Fellow officers mourn slain corrections guard

HONOR GUARD PALLBEARERS: Over 500 correction officers gathered to pay their respect for the slain prison guard, Herman Lester Toulson, Jr. Many of the officers there felt that the prison administration failed their responsibility of protecting the correction officers.

Gray clouds hovered above the funeral procession of Herman L. Toulson, Jr., as an estimated 600 corrections officers stood at attention Thursday noon as his body was carried out of St. James' Episcopal Church.

The buzzing of the crowd stopped suddenly when the flag-draped casket appeared at the front door of the church. Instantly the atmosphere took on a serious, yet tense air.

Many of the corrections officers wept openly in their grief and sorrow for their slain comrade. The immediate family filed out slowly behind the one-time war hero's coffin with their heads bent, trying to hide the pain of losing a loved one.

A native Baltimorean, Toulson leaves to mourn his wife, Dorothy LaMour Richardson Toulson; three daughters, Cecelia St. Anne 15, Lynelle Leilani 13 and Noelle Felecia 11; his mother and father, Mrs. Felicia Sample Toulson and Herman Lester Toulson, Sr.

He was educated in the Baltimore Public Schools and was graduated from Douglass High School in June, 1964. While at Douglass, Toulson was an outstanding player on the Varsity Basketball team. He also attended the Community College of Baltimore.

Officer Toulson was a decorated Viet Nam veteran of the 196th Infantry of the Army from which he was honorably discharged after a four-year voluntary tour.

He received two Purple Hearts and a Bronze Star Medal for valor over and above the call of duty for exposing himself to the direct line of fire in order to protect his comrades.

Among the mourners were the governor, the city police commissioner, the commissioner of corrections, and other government officials.

Officer Toulson is buried at Veterans Cemetery.

Eastside head ousted Firehouse 19 cited

By Jadi Omowale
AFRO Staff Writer

In September, the Eastside was the scene of several protests over a firehouse which has been closed since February 1984. At the center of the activity around that issue was Leonard Cannady, a local community worker and chair of the Democratic State Central Committee for the 45th Legislative District.

The AFRO followed the events of September, which included two incidents of picketing outside the boarded, 94 year old structure on North Avenue and a petition drive.

The group, which calls itself Committee Number 19, after the engine company which moved to a neighboring firehouse, is in fact planning to picket on Monday, October 15 at City Hall.

All this activity around the firehouse that closed several months ago has made Cannady the object of much attention, especially from 2nd District Councilman Nathaniel McFadden, who has called for the removal of Cannady as chairman of the state central committee.

In a letter addressed to the elected members of the Committee, McFadden called for the resignation of Cannady, who, he stated, "...seems preoccupied with other endeavors. Maybe it would be in the best interest of the Democratic Party in the 45th district to afford Mr. Cannady more time to pursue these interests. Therefore, I am calling for his resignation and will at our next meeting respectfully request his removal."

Copies of the letter, dated October 5, were sent to the other four members of the committee of which McFadden is a part, and Patti takes Balto.

By Bonnie Matthews Butler

Explosive is the only way to describe the recent appearance of Patti LaBelle at the Lyric Opera House. From the overture to the finale, Patti talked, sashayed, and sang her heart out to the capacity crowd in attendance on opening night.

To get things rolling, after the overture, Patti began from behind a scrim curtain with a rainbow displayed across its entire length.

Wearing a white sequined gown (all of her gowns were designed by Larry LaGastby) she launched into "I'm In Love Again."

All during this number, Patti talked to the crowd. These intimate chats make Patti's concerts come alive.

She told us that she was sipping Perrier and honey (out of goblets, no less). You can see why she must do this since she is at a high energy level during her performance and "gets dry" as Patti told the crowd.

What made us particularly

Guards plan action

By Tyrone Vines
AFRO Staff Writer

While mourners wept at the funeral of Officer Herman L. Toulson, other corrections officers met with prison officials to discuss solutions to the security problems at the penitentiary.

The corrections officers at the funeral mourning their slain colleague felt that Warden Leslie Dorsey and the Assistant Warden Patricia Schupple were directly responsible for Toulson's untimely death.

Their faces reflected clearly their displeasure with the prison administration's seeming lack of concern for the plight of the officers working in the Maryland State Penitentiary.

One officer who stated that he was ordered not to make any statements, and who wished to remain anonymous expressed his remorse over the loss of a close friend and collegue. "I wish I could say something, because I could say how crazy things are inside the penitentiary."

Meanwhile, a more direct approach to expose and eliminate the failings of the penitentiary were conducted by the American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), in a meeting with Frank Hall, secretary of public safety and corrections and Arnold Hopkins, the commissioner of corrections.

"After a two hour meeting with Hall in an attempt in good faith to calm the emotions at the Maryland Penitentiary, we were informed by Hall that he was totally rejecting our recommendation to remove Warden Dorsey and the Assistant Warden Patricia Schupple," Adam L. VanLandingham, II, spokesperson for the correctional steering committee said.

VanLandingham said that the committee wanted to have the two administrators removed temporarily while an independent blue ribbon investigation into the recent disturbance and the overall security procedures in the penitentiary.

