How 100 AFRO precincts voted

By Racine S. Winborne
AFRO Staff Writer

Fours years later, Republicans have failed once again to galvanize significant support among Baltimore City's black voter community, despite claims by some that they too have benefited from the Reagan Administration's economic policies.

Figures compiled from the 100 AFRO voting precints and made available on Wednesday, give Democratic challenger Walter Mondale 64,798 of a possible 68,049 votes or 95 percent, compared with 3,252 or less than five percent for Ronald Reagan.

Those predominantly black areas tallied, include precincts in East Baltimore, Morgan-Waverly, Northwood-Govans, Druid Hill, West Baltimore, Lower Park Heights, Forest Park, Edmondson, Cherry Hill and portions of South Baltimore.

Voter turnout throughout the city was said to be moderate-heavy on Tuesday, with the turnout among mostly black preeincts ranging from 55 percent in Cherry Hill to 75 percent across the city in the Forest Park area.

Tuesday's general election did have its problems. Several would-be voters called to report incidents of voter machine malfunctionings.

One unidentified caller said that the polling place at Schroeder & Saratoga Sts. contained the names of only the Democratic candidates and local citywide judicial candidates.

Residents at the Towanda Recreation Center in Northwest Baltimor were reportedly harassed by several white poll-watchers gathered at the center and armed with security badges.

"They said they were here because this was one of two trouble spots in previous years, remarked an election judge from the 45th precinct, one of three precincts housed at the neighborhood facility.

Another precinct judge, Mrs. Edell H. Brown, accused the "Challengers" of tampering with sign-in cards attached to the voting machines, a practice considered illegal, and said that the group of about four or five whites failed to identify themselves or the organization or agency they represented.

"Why were they in our district.

1984 PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION:

The aftermath!

(An analysis)

The voting patterns in this year's presidential election raised some serious questions about the traditional Democratic coalition and what it stands.

Nationally, Reagan received only about 11% of the black vote, 31% of the Jewish vote. He split the Hispanic vote with Mondale. But among each other, traditionally, Democratic voting blocks he did very well.

Despite the presence of Geraldine Ferraro on the Democratic ticket, Reagan won about 59% of the Italian - American vote, another traditionally Democratic voting group. Irish - Americans voted 59% for Reagan.

Voters cast their ballots more on their economic interests than their party ties also. Voters who were unemployed or who earned $5,000 or less supported Mondale at 64%. Mondale's support reached 69% among those who earned $10,000 or less.

Reagan's support among those who earned $50,000 and over was 68%. Reagan gathered large numbers of supporters among middle - class voters. Those earning up to $25,000 the Reagan margin was 56%. Voters with incomes between $25,000 and $50,000 favored Reagan 52%.

These figures seem to indicate that the ethnic blue collar and minority group coalition forged by Franklin Roosevelt, if not ended is in very serious danger of breaking up.

Many former members of that coalition, particularly in the South, have gone to the Republicans, in part because of the party's special appeals to groups such as organized labor, feminists and minority groups.

Despite Reagan's substantial win, his coattails proved to be very short. The Democrats gained two seats in the Senate and the Republicans only gained nine seats in the House of Representatives far short of the 26 needed to gain a working majority for the president.

Also, the Congressional Black Caucus maintained its membership of 20 persons. Black Democrat Robert Clark was narrowly defeated by his white Republican incumbent opponent. In South Carolina, state Senator Isaac Jenkins decisively defeated his black challenger Ken Mosely.

A large black voter turnout was responsible, according to many observers, for making the North Carolina Senate race closer than expected. The majority of the black voters supported Governor

Council to tackle city residency rules

By Racine S. Winborne
AFRO Staff Writer

Question N, the ballot question that would have lowered the residency requirement for a mayoral candidate from ten years to one year, was narrowly defeated by city voters this past Tuesday.

City Council members had sought to retain the ten year requirement but were told by the city solicitor, Benjamin L. Brown, that such a bill would not hold-up under a court challenge.

The defeat of the ballot question leaves the city without any regulations for candidates seeking to run for the highest citywide office, increasing fears that it would open the door for out-of-towners, "carpet baggers," to come in and run.

But that concern could soon be rectified thanks to second-district councilman Nathaniel McFadden who will introduce a new residency requirement bill for the mayor at the regular Monday night City Council meeting next week.

The latest proposal would seek a four-year limit, though it is still unclear just what time constraints would be considered acceptable to the courts.

"They [the courts] have stated (unconstitutional) arguments that it won't withstand a court test, but the time I have 72 hours people decisively rejected me," councilman explained, referring to the numbers of residents who voted against the ballot question.

Mayor Schaefer was not pleased that the question had failed and said, through his press secretary Pat Bernstein, that the voters had simply not understood the language of Question N.

Remarked McFadden, "I think they did understand. Why would they understand and be clear on every other issue but that particular one?"

Question P still under discussion

By Valerie Cooper
AFRO Staff Writer

Calling Tuesday's election defeat of Question P, in part, a result of sabotage, members of "Citizens United for An Elected School Board" held a press conference on Wednesday, discussing what they termed "foul play on Election Day." Keith Brooks, a parent and organizer remarked, "It was an attempt to turn the vote around."

The group is concerned about ballots that were distributed in the 3rd and 7th congressional districts, bearing the names of the district representatives and implying their opposition to Questions P and Q.

