CHURCH ROUNDUP

South African Prayer Vigil held at St. Ambrose

By Brion M. Tyson
AFRO Staff Writer

On Friday, Jan. 24, the Catholic Archdiocesan South African Coalition held a special Celebration of Hope Prayer Vigil and Service at St. Ambrose Church, 4502 Park heights Ave., at 7:30 p.m.

The Celebration of Hope marked the first anniversary of the day the coalition and other local groups joined with the National Free South Africa Movement's public witness at the South Africa Embassy in Washington, D.C. On that day, 39 "messengers" from Baltimore were arrested as they protested along with hundreds of others against the government system of apartheid. This initiated the coalition's year-long activities on the national, state, and local level.

The celebration began with a silent vigil outside of St. Ambrose Church. The program for the service featured talks by Ms. Jackie Wilson of the Washington Office on Africa and Bishop John Ricard, S.S.J., urban vicar for the archidiocese.

Participants heard the choirs from St. Edward's, St. Gregory's and St. Ambrose Churches. Members of the South Africa Coalition introduced plans for the coming year and proposed an effort to rededicate themselves to the fight against apartheid.

Phillip's Theology School to celebrate Founders's Day

The Phillips School of Theology will celebrate its 42nd Founders Day with three days of services and activities under the theme "The Significance of Theological Education." The Founders Day observance will take place in Atlanta, Feb. 1-6, with members of the Christian Methodist Episcopal (C.M.E.) Church from throughout the nation participating in the activities.

The Rev. Dr. William C. Larkin, administrative dean of Phillips, which is the only school owned and operated by the C.M.E. Church, stated, "The visiting bishops and other dignitaries will use their specialized expertise in their respective fields to show the relationships of theologically trained persons to the special functions of the church." The Rev. Dr. Larkin explained that those attending the activities should gain a more meaningful understanding of the need for the Phillips School of Theology.

Phillips, a school in the Interdenominational Theological Center (I.T.C.), was organized in 1944 and opened with 18 students and 7 professors at Lane College. In 1957, Phillips became one of the four charter schools at I.T.C.

Planned activities during the 1986 observance will include an alumni worship service at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 4, at Butler Street C.M.E. Church. The Rev. Dr. Edward Lynn Brown, a graduate of I.T.C. and general secretary of the C.M.E. Church's Board of Publication Services since 1978, will deliver the sermon.

Earlier that day, the Phillips Trustee Board will have sessions of discussions on the development of a "Distinguished Preachers Series" at the school in 1987, the continued development of Phillips' endowment program to meet student scholarship needs, and plans for finalizing a property purchase for Phillips' student housing.

On Wednesday, Feb. 5, the general sessions in the Phillips School board room will be devoted to the theme "The Significance of Theological Education." The 5:00 a.m. lecture series will focus on "Within the Boundaries of the C.M.E. Church." Bishop Othal H. Lakey, presiding bishop of the Second Episcopal District which includes Ohio, Kentucky and Central Indiana and chairman of the C.M.E. Church General Board of Christian Education, will lecture on the topic in relationship to America.

Atlanta Bishop P. Randolph Shy, who served 16 years in Georgia as presiding bishop, will discuss the topic in terms of Africa. Jamaica will be lectured on by Bishop Joseph C. Coles, Jr., elected 37th bishop of the C.M.E. Church and assigned to the Sixth Episcopal District. Haiti will be discussed by Bishop D.I. Isom, Jr., elected 43rd bishop in 1982 and Presiding Bishop of the Fifth Episcopal District.

The second lecture series on Wednesday will begin at 11:00 a.m. with a discussion on "Church Structure" by the Rev. William R. Johnson, Jr., a graduate of I.T.C., pastor of the Washington C.M.E. Chapel in Memphis and general secretary of the C.M.E. Board of Christian Education. A lecture on finance will follow by Bishop Nathaniel Linsey, a native Atlantan and Bishop of the Ninth Episcopal District which includes Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico, California, Oregon, Washington and Alaska.

At 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday, "The Significance of Theological Education at Phillips and I.T.C." becomes the focal point for the afternoon lecture series. Ecumenics will be discussed by the Rev. Dr. Paul A. Crow, Jr., president of the Council on Christian Unity of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). The topic of "Continued Education" will be covered by the Reverend Dr. Mance C. Jackson, associate professor and director of continuing education at I.T.C. and general secretary of Social Concerns with the C.M.E. Church. Dr. Thomas Hoyt, Jr., a graduate of I.T.C. and professor of Biblical Studies at Hartford Seminary in Connecticut, will complete the lecture series with a discussion on alumni.

