ED STEPHEN'S GOSPEL WORLD

Mt. Moriah Baptist hosts great gospel show

Violinaires

Clouds of Joy

By Ed Stephens, Jr.

Gospel entertainment once again came alive on a week night that attracted better than 450 people to Greater Mount Moriah Baptist Church, located at 910 N. First St. The program, sponsored by The Las Muchachas, presented The Fantastic Violinaires teaming up with The Mighty Clouds of Joy. Joining these two national recording groups were Richmond's gospel performers, The Five Kings of Harmony and The New Jewels.

This wasn't a first time planned week night program sponsored by The Las Muchachas, for many years national recording artists have invaded our city during the week in performance sponsored by this organization. They are one of the few organizations that are still actively thriving to keep gospel programs alive and vibrant. To invite Robert Blair and his high pitched Violinaires and the notorious Mighty Clouds of Joy together, enlightened the attraction beyond satisfaction; what a program.

The evening began musically featuring The Five Kings of Harmony, giving the audience tunes such as "The Time Is Now," "Old Ship of Zion" and "Rough Side of the Mountain." And secondly from Henrietta Doswell & The New Jewels singing "My Yoke Is Easy," "Lift The Saviour Up" and "Why Me," three spiritually possessed selections that created more than a musical spark.

The Fantastic Violinaires led the way for the battle between the musical giants, being one of today's top recording gospel artists mainly in the quartet category. The group also has some recording age under their belts but the younger talents continue to infiltrate the modern day trends which keeps the Violinaires up front in the gospel news. Selections as "Old Time Religion," "I've Come Too Far," "Doctor Jesus," "She Used To Hold Me In Her Arms" and "It Will All Be Over Afterwhile" have made the group tremendously popular. And today these songs are still included in the group's musical format, reflecting back down memory lane as a reminder of yesteryear. Full of vitality and charisma, The Violinaires presented the 450 spectators a 55-minute musical experience, causing those who knew what gospel music should be like, to once again feel the generating vibrations. But just in case the moment had not arrived, Robert Blair slowed the music down to feature the falsetto voices of "Little Shot" and Danny singing "Where He Leads Me." "Little Shot's" singing career with The Violinaires reaches way back to the earlier years, after leaving the group and later returning. In between this point the group searched for another high-pitched male vocalist. Then came Danny. Together on stage these two gentlemen provide a special segment to entertain the audience through voice distinction and harmony, through the chosen selection "Where He Leads Me."

Joe Ligon and The Mighty Clouds of Joy had a tough act to follow and after not seeing the face of their newest secret weapon, Paul Beasley, the task became a challenge. Remembering earlier years the group had always compelled their listeners to performance domination, but as years progressed and the style of music changed, so was required to keep in step with the times. Since that time the founder and lead singer Joe Ligon has had his first solo album debut "The Old Revival Back Home," which increased the musical pace for the Clouds. Joining Joe Ligon was new-comer Paul Beasley. The Mighty Clouds of Joy's current album, "Sing and Shout" on Myrrh Records is still blazing record charts across the country. The group was inducted into America's Music and Entertainment Hall of Fame in Chicago and appeared at the James Cleveland Workshop of America in New York this year. They were headlined at Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell summer series and Disneyland's Gospel Night September 20, for the fourth consecutive year.

Celebrating 25 years as a gospel group, The Mighty Clouds of Joy have set the standards for the traditional R & B sounds of the gospel music industry with the release of 24 albums. Performing more than 200 concerts a year, they are Grammy Award winners, and are one of the few groups to have their Gospel music cross over to secular airplay. In short The Mighty Clouds of Joy are to Gospel music what the Temptations were in the heyday of R & B. When here last also at Greater Mount Moriah Baptist Church, Joe Ligon spoke of retiring in reference to the Clouds, as he stated "the boys don't like to rehearse anymore." But in cross reference in an interview with Paul Beasley, he stated that his singing career had just begun in regards to the group retiring. Beasley no doubt is at the prime of his singing career and many groups would love to have him aboard. Maybe this is the reason he wasn't performing with the Clouds this past time at Greater Mount Moriah Baptist Church. As the old cliche goes, the show must go on, but without Beasley the once added special ingredient certainly appeared incomplete and for some odd reason I believed the crowd felt the same way. Selections performed by The Mighty Clouds of Joy such as "Jesus Is Coming Back," "Everybody Ought To Praise His Name," "Sing And Shout," "We've Come This Far By Faith" and several other proclaimed favorites only filled an hour of performance.

