Many mourn cycle champ

Arthur Lee Brown, the 24-year-old motorcycle champ, was a beloved person.

Hundreds of fellow cyclists, relatives and friends mourned his untimely death last week.

He was killed instantly Sunday morning, May 1, when his cycle hit a gravel pit and landed in a tree at Broadneck and Jones Rd., in Anne Arundel County.

He was an experienced and skilled rider who had won over 100 trophies, plaques, citations and monetary awards.

Community Baptist Church in Jessup, Md., where he joined as a youth, was packed for the Thursday evening wake (May 7), and the funeral services the next morning.

Some 100 floral pieces banked the casket and every available area of the church. The Elizabeth Phillips Funeral Home arranged the overflow in the church vestibule.

Young Brown's cycle helmet was buried with him. In the eulogy by the minister, the Rev. Robert T. Hurtte, and the family tribute, the deceased was remembered as "an astute and brilliant individual who was friendly to everyone."

It was also noted that he had "unusual mechanical ability and at a young age was able to fix any motorized vehicle.

100 cycles

At the age of 8, he mastered his contractor father's 18 - wheeler trailer. When he grew up, he purchased his own truck and often accompanied his dad.

He was self - employed, as a long distance tractor trailer driver.

Some 100 fellow motorcyclists, wearing their uniforms, turned out for the wake, and accompanied the funeral procession to Meadowbridge Memorial Park in Elkridge for burial.

A police escort led the two mile long caravan, which also included 90 autos, in addition to the 100 cycles.

There were few dry eyes along the way.

Pallbearers were members of his motorcycle club. They were: Stanley Cherky, Terry Matthews, Arnold Foster, Jean Thompson, Frank Moore and Stanley Nosiotka.

Survivors are his father, William S. Brown; stepmother, Mrs. Ima F. Brown; daughter, Aknesha Louise; sisters, Brenda and Valerie; brothers, Peter, William, Henry and Robert; and godparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Dunlap.

Preakness

Even if you are not a race horse fan, you can not escape the fact that the 106th annual Preakness will be run at Pimlico in northwest Baltimore on Saturday, (May 16).

The week's Preakness activities have tied up the town, beginning with the Sunday parade in the rain. Traffic in the downtown area was at a standstill.

If you live in Baltimore and care less about the Preakness, people from other parts of the country care more. They'll be here in droves.

We've already received the annual call from a Minneapolis friend seeking a ticket. He always waits until the last minute, but he'll probably locate one.

Already here for the big race are the Joseph Overtons of N.Y., guests of the Joe Felions.

Bill and Jessie Harris are here from Philly, guests of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Owings.

Also in their party, Dr. and Mrs. Chester McGuire and Col. and Mrs. William Johnson, all of D.C., and Don Reeds of Gaithersburg.

Here—from—Flint, Mich., Frances Faithful, house guest of her sister and brother - in - law, Dr. and Mrs. Lionel Desbordes. Also with them, his brother and sister - in - law, the Clarence Desbordeses of D.C.

Here from Norfolk, guests of the Tom McPherson, are Dr. Madge Hibler Allen and her husband, Dr. Arthur Allen. (They're on the Norfolk State and Va. State faculties).

Our town's Dr. Pearl Cole Brackett, a member of the Pimlico Jockey Club, will provide her guests with an ideal seating location at the finish line.

In her party, Pauline Watts, Audrey Norris, Lydia Mussenden, Margaret Proctor and Dora Hutchinson.

Joy at Grace

Grace Memorial Baptist Church at Chase and Eden Sts., in East Baltimore, has a rich and long history.

Organized in 1927, it was founded by the Rev. Albert J. Greene. The late Rev. S. T. Redd was associate minister.

Current pastor is the dynamic Rev. Alfred C. D. Vaughn.

Our visit to Grace last Sunday was because the Mother's Day speaker was oldest daughter, Rev. Marie Phillips Braxton, associate minister of Allen AME Church.

Mothers who live to see their offspring grow up, and listen as they develop a theme and have a meaningful message, have to be proud. We were. (Her theme, "Be Strong").

It is only when youngsters mature and get out in the world that you discover the things you emphasized at home had meaning for them.

We couldn't help but be moved by the preacher's reference to her childhood and her remembrance of the days when her grandma was confined with an amputated leg, and her recollection of grandma's courage.

And her description of her pre - teen memories of the home on Bentalou St., being turned into a hospital to care for her late father.

Cuff notes: — Rev. Vaughn and his members make visitors feel welcome — no put on — just warm handshakes and smiles.

colorful. Janet Dyson is organist.

It's always good to see the pastor's wife active and busy when you visit a church. You know that means family support. Mrs. Vaughn, (Lillian), is that kind of friendly individual.

Also reminisced with longtime friend, Esther Harris, whom we have not seen for over 20 years.

At the door to greet us as we left, Mrs. Virginia Howell, widow of Turner Howell, a guard at the AFRO before his death in 1969.

Nice gesture: Beautiful flowers on the altar honored the minister's mother, Mrs. Mildred Vaughn, who was named Mother of the Year.

The church has a baptismal pool. Baptized on Sunday were 8 - year - old Terry Thompson and Miss Kay Laws.

Ailing

The church bulletin listed the following sick members: Mrs. Amazie Faulkner, Arthur Ave.; Mrs. Annie Dorsey, Waters Towers; Mrs. Bessie Smith, Zion Towers, Mrs. Vergie Mackey, and Mrs. Martha Warren, Waters Towers.

And, Mrs. Emma Lockley, Guilford Ave.; Mrs. Mary Holt, Belair Hill Nursing Home; Mrs. Gertrude James, Pleasant Manor Nursing Home; Mrs. Sallie Jackson, Finney Ave.;

This above knowledge put in the form of a question to Battaglia in the interview this week drought the affirmative response.

