UMCP sets minority job fair

COLLEGE PARK — Job prospects are better for 1985 college graduates that they have been in years. Still, the University of Maryland College Park is helping its minority students put their best feet forward as they prepare to enter the job market.

More than six dozen of the largest employers in the Washington area — from AT & T to Xerox — will recruit UMCP students at the 8th annual Minority Student Job Fair, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 6, in the Grand Ballroom of the Adele H. Stamp Union. Graduate students and alumni also are invited.

"Participating employers tell us our students are the best prepared of those they have seen at other job fairs," says Joseph Samuels, director of the Office of Minority Student Education, which, along with the UMCP Career Development Center, is sponsoring the event. UMCP students have been so successful in landing positions through past OMSE job fairs that one agency last year hired five UMCP students to fill six job slots. Top agencies return year after year because the results of hiring UMCP minority students have been so positive.

"Technical areas still have the lead in employment," says Samuels. "But for liberal arts students, we also find that some agencies are looking for people with lots of creativity and ability to adapt; there are jobs available for them as well."

For further information about the job fair, call 454-5774.
