No pickets now at Provident Hospital

By Valerie Smith-Madden
AFRO Staff Writer

The sidewalks of Provident Hospital were empty on Thursday afternoon. There were no signs of the registered nurses who walked off their jobs on Feb. 10, in protest over working conditions and a proposed five percent pay cut.

There were no placards screaming of injustices by the hospital and seeking relief for the nurses.

There were no chants of unity, of lis ve ness, of demands for better working conditions. There were no passing motorists, slowing down to read the signs.

And, for the 57 nurses who dared to walk almost two weeks ago, there may soon be no jobs.

The hospital has begun to replace the striking nurses. It's a move that is within its legal right according to hospital lawyer, A. Samuel Cook, and a move of which the nurses were forewarned, by way of a letter.

According to Del. Larry Young, the nurses have sought the help of the legislative black caucus in their fight. The nurses, members of the caucus and Provident Hospital officials met in Annapolis on Thursday.

Larry Grosser, labor consultant for the nurses said that many of them have found other employment. "Fifty of them have new jobs, all with temporary agencies. They can make in three days, what they made in five days at Provident."

In light of this, its uncertain what the nurses hope to gain with this meeting.

Provident Trustee George Russell did not attend the meeting.

Russell said, "The negotiations with the nurses are under the auspices of the federal government. I am not personally involved in the bargaining process."

Russell added that there is a federal mediation team to bargain with the nurses.

"The effort by the (black) caucus to intervene is unlawful in that the nurses are going outside of the federal structure," continued.

Russell said that he would be glad to meet with caucus members in private but, "I can't go and bargain with the nurses in a different forum."

And of the speculation that he might be willing to make some deferments, Russell said emphatically, "I have not agreed to defer anything."

According to Provident officials, the hospital's occupancy rate has dipped below the 50 percent mark. The occupancy rate

City gays march on city hall

By Brion M. Tyson
AFRO Staff Writer

About 100 city gays marched and protested outside City Hall Tuesday evening to show their continued support for a gay rights bill that was rejected by the City Council last year. The gays marched in front of City Hall Monday afternoon, but returned the following evening because of the council's holiday absence.

"Yes we had folks marching both days because we wanted City Council members to know that we are still here. We won't push for another bill until there's a new council," said John De Hart, a coordinator of the Gay Community Center on East Chase St.

"The marches Monday and Tuesday were more of a remembrance that anything. A reminder of those who voted against our bill," De Hart added.

Goldie Mason, chairperson of the Black Gay and Lesbian Coalition said, "Our marches were very successful. One of the good things is that a number of senior citizens and several support groups came out to support us."

"Also," added Ms. Mason," a large number of black gays came out. Because many of these gays have been reluctant to come out in the past, we considered this a

Eastern Hi ruling put off to March 3

The fate of Eastern High School hangs in the balance for at least another two weeks.

Supporters of Eastern High School were due in Baltimore City Circuit Court on Feb. 14 to protest the city's handling of the proposed closing of the school.

According to attorney A. Dwight Pettit, the decision to close Eastern was made in 1981 and Pettit contends that the city's plan to close it was in violation of due process.

Pettit called the school board's 1985 announcement to close the school, "fraudulent."

Pettit and supporters of Eastern say there was enough money in the city's till to pay for renovation of the school in 1981. It was estimated that it would take $13 million to make the needed renovations.

Pettit contends however, "the school could have been maintained for less than that."

94TH YEAR NO. 56 BALTIMORE, MD FEBRUARY 22, 1986 40 CENTS

CITY PLAGUED BY TAXICAB ROBBERIES:

Gun toting woman in red coat shoots cabbie in head, escapes

By Elizabeth M. Oliver

A rash of a half dozen taxicab holdups occurring since Feb. 9 indicates robbers consider cab drivers a fairly easy source of money.

All the bandits, according to police, have been armed with guns, and although they threatened to kill if the money was not turned over, only one driver has been shot.

According to police reports the Royal Cab Co. holdup on Feb. 17 resulted in the driver being seriously injured by a bullet in the head fired from a gun held by a woman passenger.

