Black lawmakers are livid!

Del. Miller demoted because of gospel singing

By Hamil Harris
AFRO Staff Writer

Black lawmakers in Annapolis are fuming following a decision by House Speaker R. Clayton Mitchell to remove Del. Juanita D. Miller from a key committee.

She defied his wishes and allowed a student choir to sing during a Martin Luther King Birthday observance in the Maryland House of Delegates.

During the House commemoration of the slain civil rights leader, Central High School Chorus of Capital Heights, MD proudly backed up Del. Miller in a version of the gospel hit, "Give Us This Day."

The scene was compelling during the commemorative services for Dr. King as Del. Miller spoke and concluded her speech about Dr. King with a song.

As the determined delegate from Prince Georges County began to sing, "Give Us This Day," she was joined by the high school choir which was seated in the gallery of the House.

Ms. Miller said the choir began to sing "spontaneously" but the House Speaker saw this impromptu song fest as an act of defiance because he had earlier refused Dr. Miller's request to let the group sing for the celebration.

As a result, Miller was "flogged for being an uppity Black delegate," said Wayne Curry, a Black attorney and president of the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce.

Curry went on to say that the situation was like putting the slaves, "in the closet of the big house for being disobedient."

However, Del. Mitchell call-

Minority investors sue for $1 billion

By Helen Glover Cook
AFRO Staff Writer

Cable television's introduction to Baltimore in 1986, represented a new entertainment outlet for city families and an opportunity for minority investors to gain a piece of the economic pie — so they thought. United Cable of Denver, Colorado allegedly had other plans.

The minority shareholders who formed the UTI (United Teleprompter) corporation for the purpose of purchasing interest in United Cable were soon disillusioned.

In a court case that began Monday in Baltimore Circuit Court, UTI is suing the cable company for $1 billion, charging United Cable with denying them the opportunity to purchase the 25 percent of all city contracts mandated by city law.

Ms. Patrycia Duncan, a former Baltimore City Chief Court Clerk and community activist, was hired by United Cable of Denver, Colorado as the company's Director of Franchise Development.

Duncan thought that her job entailed developing franchise

Stevie is accused of stealing a song

LOS ANGELES — Musician Stevie Wonder was accused Wednesday of stealing part of the popular ballad "I Just Called To Say I Love You" from a songwriter and, through "deal-making and deception," claimed it as his own.

The ballad, used in the 1984 movie "The Woman In Red," won an Academy Award for best song in a motion picture and, the next year, became the object of a copyright infringement lawsuit against Wonder. The trial of the suit began Wednesday in U.S. District Court.

Wonder, who said he wrote the song specifically for the movie that starred Gene Wilder and the late Gilda Radner, has made millions from the song — profits that songwriter Lloyd Chiate is seeking as

Stouffer's Hotel workers upset over 'race' signs

By Joy M. Tyler
AFRO Staff Reporter

What started off as one company's attempt to ease race relations within its company structure ended up leaving a bitter taste in the mouths of the public.

The AFRO received several calls from people who said they were applying for jobs with the Pepsi-Cola Company at the Stouffer's Hotel in downtown Baltimore and were outraged to see what reminded them of remnants of the past — two offices displaying signs labeled, "White applicants" and the other "Black applicants."

What some thought was the resubmergence of the violation of their civil rights was actually a program the Pepsi company and Tucker and Associates, a minority consulting firm, has put together to ease the problems of racial tensions in the work place.

Rick Brady, area employee relations manager for the Chesapeake region of Pepsi-Cola, wanted to dispel any indications that the company was engaging in racist activities and explained the program has existed in the company for the past two years.

"Pepsi was not in the hotel for recruiting purposes at all, but to conduct its annual interviews with our employees for seminars on race relations," said Brady.

Civil Rights Act introduced

WASHINGTON — Legislation designed to overturn a series of Supreme Court decisions that limited the scope of civil rights laws in employment discrimination cases was introduced in the House and Senate.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., introduced the Civil Rights Act of 1990 Wednesday in both the Senate and House and promised quick action and prompt passage.

Kennedy said he was "hopeful of gaining the president's support."

AFRO ASKS: How should Black History Month be celebrated?

James Donovan, 23, sales: "There should be something more catchy done instead of the traditional things. Give a play on Black leaders who represent different leaders and even some of the more controversial figures such as Jessie Jackson and Rev. Farrakhan."

Angela Williams, 32, support enforcement: "We need to better inform our youth of the history of Blacks that served to make life better for us. The youth don't know the value of life anymore and they seem to have gone backwards."

Evelyn Jackson, 35, collections coordinator: "Black history month shouldn't just be one month; those things should be taught all year long. Our history here has changed over the years and our young people are not aware of what has happened."
