Palmer fed up with strike, raps owners and players

Jim Palmer has had it.

The Orioles' 3 - time Cy Young Award winner says if the baseball strike isn't settled in two weeks, there would be no reason to resume play this season.

"I've lost interest in the season and a lot of guys feel the same way," he said Monday following a workout with nine of his teammates at Towson State University.

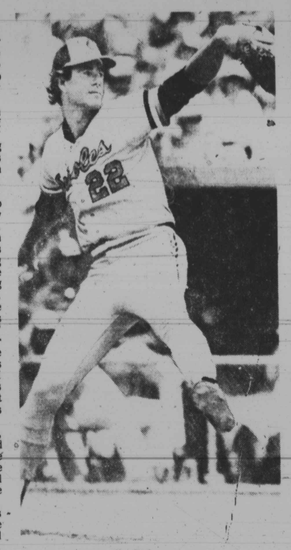
Palmer has had no trouble keeping busy during the 33 - day strike. Besides working out with the Orioles, Palmer has been pitching batting practice for a Baltimore sandlot team and tending to his business interests.

He has also made personal appearances promoting "Jockey" underwear, will appear in an upcoming episode of "Love Boat," is negotiating with MGM for a movie part and is scheduled to read a part for the TV series "Dynasty."

At the workout, however, Palmer's mind was on baseball and he criticized the owners, the players and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"I really don't see us playing the rest of the year," the 35 - year - old righthander said.

"The only fair way to settle it is through binding arbitration, a third party. Once you get that, both sides come in with more rational offers. But I don't think that will happen. This is hurting, killing the game," he said.



Jim Palmer
'binding arbitration solution'

Palmer said the owners forced the strike in order to "teach the players a lesson" and the players are mainly interested in "freedom and the money it brings."

But his harshest comments were reserved for Kuhn, who Palmer said lacked backbone.

McMillan signs for mil, but Colts may need more

The Owings Mills complex of the Baltimore Colts was brimming with optimism Tuesday as the team announced the signing of its No. 1 draft pick.

Fullback Randy McMillan, his signature affixed to a 4-year contract reputed to be worth in excess of $1 millon dollars, presented a picture of enthusiasm.

Colts owner Robert Irsay and head coach Mike McCormack beamed at the well-proportioned 6-1, 225-pound bruiser from the University of Pittsburgh, and joined with some media folk in hailing his acquisition as "just what the doctor ordered."

Randy McMillan
what the doctor ordered?

But is he enough?

Baltimore football struggled through a 7-9 season last year, sputtering after a fairly good start and then closing with three straight losses.

Certainly, addition of the promising McMillan in a backfield with last year's rookie sensation, Curtis Dickey, should bolster the Colt offense.

But the 1980 defeats were suffered by defensive lapses, not by offensive shortcomings. The defense must be tightened if the Colts plan a serious AFC East title run. They allowed 346 yards and 24 points-a-game last year, more than even the most avid fans had a right to expect the offense to produce consistently. . . . . LACY.

Colts-Skins contest to aid local 'Buddies'

The Baltimore Colts announced Thursday that Buddies, Inc. will share the proceeds from their Aug. 22 preseason game with the Washington Redskins at Memorial Stadium.

Buddies, Inc. is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to sponsor the Baltimore City Police Youth Clubs and Camps. The arrangement between the Colts and Buddies will replace Colt Nite, a fund-raising event traditionally held each summer.

The proceeds have been used to help finance the activities of the Police Youth Clubs throughout the city and the two summer camps for Baltimore city boys and girls.

Bailey Thomas, president of Buddies, Inc., said, "We're happy to be continuing our relationship with the Colts in this way, and feel sure that this new concept of supporting the Police Youth Clubs will be very appealing both to present and to future contributors."

"Because of the change in training methods over the years in professional, football, the entertainment value of Colt Nite has diminished," said Colts general manager Dick Szymanski.

"In recent years, it has actually been more of a scrimmage and not as attractive to the fans, and we think this new concept of working with Buddies to help the young people of Baltimore gives us the opportunity not only to continue a 30-year relationship, but to develop a potentially better fund-raising vehicle for them."

NFL camps offer clinics for black-college coaches

Coaches at Morgan State University, Howard and 42 other predominately black colleges are attending National Football League training camps in a project designed to assist in the improvement of black campus football.

A total of 163 coaches began classroom sessions this week and will continue to work with NFL teams through July.

NFL club presidents approved the program at a meeting last March and will pay the coaches' travel and housing expenses.

"The purpose of the program is to provide the coaches with an opportunity to become acquainted with the terminology of professional football and to learn some of the coaching techniques that may be applied on the collegiate level," the NFL said.

