Eastern Regional Jazz Festival

Fifteen high school jazz ensembles from all over the eastern United States will begin the competition in the Annual Eastern Regional Jazz Festival at the University of Maryland Baltimore County on Saturday, March 27. The purpose of the festival is to further jazz education by providing student musicians with clinics in specific techniques, the chance to see the work of other groups, and the opprtunity to observe and work with a noted jazz artist.

Featured jazz artists in the past have been some of the greatest names in the business, including Clark Terry, Rich Matteson, and Al Cohn. This year's artist is Duffy Jackson, Count Basie's drummer. Mr. Jackson will present a jazz clinic at noon, followed by a guest performance with the UMBC Jazz Ensemble, conducted by Ron Diehl and Ed Kerman. At 5 p.m. the Navy's offical jazz ensemble, The Commodores, will present a jazz concert, also featuring Duffy Jackson.

Adjudicating the festival of high school jazz ensembles will be noted artists from the Baltimore/Washington area: Bill Potts, Mark Taylor, Howard Lamb, Jeff Taylor, and Dr. Stuart Smith. The festival is a National Association of Jazz Educators approved event and will include NAJE citations, trophies, and a national jazz camp scholarship award to the best musician at the festival.

The public is cordially invited to attend the concerts, clinics, and competition. All events will take place in the Fine Arts Building. For further information call the UMBC music department at 455-2942, Ed Kerman at 596-3186 or Ron Diehl at 647-3030.

Former Beatle Paul McCartney and legendary Stevie Wonder sing a duet on McCartney's new album, "Tug of War." Single, "Ebony and Ivory" will be in record stores soon.

From Charlie Brown to Willie Mays

Say hey, Charlie Brown?

Well, hardly. How could anyone who knows a pitcher's mound from a goal post even entertain the thought of comparing Charlie Brown to Willie Mays, the "Say hey" kid from Birmingham, Ala., who climbed from the 1951 Rookie of the Year to third place on the record of all-time home-run leaders, surpassed only by Henry Aaron and Babe Ruth?

Unlike Mays, who is also a recipient of baseball's Most Valuable Player Award and whose prowess in the outfield and at the plate earned him a place in the National Baseball Hall of Fame in 1979, poor Charlie Brown can't even win a game by forfeit. His little parcel of Peanuts teammates — including Snoopy, the beagle shortstop — are used to trudging home to cry after Charlie helps them lose a game by a score as seemingly impossible as 123-0. And when it comes to stealing bases, another of the specialties for which Mays was known, Charlie gets up courage to steal home only when the score is 3-2 in the last of the 9th inning, his team has two outs and its best hitter is coming up to bat.

But Willie Mays, who retired from baseball in 1973, was the principal source of inspiration for "Charlie Brown's All-Stars," the animated special to be rebroadcast Saturday, April 3 (8:00-8:30 PM,ET) on the CBS Television Network.

Executive producer Lee Mendelson, who once did a televison program about Mays, explained: "It seemed only fair after doing a show about such a great baseball player — which I think Willie Mays was — that I should do one about the world's worst baseball player. Charlie Brown sure fits that description."

Peanuts creator Charles Schultz agreed with the idea of the Charlie Brown baseball show, so off went poor little moon-face Charlie to pitch his gang of All-Stars to its 999th staight loss.

Though their outfielding, running, pitching, stealing and batting averages differ, Charlie and Willie may have a few things in common at that.

Willie remembers that feeling of insecurity which makes Charlie want to stay in bed the day of the season's first game and which badgers the little failure-prone player-manager through the baseball months.

Reminiscing about a famous game when he was a 20-year-old newcomer, Willie once said, "I was so scared out in the on-deck circle when Thomson went up to hit — scared I'd have to go up there with the game depending on me — that I was shaking."

Like Charlie, who searches for depth in everything from a peanut butter sandwich to Christmas, Willie has a bit of the wistful dreamer in him also.

The baseball star once recalled an October dusk when he was a boy watching gray clouds roll in and feeling, "If you could reach high enough, you could get the gray out of there."

So take heart, Charlie Brown, you're still only a Little Leaguer.

Bill Russell joins 'CBS Morning News'

Former basketball star Bill Russell will contribute sports commentary on the "CBS Morning News," it was announced by executive producer George Merlis. Russell, who will appear periodically on the broadcast, joins John Madden and Warner Wolp, who will each provide sports commentary once a week. Jim Kelly serves as the daily sports reporter on the new two-hour broadcast, co-anchored by CBS News Correspondents Bill Kurtis and Diane Sawyer.

Russell, former center of the Boston Celtics (1956-1969), has been a commentator for CBS Sports' "NBA on CBS" since January 1980, and was a National Basketball Association analyst for the ABC Television Network.

Prior to joining the Celtics, Russell led the United States to a gold medal in the 1956 Melbourne Olympics with a victory over the Soviet Union in the finals. As a professional, he was a five-time winner of the NBA's most valuable player trophy, and, in 1966, he became the first black coach in any major sport.

Chuck Berry 'National Lampoon's Class Reunion'

Rock 'n' roll legend Chuck Berry will make a special appearance in ABC Motion Pictures' production of "National Lampoon's Class Reunion," an outrageous comedy currently being directed by Michael Miller.

Berry, who influenced the Beatles and the Rolling Stones, shaped rock 'n' roll music for three decades and continues to captivate millions of fans around the world with his irrepressible energy. He has an amazing 27 charted singles to his credit. Topping the charts was "My Ding-A-Ling," his 1972 hit that went to No. 1 in October of that year. Berry's other top-ten singles are "Sweet Little Sixteen" (No. 2, March, 1958), "School Days" (No. 3, May, 1957), "Mabeline" (No. 8, May, 1958) and "No Particular Place to Go" (No. 10, July, 1964).

Berry and his band will be performing in a sequence that will include Zane Buzby, Blackie Dammit, Miriam Flynn, Stephen Furst, Gerrit Graham, Michael Lerner, Fred McCarren, Marla Pennington, Marya Small, Shelley Smith, Jim Staahl, Jacklyn Zeman and other members of the large ensemble cast.

Largest candy Easter egg

Baltimore's largest candy Easter egg will be on display during Mayor Schaefer's Easter Party, compliments of the Sweet Craft Chocolatiers of Baltimore. This event, sponsored by the Mayor's Office of Special Projects, will take place at noon on Wednesday, April 7, in War Memorial Plaza.

Entertainment will be provided by the Variety Club Singers, Susuki Violinists, and Jazzercise. Herring Run Recreation Center and Canton Tot Center Preschoolers, will decorate the Easter trees located in the Plaza. The Easter Bunny will also be on hand to greet everyone.

Members of the audience are invited to join in the competition of guessing the weight of the Easter egg. After the festivities, the egg will be cut and distributed to those who would like to sample this delicious treat!

For more information, please call the Mayor's Office of Special Projects at 396-4891.

April 22-24- The Annual Spring Recital of the Coppin Dancers will take place for four performances in the college auditorium.
