Norris Homes residents train and prepare for job market

PHILADELPHIA — Eighteen Norris Homes residents have graduated from the Career Mobility Center, a job readiness training program sponsored by the Norris Homes Tenant Council. Half of them are now working.

They attended classes at the Mobility Center, 1950 N. 10th St., which helped them investigate career possibilities and prepare them for the job market. Class instruction included writing letters of application; dressing for job interviews; developing and writing resumes; learning appropriate interview techniques and career selection.

"The goal of the center is to provide career exploration, guidance and job training," says Diane Gass, president of Norris Homes Tenant Council. "And we have been successful in leading displaced and disadvantaged workers into careers in today's job market."

Since its inception, the Mobility Center has provided career counseling, referrals and job readiness training to more than 90 residents.

The center receives support from Temple University, Bell of Pennsylvania and the Advanced technological Center of the Benjamin Franklin Project.

"The assistance given by Temple, Bell of PA and the Ben Franklin Project proves these organizations not only have a corporate consciousness, but also are willing to make an investment in the Temple community," says Gass.

The graduates received their Certificates of Achievement recently at the 12th annual Freedom Fund Banquet at the Philadelphia Centre Hotel. State Rep. Alphonso Deal congratulated the honorees for their accomplishment.

SHE'S THE PRESIDENT — Diane Gass, president of the Norris Home Tenant Council where 18 presidents have graduated from the Career Mobility Center, a job readiness training program, sponsored the council.

Two South Philly whites charged in racial assault on black man

PHILADELPHIA — Two white South Philadelphia men were arrested and charged with assaulting a black man and harassing his two friends on South Sixth Street on October 21.

The men were arrested after an investigation by the Police Department's Conflict Prevention and Resolution Team, a unit created by Police Commissioner Kevin M. Tucker in October to investigate and prevent racial incidents.

Yoni Lanzolotti, 39, of the 700 block of South Sixth Street and Dutchie Brocco, 62, of the 600 block of Clymer Street, were awaiting arraignment on charges of ethnic intimidation, aggravated and simple assault, recklessly endangering another person, terroristic threats, propulsion of missiles, conspiracy and possession of an instrument of crime.

Police said the two men were among a group of more than 20 whites who surrounded George Walker, 26, of the 2800 block of North Fairhill St., in North Philadelphia, as he left the home of a friend in the 700 block of Sixth Street about 5:30 p.m. October 21.

Police said Walker was leaving the home of Jessica Ross, 19, along with Ewan Umholtz, 18, of the 300 block of Gaskill Street in Society Hill. Ross and Umholtz are white.

Police said the three got into Ross' car when a car drove up behind Ross' car, preventing it from moving. More than 20 whites surrounded the vehicle, shouting racial epithets and making accusations that blacks were living in Ross' home, police said.

Police said that Lanzolotti allegedly struck and broke the windshield of Ross' car and that Brocco struck Walker in the forehead with a pair of vice grips.

Walker was taken to Thomas Jefferson University Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Police said the investigation was continuing.

Minority business fair held in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA — A Minority Business Fair was held on November 14 at The Urban Education Foundation, 4601 Market St. in Philadelphia.

"McDonald's was looking for potential franchisees as well as businesses that offered quality products and services, competitive prices and flexibility," says Harry Coaxum, senior service manager, McDonald's Corporation, Cherry Hill, NJ. "We were interested in businesses that specialized in the areas of office services, advertising, restaurant equipment and supplies, recruitment, construction, landscaping, real estate and other related services."

"We're pleased to have provided such exciting opportunities to minority-owned businesses in the area," says Robert Sorrel, president of The Urban League.

Clothing Donations

The Annual Clothing Collection sponsored by Catholic Relief Services and the Archdiocese of Baltimore will continue through Nov. 30. For over three decades, the annual clothing drive has provided millions of Americans with the opportunity to share a part of their world with those in need.

