Likes crosswords

No, she said, she did not buy the outfits for the affairs, but they were new and had not been worn before. She is 5 ft. 8; wears sizes 10-12 clothes.

Mrs. Burns is an avid crossword fan, the more difficult the puzzles, the better she says. She enjoys sewing and cooking. Her baked sauerkraut is her husband's favorite dish.

Mayor and Mrs. Burns have one daughter, Mrs. Cheryl Turner, a teacher at School No. 86. Their only grandchild is 19-year-old Lisa Turner, a junior at Towson State University.

A number of other relatives attended the Burns induction. His sisters, Mrs. Mary Futrell and Mrs. Selena Hicks, and her sister, Mrs. Lillian Tyler, were present with members of their families.

Cuff Note: Mrs. Burns has ducked efforts by news media to interview her. We've tried in vain for the past three months. However, when she made page one of this newspaper on Tuesday and talked on camera after the Monday festivities, we tried again.

This is to report that the city's new first lady is a charming person, not easily swayed by news people, but a delight to know when you pin her down a moment.

Smile...smile

Smile-of-the-week orchids to Mrs. Marie Henderson. She's the campaign manager for Mayor Clarence Du Burns, and she did a creditable job when she presided at his inauguration ceremony on Monday.

Reader Julius G. Lewis suggests that this column include on its weekly smile list his mailman — he gives only the initials — J. K. Smith, whom he says keeps a "pleasant manner no matter what the weather." His route is in the Mondawmin area.

Another pleasant voice heard this week belongs to Miss Valencia Patterson. She's the secretary in the office of Dr. Miles G. Harrison, the medic. He is another good neighbor who keeps a smile in his voice, too.

More smiles

Reader Louise Lewis says that Mrs. Lorraine Cook, her elderly neighbor on Pressman St. deserves orchids "because she always has a nice voice and speaks kindly to everyone even when she's feeling bad herself."

Another person with sunshine in her voice we heard this week was Miss Pam Duffy, secretary in the office of Mortician Leroy Dyett, whom we called to talk about the big funeral in the snow (see below).

NOTE: Please keep your nominations coming; for this smile section. Just drop a note and tell us when you hear or meet people who have sunshine in their voices and are kind to others. Smile . . .smile.

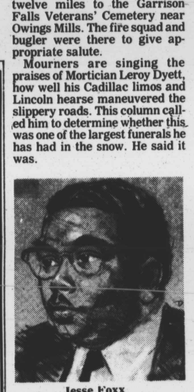
About People

Last Thursday's heavy snow, (12 inches), did not stop people from remembering a good neighbor. Relatives and friends occupied 50 cars for the trip to St. Peter Claver.

Twenty-five cars travelled the twelve miles to the Garrison Falls Veterans' Cemetery near Owings Mills. The fire squad and bugler were there to give appropriate salute.

Mourners are singing the praises of Mortician Leroy Dyett, how well his Cadillac limos and Lincoln hearse maneuvered the slippery roads. This column called him to determine whether this was one of the largest funerals he has had in the snow. He said it was.



Jesse Foxx

Helped Many

Cuff notes: Many admired Mr. Foxx for his volunteer work in his church and in the community. His unexpected death on Jan. 17 at the age of 74 removes from our midst a kind gentleman who was "uncle" not only to his many relatives, but to youngsters and needy in his church and community.

Cuff note: Mr. Foxx lived on Jeffrey Rd. with his niece and nephew, Eugene and Sara Smalley.

Honorary pallbearers were fellow members of the Knights of St. John, the Phalanx Club and Baltimore Club of Frontiers International.

Pallbearers were: David Alexander, Eugene Byrd, Luther Johnson, Harry McDonald, Hank Johnson, Leon Nunnelly, Arthur Snowden, and John Young.

Here from East Orange, N.J., son, Kenneth Earl Lockett, whom he and his late wife, Marguerite, reared. With him, his wife, June, and their daughter, Lynette.

She's the retired Howard U. teacher who buried her husband last month. He was Merle J. Smith, 67, the retired Army officer who was professor military science at Morgan State University here in Baltimore from 1964-69 and lived in near by Morgan Park.

Before he lost his battle with cancer on December 29, Merle had served as military science head at Howard and later as vice president for health affairs at Howard, a post from which he retired this past June.

Alfred V. Moore

Al Moore

Every community has a man who is handy with a nail and hammer who is able to turn his talents into places of beauty.

Such a person was Alfred Vinton Moore (almost everybody called him "Al" or "Mr. Moore").

Before Al Moore died on January 22, at the age of 80, he willed his body to science.

Friends and relatives gathered at Grace Presbyterian Church Wednesday (Jan. 28), to memorialized him.

