Son dies from brutal beating, LPN mom charged with murder

PHILADELPHIA — A 23-year-old practical nurse was charged in the brutal murder of her six-year-old son, who died of multiple injuries.

Dr. Robert Catharman, acting city medical examiner, said that Desmond Washington's injuries "represented one of the worst classic battered-children cases that I've seen in a long time."

The nurse, Louisann Washington, of the 2400 block of West Firth Street, Philadelphia, has been charged with assault and battery and reckless endangerment after her son was taken to the Medical College of Pennsylvania and Hospital.

She was also charged with murder and possession of an instrument of crime. She is being held without bail at the House of Correction, according to police, prior to a preliminary scheduled for City Hall.

The suspect is a licensed practical nurse employed at the Philadelphia Geriatric Center, at 5301 Old York Rd., according to homicide detectives. A spokeswoman at the geriatric center confirmed that Miss Washington has been employed there for about three years.

Miss Washington told police that she found her son unconscious in a second-floor bedroom of the home, according to police, who said that Miss Washington's boyfriend, Michael Huffman, 28, was with the suspect at the time. However, police did not charge Huffman.

The suspect called fire rescue, but when they arrived, the victim had no heart rate and no respiration, police said. The boy was rushed by fire rescue to the Medical College of Pennsylvania, where hospital staff kept him alive on a respirator for four hours, police said.

Dr. Deborah Callanan of the hospital's pediatric intensive care unit said. "He was on a respirator, but he was never able to sustain normal blood pressure. We knew he was not going to survive."

Dr. Callanan examined the boy several hours after he was brought to the hospital. "He had a lot of swelling of his scalp, and he had pretty extensive bruising over his buttocks, to the extent of oozing of blood from that area. Those were the visible injuries," the doctor said.

An autopsy by the city medical examiner revealed that the boy had been beaten about the legs, arms, back and buttocks.

The medical examiner said, "The issue is not my findings, but why that child was in the custody of his mother when it was known that he had been abused in the past."

According to police, on Aug. 12, 1981, Children's Hospital reported to the city's Department of Human Services that Miss Washington brought her son into the hospital with a skull fracture. The hospital suspected it was a case of child abuse, police said.

Then on March 16, 1985, police said, she took her son to another hospital, and that hospital again contacted the city to report a suspected case of child abuse. On that occasion, the boy had been beaten with a belt, police said.

Operations director of the city Division of Chidren and Youth Services, Julia Danzy, said that she could not comment on specifics of the case, but that she was aware of "a background of prior reports of abuse. This is a case that has been known to us."

Miss Danzy said the last report filed by a social worker in her department on the family was in May 1985, and at that time the situation in the home was "not so bad that we had to remove this child," she said.

Bus overturns, kills woman, 81

By Mildred O'Neil

PHILADELPHIA — New York state police continues their investigation of a bus accident January 3, near Syracuse, NY, carrying a ski tour group from Philadelphia that overturned on a slippery road and then was hit by two vehicles, killing an 81-year-old woman and injuring 45 other people on the bus.

The bus traveling from Philadelphia to Auburn, NY, veered out of control during a snowstorm on Route 20 in Marcellus, NY, about 10 miles west of Syracuse.

Mary Prattis, 81, of the 4600 block of Duffield St., in the Frankford section of Philadelphia, was killed when she was thrown through a window and was pinned under the bus.

The chartered bus, owned by the Frank Martz Coach Co., a division of Trailways had departed from Stenton Avenue and Old York Road. The trip was sponsored by Eastern Ski Tours Inc.

The bus driver, James Henderson, 46, of Philadelphia, who has been a bus driver for 23 years, said he had started down the hill in a "very bad snowfall. I was only doing maybe 10 miles an hour; I put it into lower gear, which we always did. I've driven in the snow many times."

He is listed in fair condition at Auburn Memorial Hospital.

He said the bus went into a spin, saying, "It just took off all on its own. The bus is about 20 tons, and when it starts going, there's nothing you can do."

He is listed in fair condition at Auburn Memorial Hospital.

The bus spun, struck an embankment and turned over, he said.

Henderson suffered a fractured right leg.

A pickup truck traveling in the same direction slammed into the bus, according to police.

No charges have been filed in connection with the accident.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO ASSIGN PROJECTS

In the near future, the Professional Services Selection Committee will recommend consulting assignments for the following projects:

PROJECT 87-1 — BRIDGE INSPECTION AND RATING

Professional services are required for the inspection and rating of 289 bridges located throughout Baltimore County. The types of bridge structures and corresponding quantities of each are tabulated below. Because of the wide variance in bridge structure types and the total number of structures involved, it is intended to divide this project into three (3) subprojects identified as 87-1A, 87-1B and 87-1C, with each subproject to be awarded separately. Therefore, firms seeking award consideration on any one or more of subprojects 87-1A through 87-1C are required to indicate on the DPW Form 102 submittal the specific subprojects of interest.

Inspection and rating of these structures shall be performed in accordance with the latest edition of the AASHTO Manual for Maintenance Inspection of Bridges.

This project will utilize Baltimore County funding only.