Battaglia and Robinson, both added the fact that Pomerleau was not available Tuesday so that the question could be asked him directly.

DOPE NO. 1 PRIORITY

With Robinson "in the No. 2 spot," Battaglia said he and Robinson will work together in the immediate future on the pressing problems: (1) Narcotics which both said have top priority (2) More black persons and women on the force and (3) Making the streets safe.

Both are quoted as saying and agreeing jointly

"Organized crime is going too fast. No one can hold him. We're going to have trouble here in Baltimore like we have never seen before."

"No doubt about it.

"We're going to get out in the community.

"We're going to see churches, ministers, private citizens, industries, business.

MORE COPS NEEDED

"We want to fill the 300 vacancies we have now on the force. We have enough money. A starting officer gets $15,000 beginning July 1. It comes from the city.

BATTAGLIA: "Bishop Robinson will be Deputy Commissioner of Operations with 2,000 men under his command.

"Bishop Robinson will cause significant reduction in our problems if we have proper support and citizen involvement in all respects.

ROBINSON: "When I move into the No. 2 spot, I will have 80 percent of the Department of Patrol, CID, Traffic and Community Services, four officers under me.

"We'll do our best to tackle problems. We have to. Narcotics, the worst ever, the hard stuff, has got our youth.

"We have to get the young people off these corners and into jobs. We are taking a good hard look at this and we have some ideas.

JOBS NEEDED

"The new administration in Washington has to find a way to get jobs, to restyle industry, to create jobs for youngsters and minorities. We must work to do this. We can't have them on the corners all day long. It's up to Washington and up to us

"I plan to be accessible all the time and highly visible in the community. Together we are going to make an all - out effort to get community involvement in reducing crime in Baltimore.

"People will be able to get to me and they will be able to get to me to help when they can't get anyone else."

BATTAGLIA: When I am called to be commissioner, I will serve

"Meantime Robinson, the No. 2 man, and I will work together constantly. He and I have worked together for many a year. I recommended him to become Chief of Patrol.

"I have recommended him each time he was moved up.

"If I have anything to do with it he will become Commissioner when I retire."

His salary becomes "around $40,000."

Battaglia at age 68, moved up from 1940 when he became a uniform policeman at $40 a week, to sergeant in 1947; lieutenant in 1954; captain in 1958; inspector in 1961; chief of patrol in 1966 and deputy commissioner in 1971 and acting commissioner in May, 1981

He said, "I was really into it in the Civil Rights era. I will never forget Dr. Lillie Jackson. She would call me late at night and say, 'Now you know so - and - so doesn't belong in jail Go get him out.'"

"I would go and check and sure enough what she said was true. When they said let him stay in until tomorrow, I said no, he gets out tonight like Lillie Jackson said.

"We worked together and we made progress in this town."

Robinson said his salary of a maximum of $44,000 will not change when he becomes Deputy Commissioner of Operations.

45 BLACK COMMISSIONERS

There are 45 black police commissioners in the United States.

The chiefs of the Police Department in large cities are as follows:

William Hart — Detroit; Bertell Jefferson - Washington, D.C.; Lee Brown - Atlanta; Hubert Williams - Newark, N.J.; Joseph Almond, Atlantic City and William Jordan - Portland, Oregon.

Deputy Commissioner Bishop Robinson, on the force since 1954, is national president of NOBLE, an organization of nearly 400 ranking police executives which includes 44 chiefs, police commissioner, sheriffs and U.S. marshalls from 40 states and 52 cities, the Virgin Islands, Bermuda, Haiti, Trinidad.

1,500 HERE IN JULY

The organization which represents law enforcement agencies from local, state, county and federal levels meets in Baltimore July 17 - 19 with 1,500 delegates.

The Hilton Hotel is headquarters with the delegates taking over the Hilton and Holiday Inn downtown.

Robinson told the AFRO strongly:

"Vice - President George Bush has been asked to come "because we want to hear what he has to say. He'll have to talk to us as adults.

BUSH COMING?

"Bush has not confirmed yet. We don't know what he's waiting on. He needs to come and let us know what the White House means when it says crime is the No. 1 priority of the government. He has to tell us what they intend to do and we're law enforcement agents not children."

Also on the NOBLE convention agenda are Cong. Parren J. Mitchell, assistant Attorney General D. Lowell Jensen; Former Ambassador Andrew Young; Max Robinson, ABC - TV World News Tonight anchorman; NAACP's Benjamin Hooks, Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown and other criminal justice heads, leaders of industry community and federal government agencies.

Among workshops are "The Resurgence of Violent Crime Against Blacks and Other Minorities," "Police, Public, and Media Relations," "Community Anti - Crime Programs - a State of The Art," and "Role of the Community in Crime Reduction."

In addition to Deputy Commissioner Robinson, president of NOBLE, other national officers are Vice President Atkins Warren, chief, Gainsville, Florida Police Dept.; Treasurer Burtell Jefferson, chief, Washington Metro Police; Gilbert Branche, chief county detectives, Philadelphia, Penn., Past President; William Bracey, chief of Patrol, New York City, Sergeant At Arms

The Baltimore Hilton is convention headquarters. Registration begins at 1 p.m., Tuesday July 14. Contact: Bishop L. Robinson, 601 E. Fayette St., Baltimore, Md. 21202. (301) 396 - 2080.

Robinson's career

Until this week's promotion, Bishop L. Robinson, 54, has been Deputy Commissioner, Services Bureau, since 1977. He is now No. 2 man, Deputy Commissioner Operations Bureau.

1973-1977 — Chief — Patrol Division

1973-74 — Major-director — Central Records Eastern
