High school sports: the year in pictures

SOCCER SURPRISE — Several of the city's unsung athletes surprised fans, and often themselves, with outstanding performances. City's Kris Fickling, a right wing, scored four goals to pace the Knights in an autumn contest.

SCHOLASTIC STANDOUTS — The Walbrook Cage women and the Dunbar gridiron crew got outstanding efforts from scholastic stars Rose Willis, a center, and tailback Efren Edwards, respectively.

TOPS IN TENNIS — The Doves at Western High flew to the top of the city's tennis hill last year, riding on the wings of Devi Patterson and Alysha Morgan. The two were top seeded last year.

PRIDE OF THE POETS — Scholastic superstar David Wingate, last year a high scoring forward at Dunbar High, now shoots jumpers at the Capital Center. Wingate is a student at Georgetown University which plays its home games at the suburban arena.

IN FLIGHT — Grace is as much a part of athletics as are strength and endurance. The three qualities combined nicely to help propel Carver's Richard Carter to a win in the 800-meter intermediate hurdles at a meet run last spring. Carver, which traditionally does well in track, fielded several fine athletes in last year's campaign.

CLOCKWORK TEAMWORK — Western excelled in track again last year, adding another city championship to a lengthening string of city titles under coach Breezy Bishop. Sue Reynolds waits for the baton while Connie Hitchcock brings it home.

CARVER HARRIER — A Carver runner leads the pack going down the stretch during a race held last spring.