AT ST. JOHN'S SOCIAL HALL

Outreach awards to be given Nov. 29th

By Brion M. Tyson
AFRO Staff Writer

Next Friday morning the Associated Managers, Inc., a group of black managers within Joseph E. Segrams and Sons, will award 20 area outreach organizations with their share of $10,000 raised for the purpose of feeding Baltimore's hungry.

As told to the AFRO this week by the group's fundraiser chairperson, Guy Patrick, over 500 concerned members of the community attended the A.M. fundraiser held at The Forum on Primrose Ave. and $5,000 was raised.

Over 500 people were in attendance to enjoy a bountiful meal, festive dancing and various door prizes. An additional highlight was the positive reception of the campany's moderation magazine, "Another Point of View."

Noting that the various hunger organizations worldwide cannot fully address such a massive problem, A.M. began their fight against hunger with a successful raffle. The monies raised were donated to various churches in the Baltimore area, who in turn gave these funds to needy families.

At the Bullroast-Fundraiser, A.M.'s members were out in full force to show that they had worked diligently and collectively. Present from the New York Staff was Mr. Walt Thornton and Mr. Charles Crisp. Present from the Lawrenceburg plant was Charles Collins and Charles Daniels.

The members in the Baltimore area are President, Isiah Rasbury, Benjamin Brooks, Jerra Byrd, Ernestine Cooper, Lee Cunningham, Clifton Gillard, Claude Parker, Guy Patrick, Al Pinder, Tom Ricks, Bruce Smith, Melvin Taylor, Jeff Thompson, Robert Washington, Dennis Watson, Douglass Wilde, and Howard Williams.

A.M.'s logo "Together We Can Make A Difference," was wholeheartedly felt at the affair. Noteworthy is the fact that the organization has not limited itself to the Baltimore area, but empathize with all people worldwide.

As explained by Mr. Patrick, A.M.'s goal is to work together with the people of Baltimore to uplift our communities. And also to show others that there is a positive force available to lend their time and support to those in need.

By an agreement made by corporate managers at Segrams, the company matched the amount raised at the October fundraiser, which brought the total amount to $10,000. Ten area organizations, including the Maryland Food Committee, will receive a portion of those monies at St. John's Social Hall on Nov. 29th.

"Each outreach organization should receive approximately $1,000," Mr. Patrick told the AFRO.

Tracing the origin of the Associated Managers, Inc., according to Mr. Patrick, the group started in 1979 as an organization concerned with the upward mobility of blacks within the company.

"Now that we've achieved many of our original goals, we want to extend our expertise to the black community in Baltimore," Patrick told the AFRO Tuesday.

Rev. Benjamin Foust, whose church will host the Nov. 29 fund distribution affair, told the AFRO Tuesday, "I can appreciate a group like the Associated Managers for their concern for the needy people of our city. It's a new kind of thrust from a different, non-philanthropic, citizen's group which formed in an unusual industry. I'm happy to see this group now seeking to extend their services to the hurt and hunger of an increasing number of Baltimoreans."

Expressing his pleasure with the success of the group's recent fundraiser, Mr. Patrick said, "We've discovered that there are a great many people in our communities who are willing to help fight hunger in the city. What we want to do is try to harness that element and use it to conquer the problem."

The organization's logo of a circle of people joining hands, according to Mr. Patrick, clearly depicts the group's attitude.

Interfaith Network to pray for AIDS fear victims

The AIDS Interfaith Network of Baltimore is sponsoring a prayer service for the Baltimore community on Sunday, Nov. 24 at 5 p.m. The service, entitled "AIDS: MOVING BEYOND OUR FEAR," will be held at Mount Vernon Place United Methodist Church, Mount Vernon Square, Baltimore.

The event is endorsed by the Central Maryland Ecumenical Council (C.M.E.C.) representing 30 denominations, the International Ministerial Alliance; Archbishop William D. Borders, Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Baltimore; Bishop Theodore Eastman, Episcopal Diocese of Maryland; Bishop Morris Zumbrun, Maryland Synod Lutheran Church in America; Bishop Joseph Yeakel, Baltimore Conference United Methodist Church; and Dr. Herbert Valentine, executive of the Baltimore Presbytery; and others.

The AIDS Interfaith Network holds the belief it is possible for Baltimoreans to transcend fear of AIDS. Its focus is moving beyond isolation to service. The prayer service hopes to offer spiritual support to persons with AIDS and their families, and to a community confused by fear.

The Rev. Bryce W. Shoemaker, president of C.M.E.C., will address the assembly, and area clergy and musicians will lead the worship service. A collection will be taken for the Health Education Resource Organization (H.E.R.O.) Special Assistance Fund, established for the emergency needs of AIDS patients. A reception will follow the service, at which representatives from H.E.R.O. and the American Red Cross will be available to answer questions about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

The AIDS Interfaith Network of Baltimore is an association of clergy and laity representing many faiths. They share a ministry of healing for AIDS patients, of outreach and education for a community confused by fear. The network has a four-fold purpose!

