S. African troops in Swaziland

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South African soldiers crossed the border into Swaziland on Christmas Eve and warned local tribesmen they would be attacked if they gave shelter to black nationalist guerrillas, Swazi police said today.

In Pretoria an army spokesman would not confirm the report."All possible inquiries have been made and no confirmation of these allegations can be found," he said.

The army denied last week that it was involved in another raid on two homes in Maseru, the capital of Lesotho, in which nine people were killed by men with blackened faces who fired silenced weapons.

The Lesotho government ignored a claim from the opposition Lesotho Liberation Army that it was responsible, and blamed South Africa for the attack.

On Thursday, meanwhile, authorities denied reports that black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela was being held in solitary confinement in Pollsmoor prison, where he is serving a life sentence for treason and sabotage.

Solly Mkhonta, spokesman for the Royal Swazi police, today quoted residents near the Lavumisa border post, on the independent kingdom's southern border, saying an unspecified number of soldiers crossed into Swaziland on Christmas Eve.

He said the soldiers told the residents, "If we see any suspected member of the African National Congress crossing from Swaziland into South Africa we will shoot that person and attack the area from which he came."

A Swaziland defence force source said he was surprised at the remarks "because to the best of our knowledge there are no ANC members in the country."

Swaziland authorities have repeatedly deported ANC members and last month announced none were left.

In another development, police said leaders of the warring Zulu and Pondo tribes planned to meet today in an effort to stop the bloody battles between their warriors in which 80 people have been killed.

A senior police spokesman said he expected the death toll to rise as more bodies were found in the rugged Umbumbulu hills south of Durban.

Police said a dispute over water and land may have caused the confrontation. Red Cross officials said high unemployment also contributed to the tension.

In Pretoria, police said six people died in unrest in South Africa's black townships Thursday, bringing the nationwide death toll since February 1984 to 1,021. Some 21 people have died in racial violence since Monday.

Three people were killed in a clash between supporters of the United Democratic Front (UDF) and the more radical Azanian Peoples Organization (AZAPO) in Mbekweni, a township outside Paarl near Cape Town.

Both groups oppose South Africa's official policy of racial segregation, known as apartheid, but differ on the role whites should play in the "liberation struggle."

Police also found two unidentified bodies in Khayelitsha outside Cape Town and in Johannesburg's Soweto township.

Another man was shot to death by riot police, who opened fire on blacks throwing stones in Fort Beaufort, some 100 miles north of Port Elizabeth, a police spokesman said.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the prisons department in Cape Town, Erika van Zyl, said allegations by Winnie Mandela that her husband Nelson was in solitary confinement was "utter, utter nonsense.

"Apart from anything else, he was seen on three occasions by his closest relatives over Christmas," she said.

Mrs. Mandela told reporters on Christmas day her 67-year old husbands, serving a life sentence for treason and sabotage, had spent the loneliest and bleakest Christmas of his time behind bars.

Mrs. Mandela, accompanied by their daughter Zinzi and three grandchildren, visited the founder of the outlawed African National Congress on Christmas Eve, Christmas Day and Thursday. Each visit lasted 40 minutes.

Mrs. Mandela, a leading activist herself, said Mandela "is now held in solitary confinement under the pretext that he is in prison hospital."

DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA — Youths at an anti-apartheid rally here on Dec. 15 flourish copies of the Freedom Charter, a document drawn up 30 years ago by the now banned African National Congress. It proclaim: "South Africa belongs to all who live in it, Black and White." The rally ended in violent clashes between police and demonstrators.

Ugandan airline grounded

KAMPALA, Uganda — Ugandan Airlines' entire fleet of four planes has been grounded because of non-payment of maintenance bills, leaving hundreds of passengers stranded around Europe and the Middle East during the Christmas season, an official said.

The official, who refused to be identified, said hundreds of passengers were left stranded in London, Rome, Dubai and Nairobi because of the grounding.

The official said one of the national flag carrier's aging Boeing 707s was impounded at London's Gatwick airport because of non-payment of previous maintenance bills.

The other Boeing 707 was on the ground at Nairobi's Jomo Kenyatta airport awaiting repairs. The official said the reports are being delayed because previous bills have not been paid.

One of the airline's 40 seat Fokker Friendship turbo-prop aircraft was also on the ground in Nairobi awaiting repairs and engine spares. The aircraft, which was hijacked Nov. 10 during an internal flight in Uganda, has been in Nairobi for three weeks but local service companies are demanding cash up front before they fix it.