There were tributes in verse and scripture — including an original by his wife of 52 years, Nellie Henry Moore ("They do not die, who live so long, so well, whose lives extend so far, so wide, so deep, who touch the lives of young and old alike, they do not die, they only fall asleep...")

War vet

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Moore grew up in Baltimore, was a Douglass High graduate and a product of Hampton Institute and Bradley Institute.

He taught in the city school system and served as a sergeant in the Army during World War II.

Along with T. Shelton Coles, now of Atlanta, he founded the Em Cee Contracting Co. in 1946. It was a firm noted for its skill in restoring old buildings and constructing new residences.

Many of today's west Baltimore residents remember Mr. Moore's firm handled home repairs and brought beauty to second-class homes.

He was a charter founder of the Carpenters Local No. 544.

Survivors: In addition to his wife, Mr. Moore is survived by four daughters, Katherine Moore, Brooklyn, N.Y., Rosalie Moore, El Rafael, Calif., Angela Moore, Philly; and Virginia Abraham, Milwaukee, Wisc.

Three grandchildren and a brother, Paul Moore of Baltimore, also survive.

J. C. Reaves, 66, retired teacher

By Bettye Moss

Occasionally, through life, you meet someone about whom you can truthfully say, they are the nicest and kindest person you have ever met.

Such a person was J. C. Reaves, 66, the retired Baltimore city teacher. He suffered a fatal heart attack at his Allendale Rd. home last Thursday morning.

The night before we had chatted on the phone about the trip to California he and his wife, Agnes, planned for this week, so that the early a.m. call about his death had been a shock to me and his many friends.

Funeral services for Mr. Reaves were held yesterday (Jan. 29) at Enon Baptist Church.

A native of Saulisbury, Tenn., J.C., was the oldest of eight children of Frelon and Bernice Reaves. They followed a family tradition and gave him no name, simply the initials.

He received his early education in Tenn. public schools, graduating from Whiteville's Alen-White Senior High as valedictorian. It was at this stage in his life that he developed skill as a public speaker, and was a member of the school's debating team.

Later in life, he used this talent to present illustrated lectures on the Bible and the Holy Land. He was also talented mathematician.

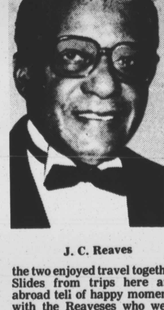
He served in the Air Force Communications Division during World War 2, and used this training to further his interest in electronics. After graduation from Louisville Municipal College in 1947, he moved to Washington to teach electronics in a technical school there and in N.Y. Later, he moved to Baltimore and opened his own television sales and service business.

Still later, he took additional courses at Morgan State University and the U. of Md., and began a teaching career in the Baltimore city schools.

At Forest Park High, where he taught electronics, he was known as a teacher who had "tremendous understanding and concern" for his students who found him to be firm and fair. He retired from the city system in 1983.

J. C. Reaves loved people and those of us who were privileged to call him friend can attest that he was a family man who enjoyed home life and liked nothing better than to play host at their comfortable west Baltimore home, with his wife at his side.

His second love was golf, and



J. C. Reaves

the two enjoyed travel together Slides from trips here and abroad teli of happy moments with the Reaveses who were good travel companions.

Mr. Reaves was a trustee at Enon, a member of the O'Nose, a Baltimore men's social and civic club, the Garrison Blvd. United Neighbors' Association, the Senior Golfers and the Friday Niters.

Members of these groups joined other friends to serve as Unit active and honorary pallbearers. They were:

Jewel Sain, Bruce Randolph, Thomas Perry, Kevin Williams, James Keven Taylor, William Reaves, Thomas Reaves, Melvin Wright;

And, Walter Brown, David Driver, Walter Edmonds, Hon. Benjamin Foreman, Miles Harrison, Howard Jones, George Judge, Robert Lloyd, Ph.D., E. Gaines Lansey;

Also, Vernell Lockwood, Clifton McDonald, A. Paul Moss, Ernest Murphy, George Molloy, Paul Scott, Donald Stewart, Lester Wallace, Benjamin Whitten and David Wright.

Survivors: Mr. Reaves is survived by his wife of 37 years, the former Agnes Williams; son, Jeffrey Carl; grandson Jeffrey Carl Jr., daughter-in-law, Marian, all of Baltimore. Also, brothers, Eddie Lee Reaves, Detroit; William Reaves, Saulisbury, Tenn., Uyllus Horton Saulisbury, Tenn.

And, five sisters, Mrs. Ruby Rainer, Walnut, Miss.; Mrs. Souella Sain, Detroit; Mrs. Emma L. Randolph, Detroit; Mrs. Eva Bishop, Cleveland, Ohio; and Mrs. Pauline Taylor, Ontario, Calif.

The Elizabeth Philips Funeral Home handled arrangements, Burial was at Druid Ridge Cemetery.