The woman, between 23 and 24 years of age, is described by police as having on a red coat and carrying a .25 caliber automatic.

After the woman exited the cab and fled, police state a Beretta .25 caliber automatic was found on the back seat along with one .25 caliber shell.

The automatic Serial No. 645617 is registered at the Police Department as a stolen gun.

The holdup occurred Feb. 17. The Royal Cab driver, who is in the hospital in critical condition is Alfred Bennett, 32, who told police he was at the corner of Milton Avenue and Lafayette Avenue when he was hailed by a woman in a red coat.

He quoted the woman as asking to go to the 5500 block of Force Rd.

Within minutes after arriving at the Force Road location, the woman reached over the back seat and stuck her gun in the driver's cheek.

When she asked for money, Bennett told police he said he didn't have much but would give her what he had.

It was when he was going inside his jacket to get the money that the woman fired the gun into the cabbie's right cheek. She fled from the cab immediately, the wounded driver told police.

Able to drive himself to the 5400 block Sinclair Lane, the cabbie parked on an Exxon Station lot and opened the door on the driver's side.

He was only able to briefly tell the station people what happened when they came to his cab. He was bleeding from his mouth and cheek.

No. 2 Woman Robber

A Feb. 15 robbery of Diamond Cab driver was done by another woman, this time wearing a three-quarter red coat and a beige knit hat. This female bandit is between 27 and 28 years of age with dark skin and a round face, police were told.

The woman, who police are searching for, wielded a .25 caliber automatic handgun but did not fire it. She also took the gun with her after obtaining a total of $227 and the driver's brown leather wallet and personal papers.

Randolph Paige, 35, 4000 block Parkton Rd., driver of the No. 758 Diamond Cab said he picked up the woman when he was at the intersection of North Ave. and Washington Sts., at 2 a.m.

He said she told him to go to Penhurst Avenue and stopped him at Penhurst just north of Gordon.

Pointing the .25 caliber weapon at him, she demanded his wallet and all his money.

After the driver handed over the sum of $227, the woman got out the cab and walked north on Penhurst and disappeared.

Yellow Cabbie Escapes Death

Yellow Cab driver Charles Nicholdson, 61, escaped certain death when his cab was held up Feb. 15, in the 400 block Dennison St.

The armed robber politely withdrew his gun from the back of Nicholson's head, accepted the $60 from Nicholson and got out the cab.

The other robber who was also a passenger in the back seat joined the gun-toting man and they both disappeared.

Arrow Cab Armed Holdup

Two youths, 23-25 years of age, called an Arrow Cab on the phone, were picked up at their house, rode with the driver to 3600 block Liberty Heights Ave. and then robbed him at gunpoint, took a total of $30.

Clyde Avery, 51, the driver said the two men were dressed in green jackets. One had a sawed off shotgun hidden under his coat.

POLITICS '86

In an election year, trying to keep track of the legitimate candidates for public office and separating them from the not so legitimate ones can be difficult, what with a new name being added to the list of prospective candidates almost weekly.

With that thought in mind, two new names popped up recently in the already crowded field of official and unofficial candidates for the Seventh District Congressional race.

They are Isaiah Fletcher, a mid-level official with the Schaefer Administration, and Bill Quarles, a local Assistant U.S. Attorney.

Fletcher is a familiar if not controversial figure on local television and a black Republican. He is Coordinator of Human Resources for the city, a position tied to various social service programs.

He taught English at the high school and college levels for almost 20 years and was a personnel officer at the Bethlehem Steel Shipyard.

About a run for Congress, Fletcher commented, "Its an interesting proposition." He pleaded ignorance to having any real plans for the fall contest, saying that "some people" are trying to convince him to enter the race.

Sounding more like a candidate when asked if he could do the job in Congress if the opportunity presented itself, he added, "No ifs, ands or buts about that. I know I could."

Quarles has been an Assistant U.S. Attorney for four years and served one year as Deputy Coordinator of the Presidential Task Force on Drug Law Enforcement.

He says he is a Democrat.
