If You Ask Me

By Bettye Moss

Hats off!

It was early Thursday evening when we entered Phillips Restaurant in Harborplace.

The crowd was just beginning to gather, and that gave this reporter an opportunity to observe people.

And that's how we noticed the young black, soft - spoken, smiling waitress.

She looked good in her uniform. She was not a bit flustered when the party of 10 took forever to make up its mind. She waited patiently and smiled, answering questions in a pleasant manner.

Before the party left, there was a debate as to whether to tip the young waitress. She did not hear this dialogue, but those of us seated in the area could.

Finally, the young people in the party counseled their older companions, (who were paying the bill), and a tip was left.

How heartbreaking it would have been for a waitress who gave her all — to return and not find a thank you bonus.

We sought out the young waitress and learned her name is Wanda Johnson, and she is a student at Catonsville Community College.

Our hats off salute to her this week for being a shining example of our young black youngsters who are doing a professional job at work.

Cuff note: Also observed at the same restaurant, busy preparing to serve a party Elise Bridges, a sophomore at Brown University.

She tells us she is studying marketing. Her parents are the Leon Bridgeses, (Eloise). He's the architect.

Remember to send this column names of young people you see doing a good job. Too many adults criticize our young people when they "mess up" and too few praise them when they do a good job. Hats off!!

Get well

Glad - you're better cards to Dr. Talmadge (Marse) Hill, retired and famed basketball coach at Morgan State University.

He was rushed to Provident Hospital Saturday after suffering a mini stroke. His wife, Frances Berry Hill, reports he is out of intensive care and doing nicely as of this writing. He's in room 019.

Also on the mend at Provident is Mrs. Harry F. Jackson, (Guthrie), one of Baltimore's most popular teachers. She had surgery. Her last school assignment was at Fairmount Hill, where she taught commercial and institutional home economics.

Reunions

Mrs. Carrie P. McCormick of Morgan Park was in Roatand, M.C., where she joined her sister, Mrs. Mary B. Carroll, and other relatives for a family reunion.

They are daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Benton. He was for many years a barber, and civic leader who was known as a race relations ambassador.

Benton Houses, a senior citizens' project in the town honors his memory. Community and business leaders of both races turned out for the dedication.

Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Patterson (Sylvia), of Dundalk, and their family, were in New Orleans last week for the 75th birthday of her mother, Mrs. A. P. Tureaud.

The celebration was in the form of a mass and attracted over 200 relatives and friends from all sections of the country.

Bishop Andrew Perry officiated at the services held at Xavier University.

Mrs. Tureaud's six children came and their children participated in the service.

The Baltimore Pattersons also renewed their vows during the family gathering. They marked their 25th wedding anniversary on July 14.

Cuff note: New Orleans mayor, Ernest Moriel, was among guests. More cuff: The A. P. Tureaud Avenue in New Orleans, recently named, honors Sylvia's dad, who was the famed civil rights attorney

Retreat

The Keuka Ashram at Keuka College in Pan Yam, N.Y., near Syracuse, attracted a number of Baltimore area church people.

Mrs. Palestine Anderson and granddaughter, Tracey, were among them. She tells us the week - long retreat was most invigorating.

Featured were Bible and spiritual sessions; prayer instruction etc.

There was ample time for enjoying outdoor recreation on the nearby lake. In the group were children and adults.

Baltimore teacher, Ruby Rice of Trinity Baptist, was in charge of youth group sessions.

Among those in attendance were members from Unity Baptist, Union Baptist, St. John AME, John Wesley Methodist, St. James and St. Timothy Episcopal Churches.

Travellers

Dr. Augustus A. Adair, chairman of the Political Science Department at Morgan State University, is traveling for the U.S. government.

He is making 'on site' visits to several predominantly black colleges in the South. He returns to Baltimore in time for September opening.

Far West visitors here this week for the National United Church Ushers' Convention at the Hilton, included, Mrs. Vivian Lay, Mrs. Katie Burker and Mrs. Mae Frances Wilburne, all of Seattle.

