Students selected for assembly pages

Nineteen Baltimore area youngsters have been selected to spend two weeks in Annapolis serving as legislative aides while attending sessions of the Maryland State General Assembly.

The program, coordinated by the State Department of Education, provides also for four alternates, and, explains Malcolm Dutterer, BCPS director of Student Relations, offers students room and board with host families in Annapolis as well as salaries.

Baltimore's pages were selected through school- and citywide application processes, and prior to the Jan. 14 General Assembly will attend a one-day training session where assignments will be given.

The students must have an interest in government, and in their capacity as pages are assigned to the district from where they are sent," said Dutterer.

"Our students will work with the Baltimore delegation and for variety may be assigned to one individual per week, a senator and a delegate. In this way they work in both the House and the Senate."

The students work may involve carrying messages, daily committee schedule updates, bill book maintenance, distribution of amendments on the floor and information on committee hearings.

"They get a good behind-the-scenes view of the overall operation," Dutterer pointed out.

In schools, individual social projects will be assigned as part of the student page activity.
