The Play's the Thing

Flora, Bernice Kelly, is the catalyst to the already tense atmosphere that exists at the ranch.

Portraying George is Gordon Parks, and, if this actor was born to play a role, it is this one. He is excellent, contributing a presence to the stage that keeps the emotional and physical action always interesting.

The rest of the cast is exceptional as well, with a precise performance by Harvey Denmark in a minor role as Candy.

As a long-time fan of Steinbeck, and "Of Mice and Men" in particular, a few particular script changes are a bit unsettling, as is the occasional slow pace of the production and the slow scene changes. Nevertheless, this Beverly product is well worth the low $6 admission price. Make an effort to see "Of Mice and Men" in its final days at the Dunbar Performing Arts Center, Friday through Sunday at 8 pm. Sunday performances are at 6 pm.

"Division Street" at Center stage

The current offering at Center Stage is Steve Tesich's, "Division Street". The comedic tale of a 1960's radical who tries to shed his militant past and simply fit into the mainstream of middle-classdom, "Division Street" seems to ask everyone, not only the main character, 'where has all the idealism gone?' During this month that we celebrate the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, the production is timely for Baltimore in that it focuses on people like King and his followers, and what has happened in our society to dilute the idealic visions people of the 60's possessed.

Despite this serious theme of the play, "Division Street" is a comedy, a comedy of the first sort, combining some of the most entertaining characterizations with an already potentially amusing story line. The excellent pacing of the play, in addition to the physical comedy, keeps the audience from getting too heavily bogged down into what could have easily become a philisophical filibuster.

The play stars Keith Langsdale, a face many may find familiar as Richard Abbott on the daytime serial "One Life To Live". Basically as the play's straight man, he gives an admirable performance as Chris, the ex-radical who is located by many of his cronies of the past. The cronies, one a recent transexual (Gerald Gilmore) and the other a burnt out street bum (John Madden Towey), provide most of the humor and color to the play. Towey gives an especially funny performance, somewhat reminescent of early George Carlin. Billy Padgett as Sal also displays a special comedic flare.

"Division Street" is also in its final days, but is still worth the effort of catching it before it leaves town. Center Stage is located at 700 N. Calvert Street.

Julliard graduate Gerald Gilmore and comedy actor Billy Padgett discover a special relationship as "Betty" and "Sal".

MISCELLANY

The Baltimore Vegetarians will hold a tofu cooking class on Friday, Jan. 28th at 8 PM. Location will be the Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Church, 10 E. Mt. Vernon Place, between St. Paul and Charles Street. Fee is $3. Free cider will be on hand. Call 752-VEGV.

Obtain help preparing basic, individual 1982 federal income tax forms in programs at 14 branches of the Baltimore County Public Library through mid-April. Branches included are: Catonsville, 1100 Frederick Road; Lock Raven, 1046 Taylor Avenue; Pikesville, 1301 Reisterstown Road; Randallstown, 8604 Liberty Road; Woodlawn, 1811 Woodlawn Drive. Taxpayers seeking assistance should bring their 1981 returns, W-2 forms and any other pertinent materials. Call the branch for more details.

Bon Secours Hospital provides free blood pressure screenings to the community every Thursday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at Washington Village Community Medical Center, Washington Blvd. and Barre Street.
