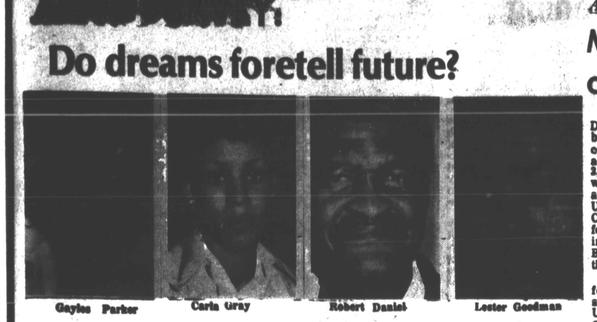
Do dreams foretell future?



Gaylen Parker — Carla Gray — Robert Daniel — Lester Goodman

Do you believe dreams have any significance to future events in one's life?

The AFRO asked eight people at random in Richmond this question. Here are respondents answers:

Carla Gray, clerk: "I guess, sometimes to me they do. Dreams are scary, or less, fantasies, something you want to happen, or has happened."

Alvin White, nurse: "Yes. My father's death...for a week or so I was dreaming that something was going to happen in my family and on the third dream my father passed."

Stan Craddock, maintenaneman: "Yeah, I really do think so because a lot of times in day to day living when I dream of things a year or so down the road they come to pass. I believe if you program your mind anything can happen to you."

Benita Dailey, social worker: "Oh yeah, most definitely they do. I'm a psychiatric social worker and oftentimes I see people who have dreams and sometimes when they relate these dreams to me they have a good deal of significance in terms of what's going on in their lives, or what's going to happen in their lives."

Telesses Martin: "Yes, I think all dreams mean something. Some people dream the same dream two or three times and that's a sure sign they mean something."

Gaylen Parker, senior clerk typist: "I surely do. Usually when I dream it comes true.—I never dream bad dreams, they are all good."

Lester Goodman, salesman: "Yes, I do. Sometimes I think when you have problems you dream about them and you may dream of a solution to your problem. I think it's healthy."

Robert Daniel, custodian: "No. I have dreamed about things a lot of times and they never came true so I don't believe in dreams. Some of my dreams were good and some were bad."

Craddock — Alvin White — Telesses Martin — Benita Dailey

Get the facts on black history

Study Group, here is your [illegible] Black facts [illegible] 1984. And you know what my next line is: "Get pen in hand and paper and write to me for details at 1051 Broadway, Suite [illegible] Brooklyn, N.Y. [illegible] and you will receive our special Black History Month magazine called "The Longest Struggle" — free.

For those who want [illegible] Black History Month celebration, a special offer is included in the magazine on page 11. Based on the response to the offer for previous issues on Blacks exploring [illegible] Black [illegible] on the history of Black protest and the NAACP's 75 Year March will be in great demand — so don't wait too long before you send for your free copy.

For example, [illegible] a Black [illegible] who was a well-[illegible] Black journalist during the early 1900's who was driven from the South because of her anti-lynching editorials. She was also a founder of the NAACP and started the anti-lynching crusade. Who was she?" and "Black History Month started out as Negro History Week in 1926. Who is the father of this annual celebration of Black culture?" There are two of them.

Dewey's a couple more: During the NAACP's effective campaign against lynching, a silent parade of 10,000 New Yorkers protested in July, 1917 the bloody race riots that killed from 40 to 200 Blacks and drove another 6,000 from their homes. In what city did these riots take place?" and "The NAACP's crusade against lynching had its finest hour when a Tuskegee report showed that for the first time in 71 years no lynchings occurred in the U.S. What year was that?"

How are you doing? Are you 0 for 4 or 4 and 0? You probably need to brush up on what "your" ancestors were doing if you're average. The magazine will also ask you: "Responding to NAACP pressure in 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed the first Black general in the history of the armed forces. Who was he?"

There are also answers and you'll get them as well. You will learn which Executive Secretary of the NAACP wrote the "Black National Anthem" and get the details of how he conceived the words. Do you know what year this native of Jacksonville, Florida wrote the words? Who wrote the music?

The magazine on the saga of Black America details the states in the South with a Black majority of the registered voters following the Civil War. You will learn which southern states had a Black U.S. Senator and a governor. You will also learn what plan the "White Redeemers" used to stop Black progress between 1867 and 1877 that cancelled the only period in American history when democracy was given a chance. The magazine details the complete and needless humiliation that followed.

What Alabama city did not allow Blacks and whites to play checkers together? Where were Blacks sworn in with separate "Jim Crow" bibles? Where was it against the law for Black and White workers to look out the same window? What state had separate telephone booths for the races and what city did not allow Blacks on the street after 10 p.m.? You'll know if you read the free magazine.

You'll probably be surprised to learn that the very first member of the NAACP was a White woman. Who was she? Who was the first prominent Black member of the NAACP? He also wrote The Souls of Black Folk in 1904.

What northern race riot led to the creation of the NAACP and what does the "Call" mean? How did Ida Wells-Barnett prove that Black men were not being lynched because of the stated reason of protecting White women? The following titles will also be described: "The Terrible Nineties"; the "Exodus of 1879"; and "The Waco Horror."

The pictures of the Waco lynching explain graphically the psychological meaning of the sexual dismemberment of Black men killed by mobs in lynch-murders. During that period a Black was lynched somewhere in America everyday. And who was lynched for "accidentally brushing against" a White girl as he ran to catch a train? What Black was lynched as late as 1981? Where?

In 1940 why were there only eight Black lawyers in Georgia; three in Mississippi; and five in South Carolina? Has Hollywood broken more treaties with the NAACP than the U.S. has with Indians? What NAACP movie was the response to "The Birth of a Nation?"

Harriet and Harry Moore were murder-bombed in their bed on their 25th wedding anniversary (Christmas night) in 1951. The confession to the murder of these Florida NAACP leaders, who were killed because of their voter registration efforts, is in the files of the FBI. Why does the FBI refuse to release it? What NAACP leader in Mississippi was leading economic boycotts and voter registration drives 10 years before Martin Luther King hit the scene and what secretary of the NAACP started the Montgom
