The power of prayer!

Mother's prayer answered; her son is vindicated

By Helen Glover Cook
AFRO Staff Reporter

Prayer does work! This is the message Mrs. Doris Green joyously announced to Prayer Line radio hostess, the Rev. Vashti McKenzie, when she called the WEBB Radio station program to say that her son had been vindicated of all charges levied against him in the October 5, shooting of Edmondson High student Anita Moore.

The office of the State's Attorney recently notified Green's attorney; Shawn Alcarese by mail, of the decision to drop all charges against Joe Green. Mrs. Green wanted to express her happiness over Joe's vindication as well as let program listeners know that "Prayer does bring results."

The Prayer Line program format is divided between callers who ask for God's assistance through prayer intervention and others who call the Prayer Report Line to announce their joy at having their prayers answered.

Mrs. Green first contacted Rev. McKenzie for comfort and guidance when she was first confronted with the ordeal surrounding Joe's indictment.

Mrs. Green spoke about the way the press had broadcast her son's name throughout, but felt that none of the press would spend as much space or time in order to tell the story of Joe's vindication.

Mrs. Green was convinced of her son's innocence and knew that many of the

'Please find Gary's killer' victim's mother prays

By Robyn-Denise Yourse
DC AFRO City Editor

The homicide riddled streets of the District have robbed Marjorie Brown of her only son — just like a thief in the night, she says — in this, the season of giving.

"Holidays have been very hard," said Brown referring to a family Thanksgiving gathering a few weeks ago. "And I haven't even begun to think about Christmas. I just can't."

"The shock is over but the hurt will always be there."

In the hours when most are asleep, Marjorie Brown cannot. For her the nights seem endless, and represent a further barrier from her home in Bridgeport, Conn. — where she reared Gary and his younger sister — to the alley behind 5316 E Street SE that became his final destination.

Gary Owen Brown — an up and coming young entrepreneur in Baltimore, a husband and father — was gunned down Aug. 12, just 10 days before his 28th birthday.

While she says her grief at times is overbearing, the anguish is all too familiar to many mothers whose sons — primarily young, black men like Gary Brown — are victims of the city's grim homicide statistics this year.

To date, the District's murder rate at 348 thus far this year, has set a record high.

But Brown says her misery has been made all the more consuming because of "the

Feud surfaces in the Black Caucus

By Charles H. Brown
AFRO Staff Writer

In what has been called everything from a lie to an internal matter, the Maryland Legislative Black Caucus has set aside the business of the day to address the squabblings of two of its members.

According to reports, the last Caucus meeting, two weeks ago, was interrupted by a motion from delegate Howard (Pete) Rawlings (D-Balto.) to expel first term delegate Tony E. Fulton (D-Balto.).

Members of the Caucus group, which doesn't have expulsion proceedings, attribute the motion to a longstanding feud between the two delegates. A feud which no one takes credit for understanding.

"I try to stay out of these small things, said delegate Clarence Blount (D-Balto.) "We (the Caucus) are trying to push the whole world with a toothpick and we don't have time for all of these sideshows."

"It is totally separate from the Caucus," said delegate Curtis Anderson, Caucus chairman. "As far as the Legislative Black Caucus is

School No. 122 is open, but troubled

By Helen Glover Cook
AFRO Staff Reporter

Two years ago, parents and teachers aggressively lobbied for the doors of the Samuel Taylor Coleridge Elementary School (#122) to remain open.

Now they are wondering if it was wise to insist upon keeping a building open that often has no heat, and whose remaining facilities are either non existent or drastically deteriorating.

The first snow day of the 1988-89 winter season, many of the students were forced to sit in classrooms with their coats on because there was no heat.

The same faulty heating system was also the cause of the discomfort felt by other students who were forced to leave their classrooms because of the excessive heat.

It was impossible to reach a climatic balance in any of the school's rooms, some classrooms had no heat and others had too much.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge Elementary is a Title One school, which in layman's terms designates it as a school that has programs in place to enhance the low reading and math scores earned by many of its students on achievement tests.

The school also has a large percentage of students who come from homes whose incomes are below the poverty

DuBurns portrait shown at City Hall

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

Baltimore City's first black mayor, Clarence H. Du Burns, will be immortalized soon, joining 17 other city mayors, when a large oil portrait of him is hung in the Board of Estimates Room in City Hall.

"It will go up as soon as we get a space," said Hal Tall, who unveiled the $16,000 portrait at Wednesday's weekly Board of Estimates meeting.

Du Burns' portrait will probably hang beside his predecessor, Gov. William D. Schaefer said Tall. Mr. Tall is the city's director of finance.

"That will be a good spot for

Welfare Rights is bouncing back

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

The Baltimore Welfare Rights Organization after suffering a massive blow this year, when its founder Bobby Cheeks died, is attempting to bounce back with new and strong initiatives.

Irvin J. Conway, a neighborhood representative for the Baltimore Urban Services, who replaced Cheeks, held an open house Dec. 12 for the organization's newest building in East Baltimore.

Cheeks, a poor peoples' warrior, suffered a fatal heart attack during the summer.

"Were trying to keep the man alive," Conway told the small crowd who had gathered for the ceremony. He is the group's president.
