with me," she said. "I plan to enter next year's race if everything goes well."

Of her recent election to the Democratic State Central Committee for the 40th Legislative District, Mrs. Smith said she stood for that election because she wanted to learn more about the political process. By moving into the political arena, she said she wants to do things on a higher scale.

Some, however, said to be effective in politics, Mrs. Smith will have to curb her sharp tongue and rein in her impatience.

Mrs. Smith was a co-founder of the Bethel AME Church's food co-operative in 1978 and still is active. She also is on the board of the Maryland Food Committee where she said she chairs its funding committee and lobbies for the group in Annapolis.

A former co-op member said while she has shown "outstanding perseverance and has the ability to organize people," Mrs. Smith also can be inpatient and suspicious of people's motives.

"She's sometimes tempered — very hot tempered," the co-op member said. "Her heart's in the right place. She still is a bit politically naive. She has to sharpen up her perceptors."

Mrs. Smith has been a kindergarten teacher with the city school system for the past three years. For seven years she taught for the city government — The Mayor's Office of Human Resources.

Mrs. Smith said she also teaches adults. She presently works with the parents of Head Start children designing educational programs based on the parents' needs.

A Baltimore native, Mrs. Smith graduated from Towson State University with a degree in early childhood education. She later attended Johns Hopkins University where she received her master's in adult education and reading.

If she is voted in by the City Council to be an interim representative for the 4th District, Mrs. Smith said she will learn the council's agenda to work with them. Her four areas of concern are education, economic development, hunger and housing.

In an attempt to cooperate fully with the court to satisfy the judgment, Cheeks put a freeze on all allocations of money going out.

"I explained this to Moore, but the things he is saying are almost slanderous; he is forcing me into the position of defending the organization and myself, legally," said Cheeks.

Cheeks also said that the grant Moore applied for had been approved, but only $500 and that Moore was using the grant as a way of getting back at him for supporting Gov.-elect Schaefer in the last elections.

But Moore disregarded this accusation and said this was Cheeks' way of deflecting away from the central issue, which is as he views it — where does the money go that BUF solicits through its fundraising efforts and payroll deductions through city, state and federal employees.

Cheeks pointed to assistance that BUF provided to Provident Hospital and the Group for Social Change, however Moore said in his travels throughout the city, he has not encountered one organization that has been funded by BUF lately.

"The organization is doing the best job it can with absolutely no staff," said Cheeks, "as we have the money, we'll give it out."

troduced Huldah as the "Grand Dame of ODO."

Cicely Finkelstein sang and danced to a medley of show tunes. The humorous lyrics recaptured memories of almost forgotten moments shared in the Office of Disability Operations.

A combo called "Saturday" furnished live music for entertainment and dancing. The "ODO Motown Temptations" dressed in dark suits, performed professional lip sync routines. Donald Davis, Charles Forrest, Gary Harrison, Vernon Savoy and Charlie Stewart were responsible for getting the Temptations act together.

Several ODO managers sang and danced under the signature of "Huldahs Pips."

Another group of managers called The Sheer Adacity Players, prepared a slide presentation featuring almost everyone in the office and gifted the honoree with the product.

She was also gifted with a microwave oven and many accolades from persons who will miss her innovative ideas for improving the working atmosphere in the SSA Dickinson Building.

The bidder understands that the method of bidding reflecting the savings from acceptable voluntary alternate is for the purpose of arriving at the lowest cost for this particular project and, therefore, the bidder (to the maximum extent permitted by law) waives any right it might have to contest the award of the Contract due to the method of bidding acceptable alternates.