Two Baltimore matrons were honored at the National Medical Association Convention in Atlanta last week.

Mrs. Robbie Chissell received the Recognition Award for her work with the medical auxiliary.

Mrs. Jewell Moseley Marsan got the Community Public Service Award. Her son, Herbert Moseley Jr., was there to see her honored.

Recent visitor here in her hometown Mrs. Charlotte Parrott Hackett. She guested with Frances DeMann Ashby.

Mrs. Hackett, former Baltimore teacher, resides in Durham, N.C., where her husband, Rufus Hackett, also a Baltimorean, is an official with the N.C. Mutual Life Insurance Co.

From Paris

Visiting her native Baltimore last week was Mamie Brown Wheatley of Paris.

She teaches English in French schools, resides in the French capital with her husband, Andree Wheatley, the musician.

Also here, her twin sister, Harriett Barton of N.Y.

They guested with Louise Cummings Dorcas.

There was a reunion with a third sister, Mrs. George Franklin, (Henrietta), in Silver Spring, Md.

A fourth sister is Anne Wiggins Brown, the famed singer, ("Porgy and Bess"). She lives in Norway.

Grew up here

The Brown girls grew up in Baltimore, attended public schools and area colleges. They are daughters of the late Dr. and Mrs. Harry F. Brown, (Mamie Nelson).

When he died in June 1945, he had been a practicing physician and Health Department aide for over 38 years.

History notes: All the Brown girls were born in the family home at the corner of Stricker and Presstman Sts., near Sharon Baptist Church. (Last time we were in the area, his name was still on the front window.)

Dr. Brown, a 1906 Howard U. grad was superintendent of Provident Hospital from 1916-24.

An old AFRO story recalls that at one time he was "the only colored baby doctor practicing in Baltimore."

Older Baltimoreans may remember that in his later years, Dr. Brown's office was in the 1800 block Madison Ave., in west Baltimore.

The wedding

If we needed proof that love is color - blind, and that all the world loves a lover, we got it Wednesday morning.

The first caller said he and his family had been up since 5 a.m., to watch live TV coverage of the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer.

Another said she had stayed home from work!

Both could have saved themselves, because every TV station here had coverage all morning on Wednesday, moving regular programs back to a later hour. After all, the bridegroom is heir to the British throne and this was dubbed the wedding of the century.

It was a gorgeous sight!!!

Down memory lane: As we watched the wedding, we began to wonder what life was like here in Baltimore 34 years ago when the present queen and her husband were married.

It was in November 1947. If you can recall hearing the long news accounts, and reading of the romantic events, you have a good memory.

34 years ago

In 1947, there was not as much interest in the royal event, at least according to AFRO headlines.

We were concerned with an upcoming visit by famed singer, the late Paul Robeson; a scheduled fight between the late Joe Louis and Jersey Joe Walcott.

Stories described the recent defeat of Mayor Theodore McKeldin and the election of Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro 3rd. President Truman was in the White House.

And Attorney Thurgood Marshall, now U.S. Supreme Court Justice Marshall, and late NAACP president, Dr. Lillie M. Jackson were appearing before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals urging equalization of rights for minorities.

And, in that same month, the late Jackie Robinson was named baseball's Rookie of the Year.' Here in Baltimore two women attorneys, first colored females" to gain admission to the U. of Md. Law School, Elaine Carsley Davis and Juanita Jackson Mitchell were cited for their scholastic achievements.

Jim Crow

And, in that same year, representatives of black colleges were asking federal and state officials for equal distribution of funds.

And, to be sure, this town of ours was jim crow - black and white signs still in evidence, and opportunities for minorities limited.

The royal wedding 34 years ago was no cause for great interest in our community then. This week, however, because of wide TV coverage, everybody had to become involved.

And, black people, like people all over the world; relish romance, and love stories and like to watch royalty. At least that's the way it was in Baltimore this week.

Amen! — After all - day at the wedding, we agree with the commentator who observed: "I'm sorta glad this wedding is over. I've learned more about the Prince and his bride than
