Medical technician braves fire to save children

By Angela Tillman

Most people like to think they are brave but secretly wish that a situation never comes along where bravery has to be proved. For Roy Stuart, the situation could not be avoided.

"It was approximately 12:30 a.m. when I went into my apartment building and heard voices of people yelling for help. At that time, I saw smoke and red flames shooting from a building almost parallel to mine."

"I ran across the street and saw children jumping out of a window, and tenants of the burning building hollering 'someone call the fire department!' I instructed the children not to jump. I knew that if they'd jump, they would get hurt. It did not appear that they were in immediate danger at the time. Terrified and afraid of the unknown, the kids wanted to jump. I held my arms out catching them one-by-one as they fell."

For 30-year-old Stuart, a medical records technician at Walter Teed's OB-GYN Clinic, an act of bravery was not the issue when he helped assist residents from a burning apartment building on November 14. Saving lives was his only concern.

"I had worked the evening shift that night and came out of my apartment to get some fresh air. It helps me wind down from a long working day," said Mr. Stuart, who lives at 4005 Fourth Street, SE. DC. "The fire took place on Condon Terrace, so I could see it from my building."

"Restoring order was the first thing that came to my mind because I know how people panic during a fire. It's easy for me to tell someone not to panic and that everything is going to be alright. But when fire and smoke is all around you and coming up your throat, you just want to get out," he continued.

"Being a paramedic myself at one time, I knew that in order to minimize the amount of injuries, I had to restore some order until the fire department arrived. All I could hear were voices of people screaming and yelling for their lives and the lives of their loved ones. Shortly afterwards, I heard loud sounds of sirens as firetrucks and firemen came on the scene."

SAVE — As medical records technician, Roy Stuart, who assisted the D.C. Fire Dept. with saving victims from an apartment fire, checks a patient's chart to ensure the doctor's orders are recorded.

"Another tenant and myself had to point out to firemen where the tenants were in the building. I left the scene around 2:30 a.m. and Firemen were still cleaning up. I'm pretty sure someone had sustained minor injuries," Stuart said.

According to Lt. Clarence E. Foreman, officer in charge of Company Eight D.C. Fire Department, a firefighter on the scene reported to him that he had been greatly assisted by Stuart who helped bring many civilians to safety, via ladder.

"It was a very tough fire," Lt. Foreman said, serious threat. Many people would have lost their lives that night.

There were 13 people taken to the hospital for different injuries including broken bones. Some people jumped from as high as the fourth floor in order to save their lives."

"I think it's important to help assist in certain situations before help arrives as long as it does not impede on the efforts of the fire fighters or become a liability to oneself. Roy Stuart took an appropriate step to alleviate a very serious condition."

"I'm just glad that I was able to be there when I was needed. And it appears that I was needed," Stuart said.

Stuart grew up in Washington and graduated from Calvin Coolidge High School in 1972. He attended Strayer College and George Washington University. Following that, in 1978 he left the area to make a new home in Sacramento, Calif. He returned to D.C. last year.

Homemade Christmas gifts more appreciated in today's world

By Libby Clark
Amalamated Publishers, Inc.

Christmas is for kids...all ages from one to one hundred. It's the joys and the delight of sharing the yuletide season with family, friends and neighbors that makes the holidays so fulfilling and meaningful. It's a very, very special time, so experience it to its fullest.

Capture the 'spirit' of an "Olde Tyme" Christmas. Let your thoughts soar to an era long since gone. Picture the effervescence and sparkle of a magestic Evergreen; the vertible storehouse of wonderous toys and beautiful gifts piled beneath it, the crackle of cedarwood burning in the fireplace; and the intoxicating auroma of succulent goodies—turkey roasting, pastries, cake and pie baking and vegetables cooking emanating from the kitchen. Small talk, joyful laughter, firm handclaps, affectionate hugs and kisses.

Whether you're beginning the tradition of Christmas in America, or continuing it before you rush out and fight hordes of last minute shoppers, to purchase insignificant and inferior merchandise why not utilize your kitchen or your sewing room and make a lovely and unique gift for that special person on your gift list.