The NFL teams playing host to the choaches are: ATLANTA — Tuskegee Institute; BALTIMORE — Morgan State; BUFFALO — Elizabeth City (N.C.) State, Hampton Institute; CHICAGO — Grambling; CINCINNATI — Central (Ohio) State, Fisk; CLEVELAND — Fayetteville (N.C.) State, Howard; DALLAS — Bishop, Langston; DENVER — Winston Salem (N.C.) State; PHILADELPHIA — Virginia Union, Delaware State; PITTSBURGH — Johnson C. Smith, West Virginia State; ST. LOUIS — Alabama A&M, Lincoln (MO.); SAN DIEGO — Southern University; SAN FRANCISCO — Jackson (Miss.) State; SEATTLE — Alcorn (Miss.) State; TAMPA BAY — Florida A&M; WASHINGTON — Virginia State, Cheney (Pa.) State.

Cops wait for Reggie to claim almost-car

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police in Brooklyn aren't exactly holding their breath for the New York Yankees' Reggie Jackson to come claim his stolen car, but then again, there isn't that much car to claim.

"He hasn't called about the car yet, or what's left of the car," said police officer Carl Anselmo of the 69th Precinct Tuesday.

The car, a red 1978 Mercedes Benz 450, was stolen July 8 "from within the confines of the 19th Precinct" — Manhattan's upper east side, where the Yankees slugger is known to frequent.

Police recovered the vehicle in a weeded area of Brooklyn and arrested four men who were caught stripping it.

"The doors and the trunk were gone, the wheels were gone," Sgt. Jeffrey Kracht of the 66th Precinct anti - crime unit said. "The engine, the transmission and the basic frame — that's all we found."

The four men, each charged with burglary and criminal possession of stolen property, were identified by police as: Carlo Caruso, 23, 2113 E. 65th St.; Anthony Grado, 17, 610 E. 85th St.; Steve Russo, 21, 952 E. 88th St.; and Jerry Panico, 21, 973 E. 94th St., all Brooklyn.

Voting Rights Act rally set in Richmond on August 1

By Bill Worrell
Staff Writer

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference will hold a march and rally in Richmond at noon August 1 in support of extension of the Voting Rigbts Act.

The Rev. Curtis W. Harris of Hopewell, president of the Virginia unit of the SCLC, said National SCLC President Dr. Joseph E. Lowery will lead the demonstration which is expected to draw people from "every area of the state."

A Congressional subcommittee is conducting hearings on the measure which has been hailed as the single most important piece of civil rights legislation passed. It is scheduled to expire in 1982 unless extended.

"The politics of Virginia precludes a sensitivity to the needs of black and poor people" Harris charged in a news conference announcing the rally. The state's politicians "have no clear loud voice in support of the needs of the masses," he said. The rally, similar to ones held in Alabama and South Carolina that drew 15,000 collectively, is aimed at "raising the level of consciousness" of the people so they will speak out on the need for the act, Harris said.

He said the chances for extension are related to whether "we can succeed in reminding people what it was like before the act was passed."

A steering committee which will organize the rally is scheduled to meet in Richmond July 6, Harris said.

At a news conference in Norfolk, Lowery outlined the purposes of the demonstration:

— To spell out to all Americans, especially to Virgininans, the danger of loosing the most important piece of legislation inacted in modern times. The Voting Rights Act makes the right to vote, to hold public office and the right to select the candidate of your choice a reality for millions of Americans who would dare to dream of the possibility to do so.

— To demonstrate the unpopsition to the extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

— To remind Americans and especially Virginians of Selma, Alabama in 1965 and the blood, sweat and tears lost to bring the Voting Rights Act into being.

— To build a base of unity in the black and progressive community out of which our survival can be assured.

— To build a coalition of concern among those who believe in freedom and justice for all.

— To raise the level of consciceneess and expectation among all the Americans, but especially among black Americans.

Among the many Black leaders who occupied high places in New Deal councils was Robert L. Vann, editor of the Pittsburgh Courier and special assistant to the U.S. Attorney General.

Mrs. Hayden receives UNC faculty study award

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. — Mrs. Linda B. Hayden, instructor of mathematics at Elizabeth City State University, has received a UNC Board of Governor's Faculty Study Assignment Award.

The award, which allows her to pursue a year of doctoral study, was also received by fifteen other faculty members from seven campuses of the University of North Carolina system.

The selection of Mrs. Hayden brings to three the number of ECSU personnel to receive the award since the program was implemented in 1979.

The UNC program was "established as part of the state plan for the further elimination of racial duality to help increase the proportion of faculty members with doctorates at the baccalaureate institutions, especially at traditionally black schools."

A native of Portsmouth, Mrs. Hayden holds degrees from Virginia State University and the University of Cincinnati.

