140 pupils cited at 'fantastically successful' salute

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Elementary displayed a representation of what goes on at the school on a daily basis. The dolls were made by a fourth grade class and teacher, Mrs. Barbara Allen.

Second Annual Salute was at Festival Hall

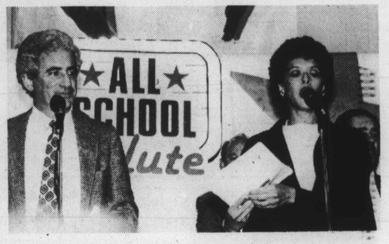
Jerry Baum, coordinator of the All-School Salute, said the second annual event held Sunday, was 'fantastically successful.'

Some 5,000 people showed up to pay tribute to Baltimore City schools and honor the 140 outstanding students who received mayoral citations.

There were about 150 individual exhibits, Baum said, each representing a city school and other exhibits from different state offices.

The event, which raised $9,000 in revenues last year, is expected to earn more this year, but Baum said the amount is uncertain at this time. Monies will benefit special projects in city schools.

Baum is also considering changing the event to make it biennial and thereby putting less strain on those who are involved with the display. He wants to maintain the enthusiasm of salute workers, he said.



Richard Sher and Linda Harris, cohosts of WJZ-TV's talk show, 'People are Talking,' take part in Baltimore's Second Annual All-School Salute, a project designed to promote excellence in the city school system.
