That's life. But you can't afford to just give up and leave because something replacement happens." Of his 62-year old wife, he said, "I would marry her all over again."

Chad expecting Libyan attack

N'DJAMENA, Chad — Chadian President Hissene Habre believes Libya is preparing to invade Chad in the east near the border with the Sudan, diplomats said last week.

Habre told ambassadors at his traditional New Year's Eve reception that "this imminent offensive" will be directed against the town of Iriba in the eastern part of the Central African country, the diplomats said.

Habre's claim came eight days before he was scheduled to sit down in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, at a peace meeting among Chad's 11 warring factions — including rebel leader Goukouni Weddeye, the former Chadian leader.

The country has been ravaged by 17 years of civil war, the most recent last summer.

Habre did not say whether he believed Libyan troops would actually take part in the invasion or whether Libya would be arming an invasion by some Chadian dissident faction as a surrogate.

Fighting last summer in Chad ended in impasse. Goukouni's rebel troops, armed by Libya, marched toward the capital from the north in June.

Habre has said Libyan troops accompanied the Chadian rebels and sent warplanes against his forces, but Libya repeatedly denied the charges. The rebels said they were armed by Libya but that no Libyan troops were involved.

France rushed 3,000 soldiers to the scene in August and their presence halted the fighting.

The country since has been virtually partitioned with the Libyan-backed Goukouni holding the north and Habre, backed by France, in power in the south.

At his reception, Habre urged ambassadors to ask their governments "to help the Chad government face this new aggression of Libya against Chad," the diplomats said.

The reported invasion point of Iriba, 20 miles from the Sudan border, lies in the province of Biltine, where French Defense Minister Charles Hernu last week visited his troops stationed in forward posts.

Hernu conferred with Habre and later said the French troops were "in no hurry" to withdraw. He said the French presence permitted diplomacy to play its role of finding a solution to the conflict. (UPI)