Homemade gifts are becoming more appreciated in our so-called high tech society. In fact such gifts as jams, jellies, relishes, pot holders, dish towels, wreaths, fruit cakes, cookies, candies and nut treats and decorative candles are the 'in' thing this year.

Cooking and making gift items is both economical and enjoyable. Consider the fact that you can make four or five gift items for the price you would pay for one in the specialty shops, supermarket or department store.

Follow these recipes. You can make a lot of people happy this yuletide season.

Cut out with floured 2-inch round cookie cutter. Arrange 1½ inches apart on the prepared cookie sheets and bake for eight to ten minutes. Transfer from cookie sheets to wire racks to cool. When completely cool, drizzle cookies with melted chocolate, or red and green candy decorations.

OLD FASHIONED MOLASSES COOKIES - 4 cups sifted all purpose flour: 1 tsp baking soda; 1 tsp baking powder; ½ cup butter softened; 2 tbsp grated orange rind; 1 cup granulated sugar; 1 egg; 1 cup light molasses;

Avon kicks off seminars to lure black women

By Cynthia Nevels

Avon representatives presented the first in a series of seminars designed to encourage black women to take a new look at the company's products. Held in Washington, D.C. at the Radisson Henley Park Hotel on Dec. 7 and at the Omni Hotel in Baltimore, Maryland the next day the sessions entitled, "Morning Glow" experienced an overwhelming turnout.

As one of the world's top manufacturer and distributor of cosmetics fregrances and jewelry, Avon products are sold directly through approximately 1.4 million independent representatives in at least 30 countries. A major share not overlooked by Avon, is the consumer base among black women. In the past five years, Avon has developed hair, skin-care and make-up specifically designed for the woman of color.

Produced by JAM, Inc. for Avon Products, the audience was treated to a slide-production highlighting the various hues and features of ebony beauty which also brought into focus the essence of Avon's program toward the minority market.

Jean Ford, beauty and public relations manager of special markets for Avon was on hand at the two seminars to orient consumers of the company's philosophy and goals. Said Ford: "With the number of black women in the workforce, we are a real force in the economy. We seek work opportunities that offer personal satisfaction and meaningful financial rewards. As consumers, we demand a quality product at a fair price that meets a specific need."

Ford told the audience that Avon provides cosmetics to enhance the black woman and secondly provides her the opportunity to be an independent businessperson by selling Avon at her own time and pace.

Presented at the tables were samples of current products and a brochure detailing the special cleansers, and array of make-up foundation to adorn various skin tones and hues.

Realizing that the black woman is unique and is constantly on the go careerwise, Ford emphasized the need for the black woman to maintain a healthy balanced diet, keep a positive attitude, find time and space for self, and above all look good with of course some help from Avon!!!!!

ACT-SO program sets goal for national finals

The Washington Branch NAACP has joined with the Commerce Committee for Black Concerns at the Census Bureau to form a volunteer task force of interested people concerned about youth.

"We have formed this task force to demonstrate that black students can succeed in the classroom at the superior levels of achievement we display in the athletic arenas of this nation. It is our goal to afford the same respect for black scholastic and cultural achievement that is awarded the heroes of the world of sports.

"Our task is to conduct an academic olympic competition for students in grades nine (9) through twelve (12) in various categories such as architecture, biology, electronics, chemistry, energy, mathematics, physics; the performing arts such as instrumental music, vocal music, and dance; and various humanities areas such as music composition, poetry, and original essay writing; as well as the visual arts, such as painting, filemaking, photography, and sculpture," a spokesperson said.

The public is urged to get behind the young people, and help send our Olympic Team to the national ACT/SO finals next June.

The finals will be held in Baltimore, Maryland, at the National NAACP Convention. At that time, the Washington team will compete with high school students from throughout the nation for gold, silver, and bronze medals, plus monetary prizes and scholarships.

The program is called the ACADEMIC OLYMPICS, or the OLYMPICS OF THE MIND. The official title is Afro-Academic, Cultural, Technological, and Scientific Olympics. This program is a major project of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).
