An analysis of the black vote in Baltimore

Standing firm against a massive conservative tide, Baltimore's black community turned out in better than respectable numbers on a rainy election day to vote their own best interests in key local, state and national contests.

Calculations based on results taken from nearly 100 AFRO Precincts selected heavily black polling places tell a story of an aroused black vote that turned out at a rate better than 60 percent.

The more than 130,000 black voters who cast ballots in Baltimore City, even without the weight of other thousands who voted in the counties, profoundly affected the city and state outcomes in these ways:

They gave President Carter 90 percent of their votes and the 130,000 plus voters this added up to was more than twice the 51,072 margin by which Carter carried Maryland. Citywide Carter won about 73 percent of the Baltimore vote.

The 95 percent that went to Carter, against three percent for President-elect Ronald Reagan, was better than the 91 percent Carter got in 1976 against former President Gerald Ford. Rep. John Anderson got one percent.

They gave attorney William "Billy" Murphy considerably more than half the 114,401 votes that elected him to the Supreme Bench; gave Judge Robert Bell more than half the 144,857 that reelected him; and their more than 40,000 votes Judge Elsbeth L. Bothe spelled the difference between reelection and defeat for her.

Judge Bothe, who received the support of Billy Murphy, Judge Bell and black leaders such as veteran NAACP figure Clarence M. Mitchell Jr., more than doubled the black vote received by Thomas Ward in edging him by 12,000-plus votes.

Again showed their ability to be selective by helping moderate Republican Senator Charles Mac Mathias carry Baltimore City for the first time by giving him almost the same vote as they gave his Democratic opponent although most blacks in the city are registered heavily Democratic.

Continued their strong support for Rep. Parren J. Mitchell by giving him nearly 90 percent of their vote in the 7th Congressional District.

By voting at a level considerably higher than the national turnout, Baltimore blacks defied the old-hand criticism that they won't vote on rainy days and projected themselves as a growing power in local and state politics, a power not to be ignored.

The AFRO Precincts are 100 selected polling places that represent a cross-section of the Baltimore black community. They are predominantly black precincts that contain roughly half the registered black voters and closely reflect, percentage wise, how the total black vote goes in the city.

666 — Election omen?

By Sue Williams
AFRO Staff Writer

It all began quite innocently on Election Day afternoon.

Ronald Reagan appeared to be winning his quest for the presidency by a landslide, much to the dismay of many Maryland voters.

Folks began to grumble about the evil times that were ahead, for black people in general, for the programs that have helped blacks get on their feet, for progress...

People remembered back to the televised debates, when, for some reason, supporters of President Carter were greeted with a Reagan tape when they called in the number given by ABC. Accident or trick?

Things just hadn't been going right for some time. It was no wonder, no surprise, really, that this man named Ronald Reagan somehow was managing to win, and by a landslide at that, when everybody thought it would be so close.

And then it happened. The Maryland State lottery number for election day, 1980, turned out to be 666.

That number, according to folks, means nothing but trouble. Referred to in the Bible in the book of Revelations, (13:17-18) it has been at times as associated with the devil, with the antichrist, with destruction and problems and who knows what else.

To add insult to injury, the president-elect happens to have six letters in his first name, six in his middle name, and six in his last name.

Ronald Wilson Reagan. Six six six!

Rocking chairs began to rock nervously and phones began to ring as the realization of just one more oddity to the long campaign began to take form.

"Seems awfully strange to me," mumbled one young girl. "This campaign has been strange all along. Look how Reagan has been supported by the Moral Majority. Whose morals and what majority?"

"And how," she continued, her eyes narrowing into an 'I told-you-so-position, did this whole election wind up being a landslide when just Sunday it was supposed to be so close?"

"It's the end of the world, the last days," quipped an old lady. "The Bible tells it all, how this kingdom we're in will fall and the kingdom of God will take over. It's been predicted for years."

We searched for a meaning, something to back up the growing feeling of discomfort so many people seem to be experiencing.

"Look at how they screwed up at the polling places yesterday," said a young man. "I have never seen so many black voters turn out for one election in all my life, and the television people, for some reason, said there was a light voter turnout in the black community."

"Something," he said quietly, "just ain't right."

According to a brief description of the number in the World Book Encyclopedia, the number is "mystical," of unknown meaning.

We called Methodists, Catholics and members of Jehovahs Witnesses, and others, searching for "the" meaning of the number.

Most of them did not know the meaning, although nearly everyone felt it had a meaning and that it wasn't good.

"I've heard my folks talk about that number, but I don't know what it means," said one young woman.

"The number 6 stands for man's shortcomings," offered another AFRO reader. "Three sixes stands for imperfection."

Does the number mean the new president can be associated with the antichrist?

Nobody would go that far. Someone did mention, however, that in the story, "The Omen," the little boy named Damien, child of the devil, grew up to be president of the United States.

Just coincidence, mind you. Except that nobody really seems to believe it one bit.

Too many coincidences have never been good news, people are saying. In fact, when too many coincidences pile up...isn't that the end of chance and the beginning of something else?

Six, six, six, the winning digits on Election Day may have brought all manners of superstition and speculation to the surface.

We expect 666 to provoke many more odd conversations as Ronald Wilson Reagan's era begins.