Question P called for an elected school board and Question Q would have carved the city into 18-single council districts.

In a written press statement, the group insisted, "The real foul play was the distribution by the group against the elected school board of a ticket misleadingly identifying Congressman Parren Mitchell with opposition to an elected school board. Congressman Mitchell was an early and major supporter of an elected school board. This deceptive ticket, combined with what was strongly believed to have been sabotage of over half the voting machines throughout the city, was the only ticket available to people at many polls in the city.

Denise Jones-Dorsey, a parent, termed the sabotage, "Two-tiered" because the ballots were distributed in two districts known for having heavy voter participation. She added, "Despite the deceptiveness, we were able to amass 43 percent of the vote in this city. This tells us that education continues to be an issue in this city."

Added Keith Brooks, "Basically, this is the mayor's ticket. Robert Hillman is closely associated with the mayor." Mr Hillman is listed as the treasurer for the ballot's sponsoring organization, "Parents and citizens Against an Elected School Board."

Pat Bernstein, Mayor Schaefer's press secretary, denied the allegation. "Mr. Hillman is an attorney with a private practice. There is no official connection between the city and Mr. Hillman. The mayor is delighted with the support that he got in defeating that concept. It encouraged him to continue in the direction he is moving in. He's taking the results of the

BG&E rates to increase 68 cents

By Eddie King
AFRO Staff Writer

The average BG&E customer's bill will increase by 68 cents beginning December 1.

The Public Service Commission has given the utility company the nod to proceed with raising its fuel rate cost subject to review within the next two months or so.

The fuel rate is that portion of a customer's bill that reflects the actual cost of fuel used to generate electricity. Each month the cost of that fuel is calculated, based on an 18-month cycle.

If the amount of usage and cost has increased or decreased by five percent, BG&E files for an increase or decrease with the PSC, the result is an increase or decrease in a customer's monthly bill.

BG&E spokesperson Mary Frantz said that the reason for the increase is due to the demand for more electricity by customers.

"When people demand more power, we have one nuclear generator.

"We have to depend on a fossil fuel; that is oil or coal, which is

Vietnam vets to be honored on Monday

Monday, November 12 is Veterans' Day. The day was originally known as Armistice Day and was celebrated on November 11, the date of the end of World War I. Armistice day is still remembered in many parts of the world.

The desire for peace was rekindled with the end of World War II, and the desire was embodied in the creation of the United Nations. Shortly afterward, it appeared that the U.S. had abandoned the dream of peace.

As a result of the Korean War, Armistice Day was abruptly replaced in this country by Veterans' Day. It was a day honoring war veterans.

Since its inception, the country has fought in Viet Nam and the threat of a nuclear was looms ever-present.

There will be activities across the city and the state and in Washington, D.C. Viet Nam veterans will be honored.

Many Maryland Viet Nam veterans will journey to Washington for the unveiling of a statue commemorating their participation in that war. The unveiling, to be held at the Viet Nam Veterans Memorial, will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday, November 11.

Secretary of Defense, Caspar Weinberger will take part in wreathlaying ceremonies Monday, at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, VA.

A spokesperson at the American Legion Department headquarters at War Memorial Plaza in Baltimore said many of its members will be participating in activities throughout the state, with many local posts observing the day.

The same is true of many local posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Veterans' Day is a holiday for most Maryland State agencies, Baltimore District Courts and banks. Most city business will continue as usual.

OES conference in Balto. this weekend

Some groups have really long titles. One such group that is highly respected, but has a really long name is the Myra Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star — Prince Hall Affiliation State of Maryland and Jurisdiction. Let's call them the "Eastern Stars" for short.

But just who are the "Eastern Stars" and what is their mission? According to Alice H. Catlin, grand worthy matron of the Myra Grand Chapter, the "Stars" are made up of mothers, daughters, sisters, wives or widows of Masons. Good cleancut "women from the neighborhood" can also join in some capacity. The group is not exclusively black although

Nobel winner urges blacks to fight against apartheid

Tutu receives honorary degree

By Susan Baumel
AFRO Staff Writer

Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu made an appeal to all black and freedom loving people in the United States to "get it together."

Using the Jewish lobby and their influence over U.S. policy is Israel and Poland as examples Tutu urged blacks to pull together and lobby against apartheid in South Africa. He also said blacks should set an agenda of priorities for domestic issues.

Tutu was given an honorary Howard University School Divinity in a special ceremony during 69th Annual Convocation. Tutu told the gathering of dignitaries, alumni and students that black South Africans "want their freedom soon and they want it peacefully."

Winner of the Nobel Prize for Peace, Bishop Desmond Tutu (C) receives an honorary degree, Doctor of Humane Letters, Wednesday from Howard University. Dr. Geraldine Woods, (R) chairman of the Board of Trustees, bestows the drape. (UPI)

"I believe it is only if the international community helps us (the black South African will be free, otherwise Armageddon is upon us," he said.

Referring to President Reagan's successful re-election bid, Tutu told the audience that he is "fearful of the next four years."

At a press conference later Tutu expanded on the statement saying he has Reagan's constructive engagement policy with South Africa as "unmitigated disaster for blacks and saw no reasons to revise that."

Tutu called apartheid "evil.
