If you ask me

It was then 6:47 a.m., and Delta 743 was due to depart at 7 a.m.

It seemed like hours while the agent checked the computer to confirm that she indeed had a round trip ticket, then to figure out the additional charge because she was returning ahead of the scheduled discount rate time.

It was three minutes before departure before the papers were written, the $10 lost ticket fine added and a new ticket issued.

We raced to the gate with only seconds to spare. (The head agent had already advised the plane would NOT wait.)

Cuff notes: Two hours later daughter called to advise safe arrival in Atlanta and to report that the "lost" ticket had fallen in grandson's blanket. Never again.

King Family

Aboard the same flight to Atlanta were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. King, (Gloria), their son, Martin, and daughter, Pam.

They were en route to the Georgia City for the Saturday afternoon wedding of their son, Anthony, and Rosalin Smith.

Her parents Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Smith (Sadie), and her grandmother, Mrs. Marjorie Brown of Baltimore were also aboard.

The wedding took place at the newlyweds new home on Oakpark Lane. The bridegroom is an accountant with Gourmet Services. They plan a July honeymoon in Mexico.

More cuff: New mothers with infants are not the only airline passengers who get to the ticket agent only to discover they have no ticket.

On Saturday we observed at least three passengers who had to pay extra fare or miss a flight because the ticket was nowhere to be found. One young blond woman had left hers in D.C., and could not fork up the additional $63 required so she didn't make that Atlanta flight.

We watched a middle aged man with two handsome briefcases walk to the agent, put the brief cases up and start looking for his ticket.

After that exercise, he closed the briefcases and pulled the ticket envelope from his inside coat pocket. Honest!!

Lovely lady

Baltimore has been fortunate throughout the years in having in its midst persons who have stood out because of their thoughtfulness and kindness to others.

Such a person was Mrs. Cora Louise Chatman Lewis. She was 82 when she died April 27, at St. Agnes Hospital.

She was memorialized May 1, at Douglas Memorial Church, where she served 51 years. For 27 years, her beautiful soprano voice was heard on the church choir.

This column has known Mrs. Lewis as a devoted wife and mother because we had close contacts through this newspaper. Her husband and son played an integral part in the growth of this newspaper.

Two sons

Mrs. Lewis husband of 67 years, Arthur L. Lewis, was for 44 years a supervisor in the AFRO's mechanical department. Everybody fondly called him "Pa Lewis."

The "Pa" was adopted by fellow employees because the two Lewis sons were also AFRO employees.

Tazwell, who died in 1971, was a photo-engraver for 20 years. Surviving son, William, also a photoengraver for years, now is a platemaker in the AFRO's new reproduction system.

Mrs. Lewis was a lovely lady who extended herself to help others, offer a kind word, helping hand.

She called this column recently to comment on an item and offer encouragement. Even though she was ill and from arthritis, her voice was cheerful and confident.

Cuff notes: Her husband, Arthur (Pa) Lewis is confined to a northwest Baltimore nursing home. Relatives and friends have thought it wise not to notify him of her death.

God's blessings on Pa Lewis and his family.

Earl Grant

Milton Earl Grant, the wealthy banker who was eulogized in Los Angeles April 23, had Baltimore ties.

Mr. Grant, 89, founded and headed Family Savings and Loan Association. It was founded in 1948 and is one of the nation's top 100 black businesses, with assets in excess of $117 million.

Baltimore area kin include sister, Helen Whittaker and her husband, Yancy Whittaker, both retired Baltimore area educators; and a niece Mrs. Clifton Murray (Ethel).
