City to introduce:

Anti-loitering ordinance

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke, aiming to "off-balance" drug traffickers, announced Thursday a piece of legislation intended to authorize police officers to intervene when they suspect unlawful activity on street corners.

The proposed anti-loitering ordinance would allow officers to make arrests, conduct searches, question suspects and ask suspects to leave street corners if they behave suspiciously.

The piece of legislation does not target people waiting for buses or other innocent bystanders Schmoke said.

The mayor's proposal is scheduled to be introduced in the Baltimore City Council Nov. 21.

If the council approves the proposed ordinance, the mayor will sign it in to law.

"I think it fills the gap in our criminal justice system," Schmoke said during the morning press conference Nov. 17.

"There are some (current) anti-loitering laws that simply do not allow police to engage in the type of activity this law will," Schmoke continued.

For example, police can now only ask people standing within certain feet of a liquor store or other places of business to move.

The mayor's proposal, which has a list of criteria for police to identify potential drug-traffickers, would make it unlawful for people to loiter in public to engage in drug activity.

One criterion is if the suspect is a convicted drug-dealer.

Mary Pat Clarke, council president, said the bill will be carefully reviewed in the judicial committee.

"We'll give it speedy review and look at it carefully to make sure its Constitutional,

Del. Oaks trial is still underway

By Helen Glover Cook
AFRO Staff Reporter

The trial of four term State Delegate Nathaniel Oaks, D-41. Oaks began Monday as Oaks pleaded not guilty to allegations listed in a Baltimore City indictment charging him with misconduct in office and the theft by deception of over $10,000.

Oaks allegedly submitted hotel bills acquired while attending out of state conferences to both the Maryland General Assembly Accounting Office and his Campaign Treasurer for reimbusement.

Although Delegates to the Maryland General Assembly have a per diem allowance of $81 (only $32 of that amount can be for food expenses), the 42 year old delegate declared that he cannot adequately meet his bills with such a small stipend.

Oaks is a full-time legislator whose income stems from a combination of his daily legislative allowance, a legislative salary of $22,000 and an occasional paying political opportunity.

On the first day of the trial, defense attorney Stuart Berger requested the court to amend the dollar amount listed in the original indictment, from over $13,000 to over $10,000.

The trial is expected to extend throughout the coming weeks.

American Education Week

Safer Schools committee issues 27 recommendations

By Jill P. Carter
AFRO Staff Writer

The celebration of American Education week ends today. For Baltimore City Public Schools, it was a week charged with activity intended to revolutionize violence inside the 182 schools.

The Committee for Safer Schools finalized a list of 27 recommendations to keep violence out of city schools, Tuesday. Committee Chairman, Edward J. Gutman submitted the recommendations in form of a report to school superintendent, Richard C. Hunter at last night's school board meeting.

"Dr. Hunter is excited about the work of the task force. He has not yet had a chance to fully examine the report, but he is confident the recommendations will offer creative solutions," according to Jacqueline Hardy, spokeswoman for Baltimore City Public Schools.

Hardy said the committee's suggestions will not replace the old regulations created by a 1986 task force.

"The old rules are basically good security measures so they will be maintained," Hardy said.

School officials recognize that the 1986 regulations have not been fully implemented and followed.

Increased school security, the use of hand held scanners, mandatory school uniforms and established dress codes, are at the top of the list of suggestions for safer schools.

Prince Hall Masons

Jim Dorsey steps down as Deputy Grand Master

By Helen Glover Cook
AFRO Staff Reporter

Jim Dorsey, the 80 year old Deputy Grand Master of the Prince Hall Fraternal Masonic Brotherhood has relinquished his command of the organization's number two post.

Masonic Grand Master Sam Daniels explained Dorsey's move as, "being part of a new agenda adopted by the Masons which would allow room for an infusion of younger blood into the higher ranks of office."

"At the annual meeting of the Masonic legislative body in August, Jim Dorsey declined the nomination to succeed himself, leaving a vacant position to be filled by a younger person," said Daniels.

The bylaws of the organization stipulate the order of succession as running from the lowest of the top four officers. This structure means that any open office would be filled by the next officer holding the position next in line.

Sam Daniels will continue to hold the office of Grand Master. Jim Dorsey's leaving the Deputy Grand Master's position will open that office for Benjamin Waters 73, a resident of Somerset County, Maryland and the previous Grand Junior Warden.

Salisbury resident, Marion Barkley, 58, will assume the office of Grand Senior Warden and the fourth highest office; Grand Junior Warden is now held by Leotha Hull, a man whose age Daniels describes as "being in his forties."

Dorsey commented on his vacating the Deputy Grand Master office by saying, "I will continue to offer my support and assistance to Grand Master Daniels and as long as I am physically able not let him down. He and I have been together for over 30 years. I can look upon this time with relief, I can now relax a little because I don't hold as much responsibility."

During the transitional period Dorsey plans to stay near the Masonic Legislative body, offering his assistance to the newly elected officers as they settle into their duties.

Maternity leave a Woman's focus

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

A study conducted by the Baltimore City Commission for Women has labelled city leave policies non-family-oriented, so the commission has made recommendations to fill the void, including recommending mandatory job reinstatements after maternity leaves.

"The results that were reached in our survey were remarkable and the conclusions were rather compelling," said Awilda R. Marquez, chairperson for the Baltimore City for Women. "But the recommendations we're making are neither demanding and they are certainly not radical."

The 25-member commission released its 39-page report Diverse Needs, Flexible Response: Family-Oriented Personnel Policies for Baltimore City Government to Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke Nov. 11 at a press conference.

The commission based its conclusions upon its review of the city's administrative manual, 10 city departments, 12 major U.S. cities and nine counties surrounding Baltimore City.

Marquez's group has suggested the city provide each of its 40,000 employees a leave policy handbook, establish 10-week maternity and three-day paternity leaves and

Rosemont Community gets apology from city officials

By Jill P. Carter
AFRO Staff Writer

There was no water in Rosemont for several hours, Monday night. It was not the first time. Many residents have turned on faucets only to have air run out over the past two months.

Ernestine Smith is retired and has lived in Rosemont for years. Two weeks ago, at 7 p.m., she was surprized to find her faucets ran dry.

An emergency number offered only a tape recorded message for assistance. The next day, the water that ran out was brown and muddy.

To boot, Ms. Smith , who walks with a cane and suffers from asthma,and who usually places her trash to be picked up on her back porch, found herself lugging 20 gallon garbage bags through her home. And, she was not alone.

Rosemont has been identified by the city as an area in need of water pipe rejuvena-
