of psychodrama for the state with headquarters at Spring Grove Hospital.

And, Rene is as young looking as her five children. Seems only yesterday when we watched her caring them to Jack and Jill, classes and neighborhood events.

But, time has passed. They're all grown and gone into interesting pursuits. Oldest child, Janis, 29, is a staff psychologist at a Nashville Center, has finished Fisk U., and is a doctoral candidate at Vanderbilt University.

Michelle, 24, is an assistant designer for Time-Life, holds a degree from Skidmore, and is working on her master's.

Ricky, 22, finished George Washington University, was appointed to his post as research analyst with the Wage and Price Division by President Carter.

Youngest son, Earl Cranston Clay 3rd, 21, is a junior at the U. of Md. Baltimore County, majoring in biology and is much interested in space science.

Proud grandparents are: Mrs. Eugene Price (Maud), of Los Angeles, formerly of Nashville, where the late Dr. Price was a pharmacist for 30 years, and taught at Meharry Medical School.

Paternal grandmother is Mrs. Earl C. Clay Sr. (Lela Raines), Shreveport, La., formerly of Forest City, Ark., where the late Dr. Clay was a practicing dentist for over 30 years.

400 AWARDS for performances in horse shows have been won by 19 - year - old Lela A. Clay, shown on mounts at left. She is also a skilled dancer, is one of Pom Pom girls who shines at U. of Md. football games. See "If You Ask Me" for more.
