Unsung heroes in Poe Homes blaze

By Roz Hamlett
AFRO Staff Writer

Unsung heroes are rarely celebrated in poetry or song; they almost never get a key to the city and at least in this town, their names are not painted on the city's municipal park benches.

But this is the story of two conscientious guards employed by Security America, whose efforts to rescue a child trapped in a burning room were unsuccessful, but nevertheless, Officer Terrence Carter and Officer Alfred Samuels demonstrated they have all the "right stuff."

Back at the office, quiet-spoken Carter sat in a chair with his injured leg outstretched before him and described the course of events that lead up to the tragic death of a young child, last week in the highrise housing project on Fremont Ave.

He had just completed his rounds and had returned to the guard booth, when a little girl knocked on the door to say she smelled smoke. Carter and

City NAACP to get new headquarters

The Baltimore branch of the NAACP is finalizing plans to purchase two buildings on West 26th Street that will become the organization's new headquarters.

Following the example of the national NAACP which recently purchased and moved into new headquarters in Baltimore, the local chapter will own the properties which are located at 6 and 8 W. 26th St.

The Baltimore chapter is currently housed in rented space at 26 W. 26th St., a building that is "no longer adequate," said George Buntin, director of the local branch.

Buntin said the new headquarters will increase office space significantly and allow for an expanded workforce.

"Also our membership is expanding and we have 20 volunteer committees working on various projects. So we need more space," he said.

The local chapter has in-

GM OF WEAA-FM:

Stewart indicted on theft charge

By Roz Hamlett
AFRO Staff Writer

The general manager of WEAA,the non-profit radio station operated by Morgan State University, was charged with felony theft Wednesday, after an investigation revealed various groups have been duped into paying for free air-time.

In a joint effort by the Attorney General's Office and the Maryland State Police, Alfred Stewart, 45, a Randallstown resident, was charged with stealing money during a nine-month period beginning Dec. 24, 1985 through Sept. 16, 1986.

Stewart was employed as the manager since the station's inception in 1977 and hosted a weekly show, "Gospel Grace," which aired Sundays at six a.m.

University officials emphasized that the alleged criminal activities took place outside of the school, and Stewart apparently used the station as a vehicle, although the charges did not include any funds raised through WEAA's funding appeals or the school's annual fund-raising campaign.

According to Bruce Spizler, the assistant attorney general on the case, the charges stem from Stewart charging both individuals and groups for air-time, although WEAA is a non-profit, non-commercial public radio station.

Clarifying the university's position, Spizler, who also headed the investigation, added that he wished to make it perfectly clear that Morgan State University had nothing to do with the scheme and that Stewart was just a person

Mystery surrounds Harbor pres. resignation

Joseph Aston, first president to serve the black owned Harbor Bank of Baltimore resigned last week.

According to sources, the board of directors of the bank requested Aston's resignation due to a number of problems in Aston's administration of the bank.

Bank directors refused to comment on the resignation and referred all inquiries to chairman George Russell who was not available for comment.

Sources close to the situation say that Aston was deeply affected by the death of his son Joseph Aston, Jr. who died last May and that the resulting depression affected his work to the degree that his administrative capability was diminished.

Aston could not be reached for comment.

Six are arrested at TSU in on-campus drug sweep

A three month undercover investigation ended with the arrests of six Towson State University students earlier this week, although school officials do not believe they represent a ring of drug activity on campus.

Undercover officer, Darlene Boyer gained the trust of different groups of students in order to investigate anonymous complaints that drugs were being sold at the school, according to the school spokesman, Dan McCarthy.

The following students are charged with possession of various amounts of cocaine, marijuana and PCP, according to statements of charges filed at the Towson District Court:

— Frederick W. Armstrong III, a varsity football player and a roommate of James N. Robinson, another student arrested after investigation. Armstrong was charged with one count of distributing cocaine and was released on an unknown amount of bail.

— James N. Robinson, Jr., another varsity football player who is charged with selling Boyer less than a half-gram of cocaine on Nov. 13. He was released on $1,500 bond.

— Anthony Goldstone, 19, a New York resident is charged with selling $5 worth of marijuana on Nov. 19. He was released on $500 bond.

— Guy H. Samms, 18, a resident of Silver Spring, is charged with selling $15 worth of "love boat," or "marijuana sprayed with PCP to Boyer in the student union. He was released on $5,000 bail.