The remaining plane in the fleet, another Fokker Friendship, was stranded in northern Uganda awaiting engine spares, the official said, but the airline has no money to pay for them.

The government-run airline was set up in 1981 following the collapse of East African Airlines, which was jointly run by Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda.

That airline collapsed when the East African Economic Community comprised of the three countries fell apart in 1977 because of disagreements over spending practices within the community.

Each country set up its own airline but only Kenya airways, which recently brought two new Airbuses, has made any money.

The International Monetary Fund has recommended that the Ugandan government sell its airline to the private sector.

Cease-fire breaks down in Sahara dispute

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — Burkina Faso accused Mali of violating a cease-fire agreement arranged by Libya less than an hour after it was to go into effect Friday by attacking a town on the border separating the two West African nations.

Burkina Faso's government radio said the cease-fire was to have gone into effect at midnight to end two days of clashes over a long-standing border dispute.

But less than an hour later, Malian forces attacked the border town of Koloko, which is not in the disputed zone, the radio said. Details on casualties were not released and Mali did not confirm the attack.

Burkina Faso radio, monitored in Abidjan, said Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Treiki arranged the cease-fire to end clashes between two of the world's poorest nations. It said Burkina Faso — once known as Upper Volta — signed the agreement but Mali refused.

There was no immediate comment from Mali but a Western diplomat reached in the Malian capital of Bamako said, "The claim of a cease-fire between the two parties seems premature."

Burkina Faso said from the capital, Ouagadougou, that as a result of the attack on Koloko, it would continue fighting. But no new clashes were reported.

The border clashes erupted Christmas Day as an apparent result of a long-standing dispute involving a strip of land that is said to be rich in minerals. The land is 100 miles long and 35 miles wide near where Burkina Faso, Mali and Niger meet.

The dispute is currently before the International Court of Justice at the Hague. Both the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity urged an end to the fighting.

The city of Koloko is not in the disputed zone but is on the main road between the southern Malian city of Sikasso — which Burkina Faso said it attacked — and the city of Bobo Dioulasso, Burkina Faso's second largest city.

Burkina Faso radio said in the attack on Sikasso, 20 miles inside Mali, its air force bombed what it called two military targets near the town and killed at least 15 people and wounded about 30 others. It described the raid as "victorious."

Burkina Faso claimed it recaptured four border towns after what it called a "barbarous Christmas Day attack" by Mali.

Early last month, Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy visited both countries. Diplomats said they were the only nations that failed to send leaders to the 30-nation Franco-African summit hosted by French President Francois Mitterrand in Paris recently.

Both countries are members of the West African Community of seven former French colonies, through which they technically have a non-aggression and mutual defense agreement. Mali has a per-capita gross national product of $180 while that of Burkina Faso is $210.

Cosby kid in Philly for KYW-TV telethon

PHILADELPHIA — Malcolm-Jamal Warner, who plays Theodore Huxtable on NBC's THE COSBY SHOW, joined EYEWITNESS NEWS Anchor Jerry Penacoli and weathercaster Linda Gialanella when they teamed up to host the second annual KYW-TV CHILDREN'S TELETHON benefiting The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia and St. Christopher's Hospital for Children.

The three - hour program was broadcast live from Channel 3's Philadelphia studios on December 21.

Other entertainers who appeared include rhythm and blues singer Teddy Pendergrass; comedian Craig Shoemaker; impressionists Sharon Michaels and Joe Longthorne; and recording artist Eugene Wilde, a Philadelphia native whose song "Don't Say No Tonight" hit No. 5 on billboard's Hot Black Singles chart recently.

MALCOLM-JAMAL WARNER — He's better known as son Theo on NBC's The Cosby Show, but he visited Philadelphia December 21 to join Channel 3 — KYW-TV, children's telethon.

KYW-TV's own in-house dance troupe, THE EVENING MAGAZINE DANCERS, also performed.

Mrs. Gloria Barnes, the president, officiated.

Mrs. Geraldine Ferguson, chairperson of the club's Sunshine Committee, reported having delivered 25 baskets to senior citizens.

Plans were formulated for the distribution of gifts to residents of rest homes in Camden and Red Oaks Manor in Lakeland, N.J.

Linebacker hosts luncheon

PHILADELPHIA — Reggie Wilkes is more than a hero on the football field. The Eagles linebacker is a hero off the field too. Especially to those on the receiving end of the community service projects Wilkes has supported with time and money.

