Schmoke nominee runs into opposition

Barbara Green picked for zoning board post

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke called two of the City Council members' opposition to his nomination of Barbara Green to the zoning board a "pure smoke screen."

The Executive Appointments Committee is expected to meet in special session Tuesday night to consider Green's nomination. If they fail to approve the appointment, chances are slim Green will join the Zoning Board.

Wednesday after his Board of Estimates meetings, Schmoke told reporters that Third District councilmen, Wilbur E. Cunningham and Martin E. Curran were allowing their personal differences to get in the way.

"It goes back to the long stand in Ednor Gardens . . . I don't think one should let . . . personality problems get in the way," said the mayor.

Green, a long-time activist in the Ednor Gardens community, has often been on opposing sides when dealing with Third District city councilmen.

Schmoke said Wednesday he felt the councilmen were opposing Green because of her role in the Question K battle.

"Cunningham is raising Question K," Schmoke said.

Councilman Curran has said that Green lacks experience to become a zoning board member.

"As far as I'm concerned (Cunningham and Curran) are being very petty. It has nothing to do with my qualifications," Green said.

She said she met with the two councilmen in Cunningham's office for nearly 35 minutes, to ask for their support. Councilman Joseph T. Landers, III, D.-3, was also there.

Green, 51, said she has no regrets about her role in the Questin K fight.

"I make no apologies for being treasurer for Question K. If the situation was the same, I'd do it again," she stated. "I think its over."

How to stay warm during bitter cold

By Yvonne R. Keith

In this Siberian sweep of frigid weather, we all have to keep warm, especially the homeless. There are 18,000 homeless men, women and children out on the streets of Baltimore City this winter, and the cold poses a threat to many of them.

The greatest threat is frostbite. Frostbite can cause pain and even amputation.

"Frostbite is damage to the deeper skin tissue and even bones. Frostbite affects the hands, ears and feet," said Dr. Jeffery Zale of The Wyman Park Medical Center, 3100 Wyman Park Drive. According to Dr. Zale, a tingling pain in the hands, feet or ears is a detection of frostbite. Dr. Zale said that due to the wind chill factor the water in the skin turns into ice which crystalizes.

He also said that when people drink alcohol they increase the risk of frostbite, because the person is making his/her body colder.

If someone is suffering from frostbite with only slight pain, Dr. Zale suggests putting the affected area in warm water. If there is severe pain, the person should be taken to the hospital. Dr. Zale also suggested the use of protective clothing throughout this cold weather.

Dr. Catherine Marco of The Johns Hopkins Hospital, 600 North Wolfe Street, agrees with Dr. Zale.

Inside story on homeless

Homelessness in Baltimore is unlike any other parts of the Northeast simply because the establishment in Baltimore has a limited plan for survival and has a game plan for the single individual and families seeking shelter. Schaefer, Steinberg agree on college plans

By Maxine L. Wallace
AFRO Staff Writer

At a meeting in Annapolis Thursday afternoon, Lt. Governor Melvin A. Steinberg and Governor Donald Schaefer reached an agreement regarding the plan for higher education.

Under the plan there will be three different governing boards, according to Steinberg. The University of Maryland will be grouped with all state schools except Morgan State University and St. Mary's College in one board.

Two additional boards, one for Morgan and another for St. Mary's will also be created.

While much concern and tension filled the air in anticipation of a possible superboard to govern the 13 four year colleges and universities in Maryland, Steinberg said this is no longer a concern.

"The administrative proposal will speak with one voice at the opening of the legislative meeting on January 13," he said.

Steinberg also said the fear of Morgan State University and St. Mary's College losing their identity is no longer an issue.

"We protected Morgan and St. Mary's and were able to retain their individuality," the Lt. governor said.

Del. Howard "Pete" Rawlings, who has been at the forefront of the battle against the proposed superboard, said this week the Legislative Black Caucus was concerned over the possibility of a superboard governing the 13 four year colleges and universities in the state of Maryland.

"We believe such an arrangement, given the historical patterns of funding and political behavior in the state, would be detrimental to black institutions," he said.

The state facilities of higher education are currently governed by four separate boards. Critics claim this system causes duplication of programs and frustrates

Stadium Authority steps up hiring

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

The Maryland Stadium Authority continues to meet its commitment to hiring minority contractors and it plans to establish an advisory committee to monitor future minority participation, the stadium authority's chairman said on Wednesday.

Herbert Belgrad, chairman, said the Maryland Stadium Authority has exceeded the minimum amount of minority input required by the Minority Business Enterprise law, passed in 1987.

The law, introduced by vice president of the City Council Jacqueline F. McLean in 1984, requires that minorities and women share percentages in government contracts.

"Whenever possible we have exceeded the 10 percent MBE requirement," said Belgrad. "We're committed to doing that."

To date, the Stadium Authority has hired a black attorney, Norman Parker, a black auditing firm, King, Miller and King, and a black appraiser, Paul E. Lee, who will obtain 10 percent of the Hotel gives in to cornrows

Reservations agent wins battle to keep her hairstyle

A black reservations agent employed by the J.W. Marriott Corp. who refused to unfurl her "cornrows" has been allowed to keep her hairstyle and part-time job at a downtown hotel after the lodging and food service giant changed its stance on the issue.

Pamela Mitchell, 25, whose fight drew the support of presidential candidate Jesse Jackson and Bo Derek, said she was happy with the decision but remained wary, saying, "If I were to go in with another (cornrow) style, I don't know what would happen," she said. "But as long as I can keep them in now, I'm happy."

Marriott Corp. officials had originally given Mitchell written warnings and threatened suspension or loss of her job because of her "extreme" hairstyle.

But company spokesman Robert Souers said Wednesday hotel general manager John Dixon decided not to discipline Mitchell further for her cornrows, because "in this instance, the policy was interpreted a little too strictly."

Dixon refused comment.

"A decision has been made that cornrows in some instances certainly could be business-like appearance," Souers said from his office at corporate headquarters in Bethesda. "Pamela Mitchell's style was in compliance with our dress and appearance codes."

The hotel called Mitchell Wednesday to welcome her back to work, Souers said.

Mitchell, of Fort Washington, Md., expressed satisfaction with

Mayor nears decision on new parks chief

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

Since October, Baltimore has been without a Department of Recreations and Parks director, but if Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke has his way, the void will be filled within four weeks.

The director is responsible for overseeing the city's six major parks, 103 recreation centers, staff, programs and a $37 million budget.

Although, he would not reveal his selection for the director's title, Schmoke said, "I do have someone in mind."

And the acting director, James E. Grant, hopes Schmoke has him in mind.

Grant, 60, has applied for the position, in which he has served temporarily for nearly three months.

When former director, Chris T. Delaporte resigned, to become executive director for the
