HACKERS CORNER

by Dan Haskins

Fore! Fore! Where ball... Don't do that... Please come back!

How familiar a plea that is as the golf ball soars majestically over the trees out of sight into an adjacent fairway scaring the wits out of an unsuspecting on-coming golfing with the ball ultimately resting up against the base of a trees and/or in the midst of assorted prickly bushes.

Aside from having to get on one's knees to play the bli as it is found, to say nothing of removing pine needles and stickers from the head and body, there are some redeeming features of the Slice, frequently called the "Banana Ball."

The Slice is generally a higher flying ball which lands very softly. On longer, hillier golf courses with hard and fast greens, there is a need for a higher flying ball which stops relatively easy.

The Slice occurs because of a counter clockwise spin which is applied to the ball as the club approaches the ball from outside of the normal swing path. The alignment of the club head at impact will dictate what shape the shot will take because the grooves on the face of the club will, with a wood or iron, cause spin to be applied to the ball.

Most golfers who play slice, and they do so from decade to decade, swing in the direction of a figure "eight" (8) — that is they manipulate the club back either with an open or closed clubface and then attempt to re-align the club face as the hitting area is entered, a swing feat possible by only the most agile and expert players.

The Slice may be accomplished by taking the nearest club face outside the target line and bringing the club head abruptly inside and cutting across the ball with the right hand.

Similarly, the club may be taken — not swung — immediately to the inside of the swing path and brought over the top of the ball with the right hand again forcing the action. What is preferable to forcing the singular action of the hands to cause spin characteristics is to use the entire body.

Most of us have either lived in or visited the "Country" where we cut wood with an ax for the wood burning kitchen stove or fireplace, and the resultant act and image undoubtedly explains where the term HACKER came from. Now that we know what the proper image is not... Let's discuss what it is (next week).

7 CCC runner in title meet

Seven members of the Catonsville Community College indoor track team have qualified for the National Junior College championships to be held March 6-8 at the University of Arkansas.

They are Willard Fairweather, Andre Moore, Thomas Walker and Leo Pickard at 500 meters; Fairweather, Moore, Clayton Revis and Junior Savrand, relay team, and Michelle O'Connell in the 1,500 and 3,000 meters events.

The 1,600-meter foursome set a CCC record of 3:19.34, at the Delaware Invitational last weekend.

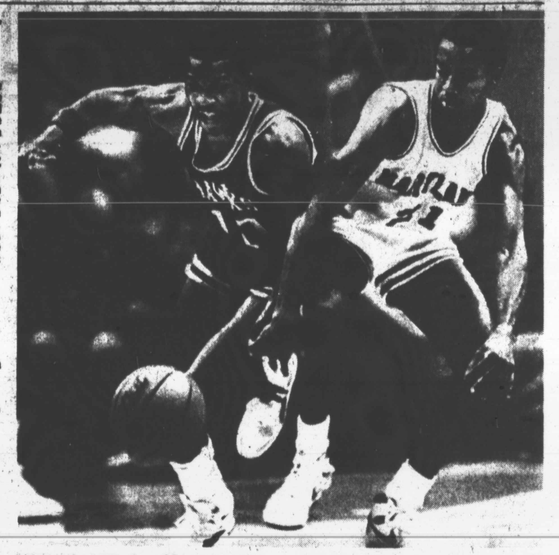
BIBT dates announced

The 5th annual Baltimore Invitational Basketball Tournament will be held April 3-12 at Carver Vocational-Technical High School, Pressman & Benfalou Streets.

Each member of the winning team will receive a gold ring.



A WIN AND A LOSS—Donnell Boney (L) won the race with John Johnson for this loose ball during action in the Maryland, Eastern Shore - University of Maryland game Monday night at College Park. But Boney and the Hawks lost the game, crushed by the Terps, 91-44. Johnson was one of three players (others were Len Blas and Jeff Baxter) reinstated by Maryland coach Lefty Driesell after a one-game suspension for curfew violation.

Hoyas attain two goals in 81-53 win over Bears

Georgetown accomplished two aims in defeating overmatched Morgan State Tuesday night at the Baltimore Civic Center, 81-53.

Actually, it was Hoya coach John Thompson who succeeded in what he set out to do — one admitted, the other he kept to himself.

"We thought it would be good for these kids to come back and play in their hometown so that the young people here can see two of their own working toward degrees in a disciplined program."

The two kids he referred to, of course, were David Wingate and Reggie Williams who grew up on the playgrounds of Baltimore and were part of the Dunbar High School basketball tradition.

"David and Reggie," Thompson added, "are excellent role models."

While the second motive of the coach went undisclosed, it was strongly suggested that the Georgetown coach was able to look upon Morgan as a midseason respite for his busy youngsters.

No matter that the competition is outclassed, an 81-53 victory undoubtedly serves as a confidence - builder for a team that has lost two straight to St. John's and Syracuse.

For both Wingate and Williams the homecoming was rewarding.

A crowd of 6,023 hardy fans turned out, relatively small considering the appeal but unexpectedly large under the circumstances.

Aside from miserable weather brought on by two days of rain and fog, the year's most attractive dinner — the Ed Block Courage Award Banquet featuring Dolphin coach Don Shula and 28 National Football League stars — was a lure for thousands to Martin's West ... LACY.

Karate tourney set March 1st

The United States Open Karate Championships will be held next Saturday (1st) at Western Maryland College.

Competitions will be staged in all categories from beginners through pee wees to black belt holders.

Vying for top honors will be several local stars headed by world class contenders Ed Butcher and Laroy Hopkins.

An added attraction will be a demonstration by representatives of Butcher's School of Martial Arts.

Zina, Camille ousted in Fla.

The hopes of both Zina Garrison and Camille Benjamin were dashed late in the week of the $1.3 million Lipton Tennis Championships at Boca Raton, Fla.

Zina went out in the quarter final, losing to West Germany's Steffi Graf in a gruelling 6-2, 6-7, 6-3 three-setter.

Eighteen-year-old Camille defeated Hu Na of China and Petra Huber of Austria before bowing out in the third round.