The Founders' Day Fellowship Dinner is planning for 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, at the I.T.C. Refectory. The mistress of ceremonies will be Emma Darnell, a West Mitchell C.M.E. Church trustee and clerk of the C.M.E. Church Judicial Council. Bishop W.H. Graves, chairman of the Phillips Board of Trustees, and other friends and alumni will address the need for financial support of the school.

The Thursday morning general session will focus on creative usages of Phillips for the spiritual and educational enrichment of the school's alumni and the C.M.E. Church clergy and laity. The 11:00 a.m. chapel service in the I.T.C. Chapel will feature the Rev. Dr. W. Clyde Williams, president of Miles College in Birmingham. Dr. Williams, originally from Cordele, GA, is a distinguished educator and minister who has been pastor of several churches in Georgia including Atlanta's St. John C.M.E. Church from 1966 through 1970.

AFRO Special Receives Praise

Many appreciative calls and letters have come to the AFRO in response to the article that appeared in our Jan. 25 issue "The AIDS crisis: a local minister's view." Judging from responses to the article, our readers thought that it was very insightful and that it offered a compassionate and concerned assessment of the problem. The article was written by Rev. Duane Simmons, a local minister and graduate of Morgan State University.

AFTER PASTORS DISMISSAL

Dispute over D.C. Parsonage settled out of court

By Zachary Smith
AFRO Staff Writer

The bitter legal struggle between Margie Barr, the widow of New Southern Rock Baptist Church's late pastor, and that church was decided recently in an out of court settlement, according to Barr's attorney Charles Donnelly.

Barr, who was being evicted from her church-owned Ft. Washington residence of 12 years, will remain in the house until the end of March and pay $1,300 into the court-mandated escrow fund "to resolve all claims to the parties," said Donnelly in a recent telephone interview.

"It's unfortunate when the church feels that the only way they can resolve matters with the departed pastor's wife is to take her to court," Donnelly said.

"Mrs. Barr never wanted anything free," he added.

Margie Barr, when contacted on Tuesday night was upbeat.

"I thank God that it's all over." she said about the legal dispute that started last summer. "I would have been gone in September but they told me that I could buy the house at fair market value," she said.

Barr insists that the lawsuit, considered an embarrassment to New Southern Rock by many church members, was not the will of the congregation.

"New Southern Rock did not take me to court...this was the work of Leo Randall and Ulysses Barnes," said Barr, referring to the two church officials that handled the matter for the church.

"I would have never taken the church to court, it would have been a disgrace to Rev. Barr," she added.

Mrs. Barr is the widow of New Southern Rock's late pastor, Rev. M.L. Barr, who headed the church for 13 years until his death in 1984.

Margie Barr's plans include returning to New Southern Rock Baptist Church, and moving into her newly-built home in April.

Barr also said that she is not being evicted from the church's four bedroom house. "I have the option of staying here at the end of March for $600 a month rent. I am not being evicted," she said.

Barr is employed as a schoolteacher in the Prince George's County School System.

The legal dispute involved an alleged agreement between the church and Barr over the sale of the house.

The out of court settlement was mandated by Judge Jacob Levine of the Prince George's County Circuit Court on Jan. 9.

After the dismissal of Rev. Larry Snead from the pastorship of New Southern Rock Baptist Church on December 19, the church engaged in a bitter legal struggle with the widow of one of the church's former pastors over a house owned by the church.

That dispute, involving the former pastor's widow, Margie Barr, was resolved recently in an out of court settlement, according to her attorney Charles Donnelly.

His ideals call 'worthy'

Pope Paul gives praise to King Holiday

Pope John Paul II hopes that the first observance of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday as a federal holiday in the United States will foster "the worthy ideals exemplified by his life."

Agostino Cardinal Casaroli, Vatican Secretary of State, made the statement on behalf of Pope John Paul.

"Mindful of the significant contribution made by Doctor King in the guest for peace through justice and in search for universal solidarity through the elimination by non-violent means of every form of unjust discrimination, His Holiness hopes that this observance of his memory will serve to further the worthy ideals exemplified by his life," Cardinal Casaroli said.

"His Holiness once again assures the American people of his prayers and invokes upon them the abundant blessings of Almighty God," the message concluded. It was transmitted by Archbishop Pio Laghi, Apostolic Pro-Nuncio in the U.S., to the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.