"This flat refusal further agitates an already tense situation," VanLandingham said.

He added, "We also have determined that Governor Harry Hughes has not shown any leadership in the correctional system in Maryland, nor has he shown any consideration for the safety and well being of the correctional employees."

As a result of the lack of concern from the governor, VanLandingham said, the union has determined and voted that "We have no confidence in the present administration in running our penal institutions or providing for the safety of citizens or correctional officers here in Maryland."

The 173-year-old prison was designed to house 923 inmates, but according to VanLan-

City teachers get pre-Halloween scare

By Arthur Johnson
AFRO Staff Writer

City school teachers received a pre-Halloween scare earlier this week when School Superintendent Alice Pinderhughes was quoted as saying that a substantial number of teacher layoffs were forthcoming.

The quote, removed from the context of Mrs. Pinderhughes' statement Monday before the Task Force to Study the Funding of Public Education, has caused a great deal of concern in the teaching community.

In her statement concerning the schools' fiscal year 1986 (beginning July 1, 1985), the superintendent stated that the city schools would have about $750,000 to finance $11 million worth of instructional improvements as required under House Bill 669.

The shortfall will occur if state aid formulas remain unchanged, and if Baltimore City maintains its contribution at the required level. In addition, the end of density aid has negated the increase in the basic formula, according to the superintendent.

"This is an impossible situation. Even $11 million more in state aid would not enable the Baltimore City Public Schools (BCPS) to maintain its current program, much less improve it," said Mrs. Pinderhughes.

"In order to balance our budget under these circumstances in FY '86, one of the several measures that we would have to take is to lay off teachers which would result in an increase in class sizes," the superintendent's statement continued.

Mrs. Pinderhughes pointed out that larger classes are "contrary to the spirit and intent of the legislation (Bill 669)," which is to improve instruction.

Such a move may also jeopardize the city's eligibility for state aid since it would violate accountability requirements, said the superintendent, who described the city's dilemma as a "serious Catch 22 situation."

The superintendent also reminded the commission of the many uncorrected "inequities" facing Baltimore City schools including:

— An average city teacher salary which is almost $5,000 less

Legislative Black Caucus planning for coming session

By Arthur Johnson
AFRO Staff Writer

The Maryland Legislative Black Caucus will hold its third annual retreat on the campus of the University of Maryland College Park (UMCP) on Thursday Oct. 18 and Friday, Oct. 19. The two day confab is held annually in preparation for the upcoming state lawmaking session which begins in January.

"We listen to various heads of state agencies and members of Governor Hughes' cabinet to find out the status of those departments and agencies with regard to the services provided to minorities and employment status of minorities in those departments," said Caucus Chairman Delegate Elijah Cummings (D, 30th District).

Caucus members will determine if progress has been made since the last legislative session and will make certain demands of the department heads.

The retreat also gives the senators and delegates an opportunity to develop goals and strategies for reaching those goals for the 1985 session of the Maryland General Assembly.

"It gives us the opportunity to put together our blueprint which we then distribute to the public so they will have an idea of our plan for the year," explained the caucus chairman.

This year's retreat will also focus on four important areas: the black family, economic development, health and the electoral process.

The problems facing black families will be discussed as well as coping strategies. The workshop will also include a report based on a nationwide study conducted by Delta Sigma Theta sorority, and will be con-

What's on the ballot for Nov. 6 election

With election day four weeks away, municipal voters are reviewing the shopper's list of ballot questions and loan financing program proposals which they must approve or disapprove on November 6.

Along with electing a president and vice-president from six party choices, and congressional representatives in both the third and seventh districts, local voters will decide the fate of five controversial charter ammendment proposals and the issuance of $63.4 million in rehab and economic development bonds.

Joining the Democratic and Republican candidates who are vying for the first and second highest elected offices in the nation, are representatives of the Libertarian, Communist Workers, and Alliance parties.

Perhaps the only recognizable name among the latter group of alternative candidates is black activist, Angela Davis, running for the office of vice-president under the Communist Party banner.

The November 6, ballot complete with the four non-traditional parties and five voter statements —Questions M through Q— read like a people's manifesto.

Question M—A charter ammendment requiring that city council members live in their district one year prior to their being elected.

Question N—A charter ammendment lowering the residency requirement for the mayor from ten years to one year.

Question O— Appealing the prohibition against using public funds to construct a stadium other than Memorial Stadium.

Question P—A petition proposing to amend the city charter to require that members of the School Board be elected by city voters rather than be appointed by the mayor.

Question Q—A petition proposing to amend the city charter and requiring that as of the municipal election of 1987, 18 individual council members will be elected from 18 separate citywide districts.

A series of 12 bond issues that will appear on next month's loca ballot will ask city taxpayers to allow the city to borrow enough money to continue its funding of a variety of community programs.

As always the city and its voters have managed to maintain their A-1 bond rating having repaid its previous loans in a timely fashion.

Local voters are being asked to cast favorable ballots on the following bond related projects totally $63.4 million for 1984-86.

Question A— $12 million Community Development Loan, to allow the city to continue the current level of funding for com-
