When the name of Mr. Norris was called, he delivered the following address:

MR. PRESIDENT:

There comes a time in every man's life when he must decide between two conflicting thoughts, as to just what is his duty, and strange to say the time is here when the clear path of my duty seems to be diametrically opposite to the dictates of my conscience. My conscience tells me, as a Democrat in the full sense of the word, that the proposed amendment to the Constitution is vicious in the extreme, changing as it does the time-honored principles of our State and National Government,
