Schmoke, McFadden oppose Question K

McFadden, who lost his councilmanic seat in the primary election, has urged Schmoke to vigorously campaign against the charter amendment.

He compared Schmoke's dilemma regarding Question K, to Superman's prowess

". . . I think he (Schmoke) now needs to put on his Superman robe and prevent any attempts to dilute his powers; for him Question K is what kryptonite is to Superman," the councilman said.

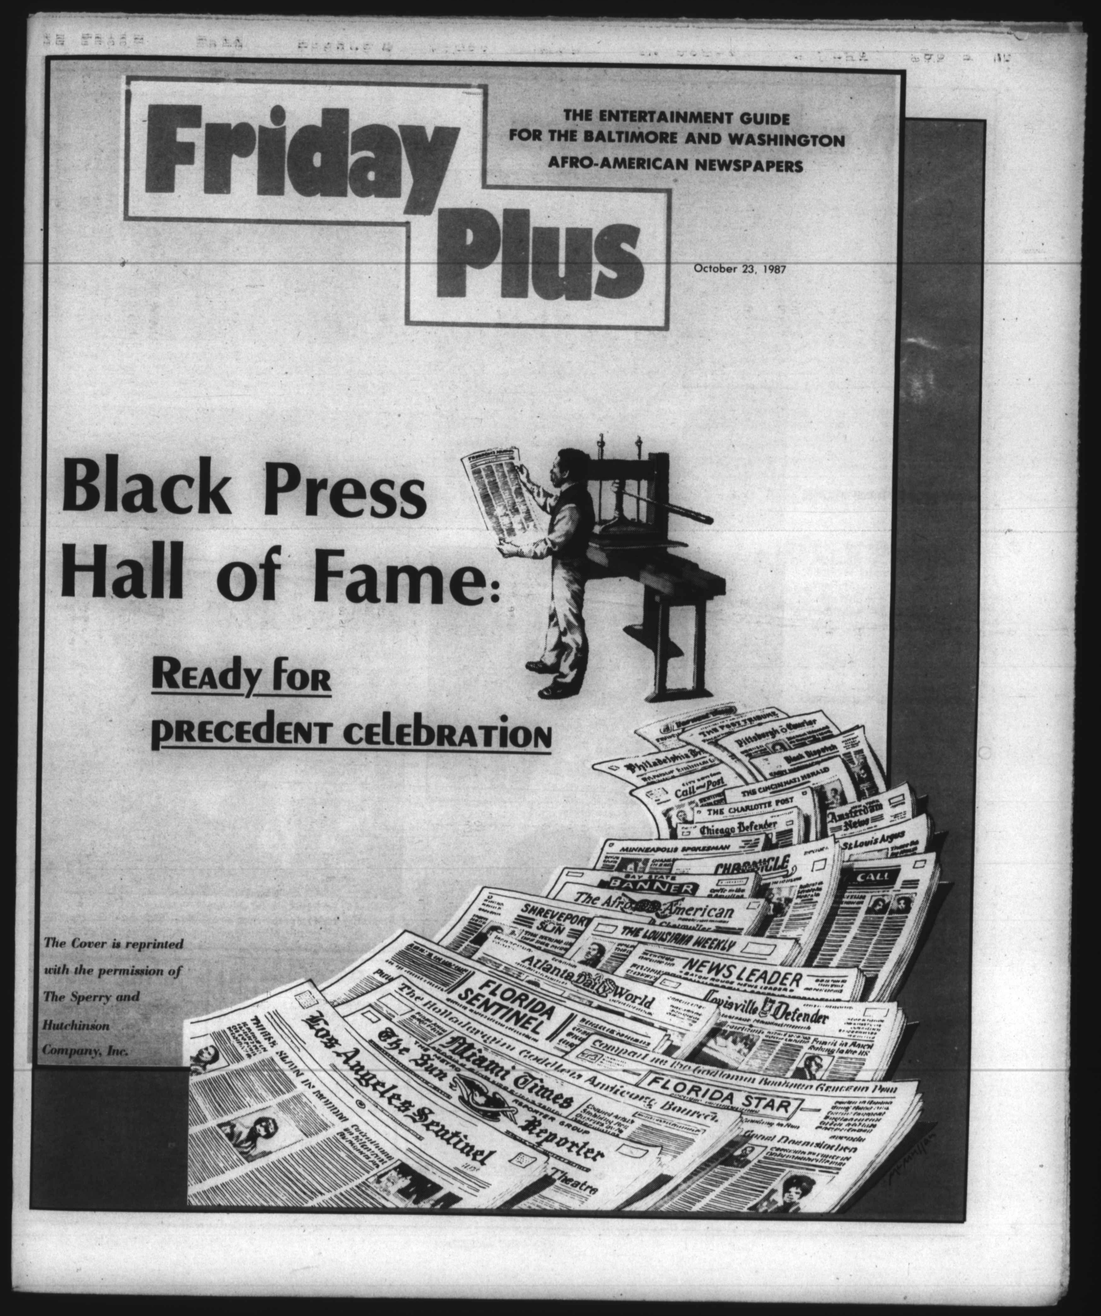
Question K was proposed in June by the council. Joseph T. Landers, III, D.-3rd, a Question K supporter, says the legislation has nothing to do with race, but only to increase the council's powers.

Mayor Clarence H. "Du" Burns and council president Frank Gallagher also support Question K. This year, the council's budget totals approximately $2 million.

According to Gallagher, Question K represents a clear separation of powers.

"I think its a pure ego trip, to say don't do it now," he told McFadden Monday night. "It's a question that is left up to the electorate."

Councilman Landers said the amendment would give the council the same authority enjoyed by the General Assembly and the Prince George's, Anne Arundel and Howard county councils.

"We're not talking about anything radical and we're not talking about dramatic change," Landers said. "Anyone who says this is a dramatic change in policy hasn't really looked at the numbers."


Landers said, anyone with "common sense" would realize that through the Board of Estimates and the Department of Finance, that the mayor would still control 99.8 percent of the total operating budget for the city.