Parents face court action

The list of hundreds of parents facing court action for failure to have their children properly immunized has narrowed down to about 20 parents.

Two weeks ago the list stood at 655 parents who had failed to have their children immunized by the Sept. 26 deadline and were responsible for the students being excluded from school until they obtain the necessary shots.

Parents should receive letters this week from officials of the Baltimore-city public schools, informing them that a summons is on its way and that they must appear before a judge in District Court.

These parents face a $50 fine for each offense and according to one school official, some judges regard each day the student has missed school as an offense. If, for example, a student has missed 20 days and the judge finds the parents guilty of neglect, the parent would face a $1,000 fine.

Also the judge can rule on how the student must make up any missed schoolwork. Students could be required to spend a certain number of hours in the library as well as making arrangements with teachers to do make up assignments.

"We really hate to have to do it this way," said Robert C. Lloyd, assistant superintendent of pupil services. "But we don't mind going to court if it's going to tell the parent we're serious about getting the student back in school."

Lloyd also stated that more parents were taken to court last year as a result of action taken by school officials. "We're really pleased with the number this year... only 20 out of 132,000 is good."

But he added that there could be as many as 300 students still out of class. He said that list probably includes drop-outs as well as pupils who have moved and not notified their school.

About the year 1500, the Aztec city on the site of present-day Mexico City had an estimated 100,000 people.

Thinking-of-you cards to the family of Louis Edward Fuller, who was given last rites on Saturday at the Church of God of Anderson (Monroe and Saratoga Sts.)

His wife, Anne Calhoun Fuller of Arunah Ave., daughter, Leda, a graduate student at the University of Illinois, survive. Also, three sisters, Mattie Carter, Clara Wheeler and Emma Morse; and brothers, John, Andrew and Frederick Fuller.

Cuff notes: Mr. Fuller, a graduate of S.C. State College, member of Alpha Phi Alpha, was employed by the Long Island Railroad.

Rev. Alexander Wright came from Champagne, Ill., where he is mentor for the deceased's daughter, Rev. James S. Jackson, minister of the church, officiated.

Day after the funeral, Mrs. Fuller rushed her brother, William Calhoun, to Veterans Hospital.

Big wedding this weekend (Saturday, Nov.h8, 2:30pp.m. at Bethel AME Church), unites Vanessa Yvette Reid and Rev. Andy Leo Lawler Jr.

Bride-to-be is daughter of AME Bishop and Mrs. Frank Madison Reid and Mrs. Adronis Carter Reid. Reception follows at Coppin State College Center.

Wed 70 years

Happy 70th anniversary to Mr. and Mrs. George Sydes, (Bertie), of Towson. They renew their vows on Sunday at St. James AUMP Church, where they were married by his father.

They are a delightful couple. We hope space will permit us to tell you all about them in an early issue.

Cuff note: The Sydes are very much into today's living — they're very active, play pinochle, enjoy life, each other and their neighbors.

When we visited them on Halloween Eve, they had neat packages of home made cookies and candies ready at the front door to give to their neighborhood children's friends.

Improving at home — Mrs. William C. March (J. Roberta), co-owner of the funeral home which bears his name.

She sustained minor injuries when she fell while attending the morticians' convention in New Orleans last month.

Also at the convention: Mr. March, their sons, Erich and Victor, and daughter-in-law, Lola.

If you ask me

Other Baltimore morticians there: Joseph Russ and Lloyd Estep.

A large number of Maryland's Prince Hall Masons, led by Grand Master Samuel T. Daniels (and Mrs. Daniels), were in Orlando, Fla., for the United Supreme Council sessions.

Baltimore Masonic leaders there included James T. Dorsey, David Scott, and wife, Elsie; William Morton, whose wife, Betty, stopped off in Virginia for a meeting of the Epicureans' board, before joining the group.

Also there, Brooks Waters, who was among those presented special honors; the George Evanses, John Hawkins, Melvin Joneses, Marian Barclay, to name a few.

More people moving about

Beautine DeCosta Lee is back from a three-week trip which took her to Greece, Egypt, Jordan and Israel.

She went along with her daughter (Dr. Miriam Willis and her lawyer-husband, A. W. Willis of Memphis. Trip was sponsored by the Church of God in Christ.

Here in Baltimore visiting relatives is Josephine Wallace, who has been a State Department career officer since 1956. Her last tour of duty was 18 months in Paris. She has all kinds of exciting experiences to share with friends . . says she may not rejoin the service, will settle here in the states.

Her Baltimore sisters are Gladys Wallace and Frances Lucas. She accompanied them to the Big Sisters benefit card party a week back, and had an opportunity to see old friends.

Also here visiting her hometown relatives — Ruth Miller Craig of Kwtchikan, Alaska, where her husband, Craig, is the retired Coast Guardsman, and former head of the American Legion in that area.

Baltimore kin includes, sisters, Veronica Dorsey, Vonzella Murray and brothers, Connie and Charles Miller. Another sister, Roberta Miller, Tacoma Washington, came home for the family reunion... The Millers are members of an old East Baltimore family, children of Ruth and Robert Miller, who lived for years on Brentwood Ave.

Miller brothers residing in N.Y. are Alexander and Burnett.