— Samuel Odell Mattocks, 19, a campus resident, he is charged with selling $10 worth of marijuana to Boyer on Oct. 17, also in the student union. He was released on his own recognizance.

— Delmaire Hines, 21, a campus resident, is charged with selling marijuana valued at $15. The marijuana had been sprayed with PCP. Ms. Hines was released on a $2,000 bond.

The investigation into alleged drug sales at the school is ongoing through the attorney general's office to determine if there are larger suppliers connected to the case, but Boyer's undercover work is finished.

According to the school spokesman, a drug hotline was put in place at the school two weeks ago and next week, posters reading, "Drugs: Don't take this course," will be placed in various locations throughout the campus.

Haysbert to officially changeover Dec. 24

Raymond Haysbert, president of Parks Sausage and a prospective candidate for mayor of Baltimore told the AFRO yesterday that he will officially change his party affiliation from Democrat to Republican on Dec. 24.

Haysbert disclosed to the AFRO during the 1986 primary campaign that he was considering a run for mayor if Kurt Schmoke and Clarence Du Burns ran against each other on the Democratic ballot, allowing Robert Embry, then president of the school board and prospective Democratic candidate, to win a bitterly contested primary.

Haysbert reiterated his intentions to run as a GOP candidate in an article in a local daily paper this week and according to him the response was overwhelming including county Republicans who want to see a friend of the county in the mayor's seat.

"There have been a number of financial commitments offered and it appears that

Penn-North learns of vacant house war

By Manotti L. Jenkins
AFRO Staff Writer

The city has declared war on vacant houses throughout Baltimore, under the auspices of the "Building Blocks" program.

This was revealed by a Neighborhood Progress Administration (NPA) official during the monthly meeting of the Penn-North Association, Inc. (PNI), Wednesday.

According to Ms. Cathy Dailey, coordinator of the NPA-sponsored program, "Building Blocks was initiated to launch a major attack and turn back the tide on the blighting effects of vacant houses in Baltimore City neighborhoods."

She explained that the program, initiated in July of this year, was given an impetus by legislation passed by the City Council in June of 1985 that amended the Baltimore City Building Code.

This legislation now allows the city to "go into a privately-owned vacant house to do corrections that would bring the house up to code simply because it is vacant

POLITICS '87

By P. A. Tatum
AFRO Staff Writer

Black Republicans in Maryland seem to be moving right along in the grand old party, capturing several top leadership positions, according to Larry Gray.

Gray, a Maryland State Lottery official and an active state Republican, told the AFRO that Victor Clark, was elected to a full term as the state party's 3rd vice chairman.

Clark ran against Michael B. Mitchell for the state senate in the 39th Legislative District last month.

Jim House also was elected as 2nd vice chairman, Gray said. Clark's wife, Ebony Alexander, now is acting as the chairwoman of the city's Black Republican Council.

Gray said he was named a director of the Independent Republican Coalition, the city's major Republican organization, last Tuesday, Dec. 9.

About Dan Fleming, the state party's new leader, Gray said blacks in the party "won't have a problem dealing with Dan." Fleming, a 36-year-old Anne Arundel County engineer is a self-described Christian fundamentalist.

Sen. Nathan Irby, D-45th, of Baltimore's East Side said he expects the new president of the Maryland Senate to provide "effective, forceful and independent leadership."

He said he hopes Mike Miller, who hails from Prince George's County to be a strong leader like another P. G. County politician now Congressman, Steny Hoyer.

Senators and delegates met in Annapolis on Monday to chose their new leadership. Formal votes come in January after the session convenes.

Irby said he will continue to address the issues which are of major concern to him. They include "the whole business of insurance" in the state which has become a "major crisis," he said.

He said he will continue the process of trying to work to bring additional money back into the city to fund education, and he is working on a statewide level to expand Gov. Harry Hughes' housing program.

Hughes was the first governor to put forth such a housing package, Irby said. Presently, he is busy monitoring housing codes across the state. This is not a problem in the city, "because we have a housing code," Irby said. It does need a lot of attention in other parts of the state such as Southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore, he said.

Councilwoman Agnes Welch told the AFRO the selection process is coming along well. She said she is still unable to divulge any of the names of people who have approached her about the two expected vacancies in the 4th councilmanic district.