In 1980 and 1981, she was the recipient of "Authorship" grants from the National Science Foundation, which were awarded by the Mid - Atlantic Center on Educational Computing (MACEC). The grants enabled her to study the development of computer assisted instruction modules, at North Carolina A and T State University and Hampton Institute.

Mrs. Hayden will use the UNC award to study toward a Ph.D. degree in Computational and Applied Mathematics at Old Dominion University. She indicated that heavy emphasis will be placed on computer science.

Chairwoman of the ECSU Regional Math Contest Committee, Mrs. Hayden is a member of the Mathematics Association of America, Beta Kappa Chi Scientific Honor Society, and the Kappu Mu Epsilon Mathematics Honor Society.

Prior to joining the ECSU faculty, she held positions at Norfolk State University, Southeastern Christian College, the University of Kentucky and at Kentucky State University.

Summer enrichment program picks 35 minority students

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Patricia Polk is one of 35 minority health science majors participating in an eight-week residential academic enrichment program, the 1981 Summer Academic Advancement Program (SAAP), at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The summer program, conducted from May 31 through July 29, 1981, is the fourth component of the year-round four-part enrichment - retention Health Careers Academic Advancement Program, sponsored by the NC Health Manpower Development Program and funded with a grant from the Health Careers Opportunity Program (HCOP), Office of Human Resources • Opportunity, Health Resources Administration, Department of Health and Human Services.

Miss Polk, a graduate of Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Roberta Polk, 9822 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, MD.

The SAAP participants are engaged in a broad range of academic enrichment experiences including 192 contact hours in advanced biology, chemistry, mathematics, and physics (molecular biology, physiology, biochemistry, quantitative analysis of biomedical problems, and biostatistics); advanced reading techniques to improve reading rate and comprehension; and review and practice sessions to develop test sophistication and techniques for standardized professional admissions examinations.

Also, the SAAP participants will be involved in a number of health sciences and medical issues seminars; clinical observations in area health care agencies and an educational field trip to Washington, D.C. to visit health agencies, professional health care delivery and service [illegible] minority and other disadvantaged students being trained and employed in health careers, in order to increase the availability and accessibility of quality health care services in minority and poor communities.

Successful summer enrichment experiences for minority students positively impact upon the size of the pool of minority students interested in entering health professions.

health science majors in order to enhance their competitiveness for admission to, retention in, and graduation from graduate and professional health programs.

Dr. LaVonia Allison, NCHMDP director, stated, "We have an excellent group of students who have the potenial, the interest, and the commitment to successfully achieve their goal to become health professionals.

The experiences afforded them this summer will bring them closer to their goals."

A major goal of the NC Health Manpower Development Program, an interinstitutional program of the University of North Carolina [illegible] is to increase the [illegible] of minority and other disadvantaged students being trained and employed in health careers, in order to increase the availability and accessibility of quality health care services in minority and poor communities.

Morris College gets $80,000 as gift from Baptist women

SUMTER, S.C. — The Baptist Woman's Missionary Convention of South Carolina has given nearly $80,000 to Morris College in Sumter during the 1980 - 81 fiscal year.

A recent gift of $42,000 was presented to Morris College President Dr. Luns C. Richardson at the organization's state meeting held recently in St. George.

The convention is a state - wide organization of women of the Baptist Churches of South Carolina.

Included in the financial gifts from the baptist women are also contributions from the Junior Missionaries. Mrs. Gladys Goforth, state advisor.

"This gift will enhance our program tremendously, said Dr. Richardson.

He praised the baptist women for their consistent support to Morris College and cited Dr. Anna D. Reuben, woman's convention president, for her dynamic leadership.

"Unquestionably, the baptist women of this state have contributed significantly to the forward thrust of Morris College," he added.

The gift has been allocated to supplement the endowment program with $12,000, and the remaining $30,000 for operating expenses of the college.

Meharry names interim dean

NASHVILLE, Tn. — The appointment of Dr. Charles William Johnson, to the position of interim vice-president for academic affairs and interim dean of the School of Medicine of Meharry Medical College has been announced by Dr. Richard Lester, president.

Johnson, a Meharry graduate, presently serves as dean of the School of Graduate Studies and Research. A faculty member in the Department of Microbiology since 1949, he served as the chairman of that department from 1959-1971.

Under Johnson's leadership, the School of Graduate Studies and Research was initiated at Meharry in 1967. He also organized a doctoral studies program that offers degrees in four scientific disciplines.

Since 1970, Johnson has developed and administered the Special Medical - Master of Medical Sciences program, the Summer Biomedical Sciences Program, the Research in Biomedical Sciences Program, the International Health Sciences Center, and the Sickle Cell Center. He also served as Chairman of the Building Committee for the Harold D. West Basic Sciences Center.

For 25 years he has placed special emphasis on student research through annual Student Research Day activities.