One such project has been Crisis Intervention Network, a non-profit youth service agency committed to reducing juvenile violence and neighborhood tensions, and mediating residential conflicts. CIN is credited for reducing the gang violence that plagued Philadelphia a decade ago.

During the past year, Wilkes joined forces with CIN on numerous fundraising projects and has taken an active interest in the city's youth. He has become a spokesperson for CIN's public service announcements aired on local television stations and sponsored a field trip this past summer that gave CIN teenagers an opportunity to visit the Eagles training camp.

Wilkes continued his support for CIN with a luncheon at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel, December 10 that he co-sponsored with Wade Communications chairman, James Wade.

Eagles owner Norman Braman was the keynote speaker.

Says Wilkes, "We want to bring together the city's key business leaders and professional athletes to let them know what we already — Crisis Intervention Network performs an important function in our city and is worthy of their financial support to continue the work that has made Philadelphia a safer place for over a decade."

Wilkes says his support for CIN and similar projects comes from his high regard for the city he now calls "home." "Athletes owe a great deal to the residents of the city where they make a living. Afterall, its the fans that make it worthwhile. As a result, athletes should be motivated to give something back and Crisis Intervention Network has provided me with just such a vehicle," the Atlanta native said.

The CIN model of juvenile violence mediation and prevention, has been duplicated in cities across the country.

7 women cited at reception

PHILADELPHIA — The National Black Caucus of State Legislators honored Philadelphia's women leaders at an awards reception and luncheon here on December 7 at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel.

Seven women known for their achievements in an array of endeavors were honored.

"These women are role models for the city's youth. Because of their example, young people know there are no limitations on what they can do," said caucus president, Maryland State Sen. Clarence M. Mitchell, III.

"We selected these honorees as the representatives of the best in Philadelphia.

They are women who shunned the limelight for achieving their goals," said Commissioner Audrey Johnson-Thornton, treasurer of the Mayor's Commission for Women and chairperson of the NBCSL Women's Program.

Women NBCSL members cited.

Minnie Bowls Moore, Humanitarian Award, for her holiday dinner program, annually feeding over 1,500 people at Thanksgiving and Christmas;

Delores Brisbon, Achievement Award, the first woman and the first black appointed administrator of the University of Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia;

Arlene Bereal, Business and Industry Award, for actively recruiting minorities to employ in her construction firm;

Yvonne W. Roberts, Community Service Award, for coordinating the city's ethnic fairs;

The Rev. Audrey F. Bronson, Religious Service Award, the founder of the Sanctuary Church of the Open Door;

Faye Snow, Creative Arts Award, for her encouragement of young people's involvement in the arts; and Doris Bullock, Art and Culture Award, for her patronage of aspiring artists and musicians.

Dorothy Parker's COMMENT ABOUT CAMDEN

CAMDEN, N.J. — The second international Kwanzaa festival, which features free meals for Camden's homeless and needy residents, food gifts for low income families, entertainment and sales of handcrafted items by local vendors, was held on Rutgers University's Camden Campus.

it was sponsored by the Rutgers - Camden All Student' Coalition, a multi-racial organization concerned with the university's relationship with the surrounding community.

The event was styled after the week-long harvest festival, which is traditionally held throughout Africa in December.

The meals and food were donated by Rutgers - Camden students, faculty, staff members, area businesses, grocery stores and supermarkets.

Entertainment included reggae, poetry readings, African drumming, and puppet shows.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Williams of Kaighns Ae. have returned home from germany, where they were the guests of their nephew, SPC 4 Gordon Granger, who is stationed near Frankfurt, Germany. They took many side trips, which included Holland, Paris, Austria, Lichtenstein, Black Forest, Switzerland and the Alps.

The trip marked the climax of the celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Congratulations to Andre Norwood, a student at Morgan Village Middle School, who was recently listed in Volume 24 of the United States Achievement Awards Yearbook.

He was the winner in the National Band Contest. This enables him to apply for the USAA College Scholarships.

Recognition was also given to Andre by the Morgan Village School. He was awarded a plaque for his achievement.

Andre, who plays the saxophone and clarinet began his studies in music at the H. L. Bonsall Elementary School, under the band instructor, Ryan Bates.

The proud principals are Mrs. Dorothy Wyatt, of Bonsall Elementary School and Mrs. Patricia Cook of Morgan Village Middle School.

He is also an active member of the St. Luke UAME Church, Camden.

He and his sister render duets on the church programs.

CAMDEN — The Association of Negro Business and Professional Women of Camden and Vicinity, met in the home of Mrs. Zelda Wyatt on Kaighns Ave.