In 1985, Americans generously donated over 8 million pounds of clothing which was distributed by CRS in 37 countries. However, CRS Diocesan Director, Myrtle Stanley says this tremendous effort still did not fulfill the needs for the people in these countries.

In the past, CRS has had the aid of the American people for the clothing collections. A noble effort in the past was the 560,000 T-shirts collected for the youth in Ethiopian camps. "Clothing, even clothing as simple as a T-shirt, is desperately needed in places like East Africa," according to Ken Hackett of the CRS New York staff. "Beyond hunger and malnutrition, pneumonia is a leading contributor of death in the camps. The clothing is critical to the success of CRS development efforts throughout the world."

The greatest need is for lightweight clothing since most recipient countries have a mild climate. Both goods for sewing classes and financial contributions to help defray shipping costs are extremely important also.

Further information concerning locations of the Annual Clothing Collection can be obtained by contacting Myrtle Stanley, 320 Cathedral Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21201, 547-5323.

Gift Of Life

May Ambulance Service, Inc., providers of quality medical transportation in the Baltimore area, is launching a major public education campaign to promote organ donation in coordination with the Maryland Organ Procurement Center. December 1986 is "Baltimore Organ Donor Month."

Key to this effort is a colorful "Gift of Life" flyer which answers basic questions about donation and includes a wallet-size tear-off organ donor card.

More than 8,000 Americans are waiting for organ transplants — eyes, lungs, hearts, kidneys and more. Thousands of children and adults suffer and die each year for lack of available donor organs. "The whole purpose of this effort is to inform and educate the public, and encourage family support of the decision to donate," said Larry May, President of May Ambulance Service, Inc.

Kick-off for Baltimore Organ Donor Month will occur on Tuesday, Dec. 2, 11 a.m., in Davidge Hall, University of Maryland — Baltimore Campus.

Dorothy Parker's COMMENT ABOUT CAMDEN

On November 18, through Nov. 23, the nationwide Children of War Tour will bring their messages of hope to Philadelphia youth. The tour will visit 10 Philadelphia area schools and several community groups.

The Philadelphia honorary committee chaired by Mayor M. Wilson Goode includes Diane Allen, James Bodine, Ida Chen, Councilwoman Augusta A. Clark, Judge Nelson Diaz, Waverly L. Easley, Claude Lewis, Joseph Miller, Councilman Angel Ortiz, Jonathan Rhoads, M.D., Judge Lisa Richette, Willard Rouse, Portia Sperr and Father Paul Washington.

Responding to increasing rates of drug use, suicide and school drop outs among American teens, young people from South Africa, Nicaragua, Lebanon, Israel and other strife-torn areas of the world will be in Philadelphia.

Seeing a link between youth alienation and the threat of war, these young people will speak not only of the violence and terror they have experienced but also of the hopes they have for peace.

Taking part in the tour will be local Philadelphia youth Hay Tran, a 16-year-old Central High School student who was born in Cambodia.

All of this is part of a process in creating an international network of youth peace leadership to commemorate UNICEF's 40th anniversary and the United Nation's Year of Peace. The Children of War Tour will visit a total of 27 United States cities. Philadelphia like every city taking part in the tour, will conclude the visit with an All-City Youth Conference on November 23.

JA continues fight on drugs

KINGSTON, Jamaica — National Security Minister Errol Anderson has pledged to commit more men and resources to fight drugs, following a series of seizures of marijuana worth more than $5 million.

In the latest seizure, members of the Jamaican Defense Force found 3,500 pounds of marijuana aboard the ship Varadero Monday morning and arrested four Jamaican residents.

Later that day a container of marijuana was discovered at Port Bustamante.

Recently, police seized 6,000 pounds of compressed marijuana worth $5 million at an illegal airstrip in central Jamaica. Two Jamaicans were arrested and others were seen escaping.

Anderson, inspecting the seizure, said he would provide whatever support possible to help police.