-to insure pastoral care for AIDS patients and their families;
-to educate the community by dispelling myths and fears about AIDS;
-to advocate for justice in health care, housing and job security;
-to promote development of a hospice for AIDS patients.

The next general meeting of the AIDS Interfaith Network will be held at the Central Maryland Ecumenical Council offices at the Episcopal Cathedral, University Parkway and Charles Street, on Sunday, Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. For more information call C.M.E.C. at 467-6194.

FOR ALL WE KNOW

Gov. Harry Hughes is slated as the main speaker at the Monday, Nov. 25 seminar sponsored by the Maryland Coordinating Committee for the Martin Luther King, Jr. Holiday.

The event which convenes at the Joint Hearing Room in the Legislative Services Building in Annapolis, opens at 11 p.m. and extends through a lunch hour at 1 p.m. and wrapup beginning at 3 p.m.

The focus is on arranging for Maryland's MLK birthday observance as a statewide effort and coordination with Washington and Atlanta, GA.

Quoting Coretta Scott King, Dr. King's widow, the committee accents that the Jan. 15 holiday should be a time of national unity, putting aside what divides us and celebrating that which unites us."

Co-chairmen are former Sen. Verda F. Welcome and Rabbi Murray Saltzman. David Rakes is program committee head and Carroll Greene, Jr., state coordinator.

The committee's address is the Banneker Douglass Museum, 84 Franklin Street, Annapolis, 21401, phone 269-3993. Mr. Greene is curator of the Museum and may be reached at that address and phone.

DECEMBER 21 FAST DAY

The Maryland Federation of Organizations has launched a drive to raise funds for the Maryland Food Committee and the famine nations of Africa where there is also need for medical supplies.

The drive is in the form of a fast which begins Saturday, Dec. 21 at 6 a.m. and extends through Sunday, Dec. 22, 6 a.m., a title of 24 hours.

The Convention Center is the place where cots will be provided for sleeping. There will be entertainment, gospel choirs and visits of representatives from African Embassies.

A breakfast will be served at the end, 6 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 22. For further information call the Baltimore offices of Cong. Parren J. Mitchell, 962-2223 or 962-4530 or write to the Federation of Organizations, 1903 Bloomingdale Rd., Baltimore, Md. 21216.

SPLENDID LIVING LONG AGO

WALTER R. CARR SR., editor of the "NITELIFER" is a descendant of one of Maryland's most prominent of families. His late father was owner of more property than anyone else in Baltimore in his day and in addition he was owner of the first black moving picture house.

His mother, whom we knew as "Mother Dear", was the late Mrs. Adele Diggs Carr, a true lady of the era when ladies were aristocrats and very proper. Her home, where Walter still resides, was one of the most gracious and fantastic ever in Baltimore.

Their living room was a "parlor" of that era of manners and proper behavior. Only special guests were allowed their and only on special occasions. Those were the days when a silver plate on the marbletop hall table was the spot for you to place your calling card. You would be received after you were seated in the parlor.

The dining room was the scene of many a high society dinner party with only the finest of china, crystal stemware and silver, the correct menu and napkins in napkin rings.

An invitation to such an affair would be one to cherish for a lifetime.

Mrs. Carr had a maid and her wardrobe was one of exceptional beauty, understated but of finest fashion.

I have encouraged Walter to write about the home in which he was reared.

There is real, true history. Not like someone merely tells you but actually the story like none other that I know of. People today need to know, especially in this day when such picturesque living has all but vanished from our family scene.

A FINAL NOTE: The Carr residence has had the same phone number for over 40 years. I know that to be true. When I first came to Baltimore to reside that was the phone number my husband and I called for Walter and his family. We were inseparable as friends. Our children were the same age.

We used to "do" the Avenue at night with Walter and his wife Hannah and take the children riding or to the park.

On hot August nights, we joined other families in Druid Hill Park with the kids sleeping on cool sheets on the grass and the adults chatting the late night and early morning hours away.

P.S. - Those were the days before crime became such a boogy-boo on the Avenue and in the park. People had manners and respect for their neighbors. The communities were classy and clean. That was the life in the middle 1940's — 45 years ago.

POST OFFICE NEWS

The Post Office, the main one on Fayette Street, is NOT open Sundays and what a shame during this season when families are mailing early to servicemen abroad.

Not knowing, I was there Sunday and both self-help stamp machines were broken. Also out of order was the Parcel Slot. I managed to get some 25-cent stamps, one by one, from the only slot (out of about a dozen) which was working. What an ordeal!
