NEW LINKS headquarters near completion

The completion of The Links national headquarters building in Washington, not only marks the first time, in nearly 40 years of public service, that the organization has had a place of its own, but it also marks the beginning of a new "link" to the community.

Scheduled to open after dedication ceremonies on the morning of November 16, the building is designed to help accommodate small groups interested in holding seminars, workshops, learning sessions and meetings.

Originally constructed in 1938 as a single-family dwelling, the building at 1200 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W. was purchased by The Links, Inc. in 1984. Reconstruction began last fall. John S. Chase Associates, an architectural firm with offices in Washington, Houston and Dallas, is coordinating its redesign.

The 4,500-square-foot building is unique in design and capabilities. For example, special features have been added with the handicapped in mind. In addition to a sidewalk ramp, an elevator has been installed in the three-story structure. A restroom, located on the first floor, has been built for accessibility.

In essence, the building retains much of its original appearance, "The outside has been refurbished, not changed," says The Links national president, Dr. Dolly D. Adams.

"We have kept the outside in tact — which reflects the period of the thirties when it was built," adds Chase. "Yet, we have updated the inside so that the building has been completely modernized."

Dr. Adams, who heads an organization of approximately 6,000 women, representing 203 chapters in 37 states and the District of Columbia, reveals that a special feature of the center is a large, multi-purpose room that will house materials relevant to the history of The Links.

Further, it will serve as a depository for books written by, and about, Black women. "The United Negro College Fund has an archivist who has catalogued all of our history since the organization was founded, in Philadelphia in 1946, through 1982.

It is currently being transferred," says the president.

With the use of audio-visuals including 16 mm projectors, tapes, slides and film, the activities of the organization can be more readily explained.

Visitors to the center will see eclectic furnishings. The work space on the first floor is equipped with computers, copying machines and the latest technology for use by the staff. Period furnishings and chandeliers, on the other hand, are in keeping with the original design. The old, wooden ban
